RFC Creates $211,000,000 Unit as Home Building Aid

'National Mortgage Association' Intended as 'Demonstration.'

Roosevelt Orders Agency Founded

Fleming, Head of Riggs Bank, Is Named to Board of Directors.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Acting under directions of the President, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation yesterday established the "National Mortgage Association of Washington" with a paid in capital stock of $10,00,000 and a paid in surplus of $1,000,000.

The association—which can borrow up to $211,000,000—was set up under the provisions of the Federal Housing Administration, as recently amended. It is intended to be a demonstration project of the part which such financial institutions can play in reviving a healthy recovery in housing construction, especially on a large-scale basis.

Directors Named.

This is the first national mortgage association to be organized, although their establishment was authorized when the FHA legislation was enacted in 1934. Congress, however, recently liberalized the provisions under which such institutions could function.

Those named as the directors of the RFC National Mortgage Association were C. B. Henderson and Emil Schram, RFC directors; Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank; Claude E. Hamilton, jr., RFC general counsel and W. C. Costello, assistant to Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the RFC.

In announcing organization of the association, Jones asserted that "the President has also requested that we hold in reserve an additional $40,000,000 for the capitalization of other national mortgage associations, or for increasing the capital stock of the National Mortgage Association of Washington."

Co-operation Sought.

Jones said that the scope of the organization—that is, whether it would operate on a national scale—would be determined by its board of directors. The association will use the headquarters of the RFC and will function through the organization of that agency.

"It is hoped," Jones asserted, "that builders, material and supply people, and workmen in the building trades, will co-operate generally in a building program that will produce homes at the lowest possible cost to prospective home owners and to those who may desire to build private or multiple dwellings for rent or sale.

"A real building program will increase employment and stimulate business more, perhaps, than any other one thing that can be done."

May Borrow $200,000,000.

Under the terms of the FHA legislation, the new mortgage association may issue debentures, for sale in the public money market, up to 20 times its paid-in capital stock or for a total of $200,000,000. Thus the association will have a lending capacity of $211,000,000.

Jones said that the association would commence doing business on its capital and that debentures for additional funds would not be issued until the need for such money arose. Creation of the association is the Administration's answer to those who have contended that private enterprise cannot get money for large-scale housing projects costing in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 or more.

The mortgage association will purchase and sell FHA-insured first mortgages securing advances on

Magistrate Bill Resurrected to Aid D.C. Courts

Palmisano to Seek House Action on Proposal to Speed up Cases.

Asserting that the magistrate system would give policemen more time for patrol duty by relieving them of tedious waiting periods in court, Palmisano said it would prove convenient to motorists as well.

The plan, which was developed by former Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman, was approved by the House District Committee two years ago. It was reported to the House, but some opposition developed and it was never brought to a vote.

Four magisterial districts would be established in as many centrally located precincts by the bill, and informal court would be conducted morning and night without benefit of prosecutor.

Presumably many minor cases, such as trivial traffic charges, could be handled at the convenience of police and defendants.

Meanwhile, public hearings on the new District tax bill were scheduled by Chairman Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, to begin at 10 a. m. Monday.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, reiterated the belief that the District could reduce its threatened new taxes by diverting money from the highway funds to general revenue expenses.

Gang Threatens To Kill Witness At O'Brien Trial

Gangland threatened to "rub out" Burt J. Watson, youthful filling station operator, for his testimony that Joseph F. O'Brien had been given $3,500 to "keep quiet" about the shooting which crippled him for life, it was learned yesterday. A detective has been assigned to guard him.

Watson, who was a witness at the perjury trial of O'Brien, was visited by emissaries of the underworld, police understood. One of them vowed he would "take care" of Watson for "wagging his tongue," detectives learned.

Immediately after the police had been informed of the affair, they took into custody a man known to Watson. After questioning him they informed him that if the filling station operator was molested further the man under suspicion would be locked up and "given the limit" for interfering with a United States witness.

Three Guilty of Perjury.

Watson crossed the path of gangland last Monday, when O'Brien was found guilty of perjury. O'Brien had hobbled into court to hear the decision, which was handed down only a few weeks after William R. (County) Carpenter and Harry (Spike) Behrle had been found guilty of similar charges.

Watson's testimony caused a sensation when he revealed he knew O'Brien had gotten the $3,500 to "keep quiet," from Emmett Warring, brother of Charles (Rags) Warring, leader of the "Foggy Bottom" gang. Rags was charged with wounding O'Brien in an underworld feud.

Throughout the trial of the Warring gang, O'Brien had "forgotten to remember" and as a result was indicted for perjury.

Relief Sped As Idle Grow By 3,000,000

Passage Anticipated for Added $250,000,000 Asked by President.

More Increases, Budget Upsets Feared if Job Losses Continue.

Impressed by President Roosevelt's contention that the ranks of the jobless had grown by approximately 3,000,000 in the last three months, Congressional leaders yesterday prepared to speed action on an enlargement of the Federal relief fund by $250,000,000 for the remainder of this fiscal year.

The President in a letter to Speaker William B. Bankhead asked that this additional sum be appropriated as necessary to take care of destitution until July 1. This sum would augment approximately $497,000,000 remaining unspent for the regular relief appropriation for the 12 months ending next June 30.

The President contended the funds on hand would permit relief employment of only 1,700,000 persons monthly. The number on the Works Progress Administration rolls now, he said, is 1,950,000. Thus the funds now available, Mr. Roosevelt said, cannot cope with the recent increase in unemployment. Unless an additional appropriation is made, he asserted, a sharp reduction in the number on relief will have to be made in the near future.

Passage Expected.

"This estimate of $250,000,000 will permit the continued employment for the next five months of the number now on such rolls, and will provide a reasonable measure of relief for those who have recently become unemployed and are in need," the President told the Speaker.

Although approval of the additional $250,000,000 relief appropriation is anticipated, its submission is expected to arouse further attacks on the Administration's relief policies on the ground that it has failed to shift the burden back to the local communities.

The President's request for additional relief funds, expected now for several weeks, further complicates his efforts to bring the Federal budget into balance. Expenditure of this additional sum will bring the estimated net deficit for this fiscal year to approximately $1,338,000,000, exclusive of debt retirement, compared with $2,707,400,000 in the last fiscal year.

More Increases Feared.

Granting of the President's request would bring the figure for this year's relief appropriations, including the Civilian Conservation Corps, to $2,009,000,000, compared with $2,466,800,000 expended for the same purposes in the last fiscal year. The budget called for appropriations to-

President's Chicago Talk on Quarantine Held 'Irresponsible.'

By the United Press.

Senator Hiram W. Johnson (Republican), California, charged on the Senate floor yesterday that President Roosevelt was "irresponsible" in his Chicago speech proposing quarantine of aggressor nations, and declared he would demand further explanation of United States foreign policy.

The Californian, who introduced a resolution Tuesday which resulted in Secretary of State Cordell Hull sending a letter to Congress denying the United States has any alliances or agreements with foreign powers, said he felt both "the Secretary of State and I were taken for a ride the other day."

"I have asked before and I am going to ask again what our foreign policy is and what it means and where it is leading," Johnson cried.

"Policy of Threat."

His attack came after Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, told the House Naval Affairs Committee that the President, in his quarantine speech, "embarked upon a policy of threat and bluff which can end only in humiliation or war."

At the same time Representative Ralph O. Brewster (Republican), of Maine, demanded that Arthur Krock, New York Times correspondent, be subpenaed to reveal the source of his dispatch saying he had been "expertly informed" that a tacit agreement exists between the United States and Great Britain. The committee will decide today whether to summon him.

Johnson's onslaught was precipitated by Sen. J. Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, who criticized what he described as "a concerted effort by so-called educators" to discredit the administration's foreign policy.

The Californian recalled Hull's statement of Wednesday that the world has the jitters because too many people are talking and know not what they are talking about, and said:

"There has been no irresponsible statements on foreign policy that I know of except the one in which the Chief of our nation talked of a quarantine of certain nations."

He said he presented the resolution which drew Hull's denial "because I don't want war. I don't want this country to parallel the situation of 1918 in which we were drawn into the war and which we are still paying for.

"I am for a big Navy, but I am not in favor of any alliance or any understanding, because that means war and that means we will reap the same consequences as in 1918.

"I'll Ask Again."

"I have asked before and I am going to ask again what our foreign policy is and what it means and where it is leading.

Girl Says Drugs Made Murder and Theft Seem Right

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 10.—Confessing the slaying of a bus driver, Mrs. Ethel "Bunny" Sohl, 20-year-old daughter of a Newark policeman, testified today that smoking marihuana cigarets made it "seem right" to steal autos and commit holdups.

On trial with Genevieve Owens, 18, for killing William Barhorst, Mrs. Sohl said the loot of three holdups—$67.10 in all—went for "good times, mostly for the movies."

"Bunny," slim but athletic—she once captained a girls' basketball team—said she knew "the next day" stealing was wrong and "I don't know why I didn't make restitution."

Rumor-Mongering Rife in Germany

Reports of Executions and Street Rioting Officially Denied.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 10.—Berlin today witnessed its worst day of rumor-mongering since the blood purge of June 30, 1934.

As practically all the rumors originated outside the Reich, however, the German government believes that in their final analysis they may be traced to one source, or a group of sources acting in concert.

The desire of certain of Germany's neighbors quickly to push rearmament programs through their parliaments was said to furnish the logical clew.

Revolt Reports Denied.

There was an official denial of reports of army revolts in East Prussian garrison towns, street fighting in Berlin, execution of sixteen generals and the closing of German frontiers.

Reports from Berchtesgaden, Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's Bavarian retreat, tonight said he was recovering more quickly than at first thought from the strain of the past few weeks. He expected to begin work Monday on his February 20 speech to the Reichstag.

Advices said he planned to return to Berlin by February 17 and open the annual automobile show the next day, and that after the Reichstag session he would take a rest of about three weeks.

Situation in Epitome.

Many hours of probing by the Berlin staff of the Associated Press into every source considered reliable, both official and private, led to the following pictures of the German situation:

There have been no street fights or any other untoward incidents in Berlin.

The story that former Crown Prince Wilhelm had secretly fled Germany without passports is a myth. It was explained his valet merely forgot the passports of Wilhelm and his retinue for their journey through Switzerland and Italy on a winter sports excursion to the South Tyrol.

Unless the army acts contrary to all tradition—the tradition taken over from the imperial regime, continued throughout the republic and now inherited by the Third Reich—it will obey its commander-in-chief and accept the purge.

Leaves Canceled.

Leaves of a considerable number of army officers have been canceled, but in view of the magnitude of the shake up last Friday, when Hitler assumed direct command of all Germany's armed forces, it was natural for all officers to be available to fit into the new order at a moment's notice.

Changes in the foreign office and the economics ministry, as well as certain departments of the Nazi Party, are bound to take

Citizens Voice Joy At Ouster of Goga

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bucharest (Friday), Feb. 11.—A royal military dictatorship was established today in Rumania, following collapse of the anti-Semitic cabinet of Premier Octavian Goga and formation of a new government by Dr. Miron Cristea, patriarch of the Rumanian Orthodox Church.

King Carol II, declaring a state of siege existed throughout the country, officially placed the civil administration of the nation under the army.

Dr. Christea became virtual dictator of Rumania. The 68-year-old church head, who at first refused King Carol's plea to take over the government, formed a cabinet of Center and Liberal orientation which will rule without parliament.

Elections Canceled.

Special parliamentary elections, scheduled for March 2, were canceled and all party activities were suspended temporarily. The constitution was placed in abeyance.

Pending formulation of a new constitution, the government will be ruled by decree. King Carol announced he was determined to eliminate politics from the country.

There were indications the king planned to take a more active part in administrative affairs of the nation.

The collapse of Goga's government, brought on by his pro-Fascist program and an economic recession during his six weeks in office, occasioned little regret in Rumania.

After presenting his resignation to Carol at the palace yesterday, Goga harangued his ministers with the theme "the Jews have defeated me." He declined the offer of a post in the new cabinet, saying he wanted to travel abroad.

Securities Have Fallen.

Economics and anti-Semitism were considered reasons of equal importance for the Goga downfall. Since his anti-Semitic regime took office December 28, 1937, stock exchange securities have fallen as much as 20 per cent.

At the same time his anti-Jewish measures have resulted in widespread opposition not only in Rumania but throughout Europe.

Among the measures he instituted was one revoking the voting rights of Jewish citizens and requiring them to establish their right to citizenship before they could vote in the March 2 elections. The result of the measure would have been to prevent the majority of Rumania's Jews from voting, since it would have been practically impossible for them to establish their citizenship rights in the time permitted.

Other decrees projected by Goga would have resulted in expulsion of a large percentage of the Jews who found refuge in Rumania after the World War.

Ties With Paris Strained.

Judges Who Depend on Parole System Called Unfit by Boyd

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Feb. 10.—Parole Commissioner J. Cookman Boyd today asserted magistrates or judges who imposed severe sentences "with the idea that the parole office will rectify their severity . . . are not fit to be judicial officers."

Boyd said he was referring specifically to the case of a colored prisoner he ordered paroled yesterday, but was directing his remarks generally to the State's entire judiciary.

The prisoner freed was Charles E. Bright, of Montgomery County, sentenced to 18 months in jail by Magistrate Harold Smith, of Rockville. Boyd said Bright was convicted of receiving a stolen chicken the man claimed to have bought from another.

In a letter to Boyd regarding Bright's parole plea, Magistrate Smith wrote.

"* * * in sentencing this man, I took into consideration that he would be entitled to parole after serving part of his sentence. I have no objection to his being granted a parole."

Taking exception to this position, Boyd declared:

"I have no sympathy with trial officers, whether they be magistrates or judges of the court, who impose severe sentences with the idea that the parole office will rectify their severity.

"I want to emphasize that statement, and say that it is not fair to the parole office, it isn't fair to the prisoner, and it isn't fair to the people of this State for any judge to impose sentence that he thinks is not right, but states openly that he is imposing it with the expectation that the parole office will correct his mistake.

"In my opinion, men like that are not fit to be judicial officers."

Switchboard Svengalis Start Cash Rolling For Fraudulent Charity Drives in District

By Hedley W. Donovan.

This is the second of a series of articles exposing the charity racket operating in the District.

At the nerve-center of the fake charity business sits the solicitor. His golden voice starts the money rolling.

Assigned a block of upper-bracket homes, he consults the "tap list" of potential donors. Mrs. R., he reads, "will fall for anything," while Mr. D. "has a heart that bleeds for hungry children."

Miss T. shows partiality for schemes to aid the aged, but the appeal must be flavored with "big names."

That's all right, too, because the solicitor knows his Washington "Who's Who" and "Social Register" backward and forward. His fluent use of prominent names, with or without their owners' permission, causes a pleasant flutter at the other end of the line.

Virtuoso of the switchboard, the solicitor judges the prospect and gears his appeal. His services generally are valued at 25 to 35 per cent of receipts.

Standard compensation for the collector, who follows up the solicitor's phone call before the contributor has a change of heart, is 10 cents on the dollar.

Bad blood is traditional between collector and solicitor—solicitor and operator. Collector and solicitor can combine to defraud the operator of cash they have gathered in.

The collector can return to the office with a smaller contribution than the solicitor had been promised by telephone.

The aggrieved party cannot risk

Jackson Denies Wanting Red or Socialist Rule

Tells Senators He Does Not Feel Called to 'Put Over a Program.'

Disavowing any desire to change the American form of Government, Robert H. Jackson, nominated by the President for Solicitor General, told a Senate Judiciary sub-committee yesterday he neither believes in the Russian system nor the socialism of Norman Thomas.

"I have no desire to change the Government of the United States in any way," Jackson told the sub-committee. "I am interested only that the Government function in the way the people want it to function."

Jackson, who said he did not feel called to "put over a program," was closely questioned by Senator Warren R. Austin (Republican), of Vermont. Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, who accused Jackson of "propagandizing" while holding office, will question Jackson today.

Denies Interpretations.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings' youthful assistant, who was appointed by the President to the office just vacated by Associate Justice Stanley Reed, was examined on assertions made in his recent anti-monopoly speeches and on his testimony last year in behalf of the President's discarded court plan. He made a series of denials of interpretations placed on these utterances.

The Assistant Attorney General, whose name has been mentioned as a possible Democratic nominee for the Presidency in 1940, was appearing before a sub-committee of the same Senate group that gave the death blow to the President's court plan, of which he was an ardent supporter.

Approval Seems Sure.

But there appeared little doubt the sub-committee would approve his nomination, once questioning was over.

At one point, King asked Jackson if his idea of democracy was "the type Stalin has in Russia, in which he has all of the people with him."

"I never conceived of the Russian system as a democracy in any sense," the witnes replied.

King asked if he favored discarding the Federal system of checks and balances.

"Except trusts?" put in Austin.

"Well, I think some of them should be destroyed," said Jackson.

Says Trusts Need Army.

With reference to his Supreme Court views, he declared his belief that no institution "which persistently defies the will of the people" can be maintained except by use of an army.

Austin had cited the Assistant Attorney General's protests before Senate hearings last year against what he called the "implacable" opposition of the Supreme Court to New Deal policies. Austin asked if he still felt that opposition existed. Jackson replied that he did not because "there has been a change."

"I said certain members of the court had openly announced that certain processes of the New Deal offended their convictions," said Jackson. "The court has changed since then. Decisions have changed. The whole judicial situation is changed."

Later Jackson said that "in all the conflicts between the legislative branch and the courts, ultimately the people have settled on the policy advocated by the legislative branch."

Wouldn't Use Coercion.

Austin asked if it was his belief that "force and coercion" should be used if the Supreme Court, "did not obey the will of the people." Jackson replied he had "never advocated the use of force and coercion and I don't think the appointment of an additional justice amounts to that."

It was when Austin asked if he had left a "lucrative" law practice for the Washington office with the idea that something was wrong with the Government that would have to be changed to avoid business "aggression" that Jackson denied any desire to change the American system.

He said it was his view that the Supreme Court and every other Government institution must ultimately "express the opinion and interest of the people of the country."

Austin asked if he thought that "if the policies of Government are in conflict with the Constitution the Constitution should give way."

Constitution Must Stand.

"No, sir," said Jackson, "you misinterpret my views. I don't advocate that the Constitution should give way.

"Take the minimum wage decision. There the court reversed itself after a lapse of some 15 years and without any intervening legislation by Congress on that subject. There the court wasn't ruling on the minimum wage. There's nothing in the Constitution about the minimum wage.

"The court had to rule on what Congress said about the minimum wage, and it ought to take into consideration the same set of facts Congress considered. Otherwise, you have one branch of government functioning in one era of thought, and another branch in another era of thought."

Austin inquired if Jackson thought the court should always yield to Congress and the people, and Jackson replied that he didn't "want any more decisions repealed the way the Dred Scott decision was repealed." He said he was not urging abolition of the power of judicial review.

Disagrees With Socialist.

Once Senator King interposed his opinion "that Norman Thomas couldn't have made stronger attacks on our form of government than you have made in some of your speeches.

"I don't think anyone disagrees more with Norman Thomas than I do, Senator," Jackson replied, "but you have got to find imperfections before you can improve."

Jackson denied to the sub-committee that he favored "socking the taxpayer." He denied "all the burden" of proving a tax return was correct was placed on the taxpayer while he was connected with the Internal Revenue Bureau. He said he was "not and would not be a party" to any action by the bureau arbitrarily assessing a taxpayer in order to force settlement of a tax controversy.

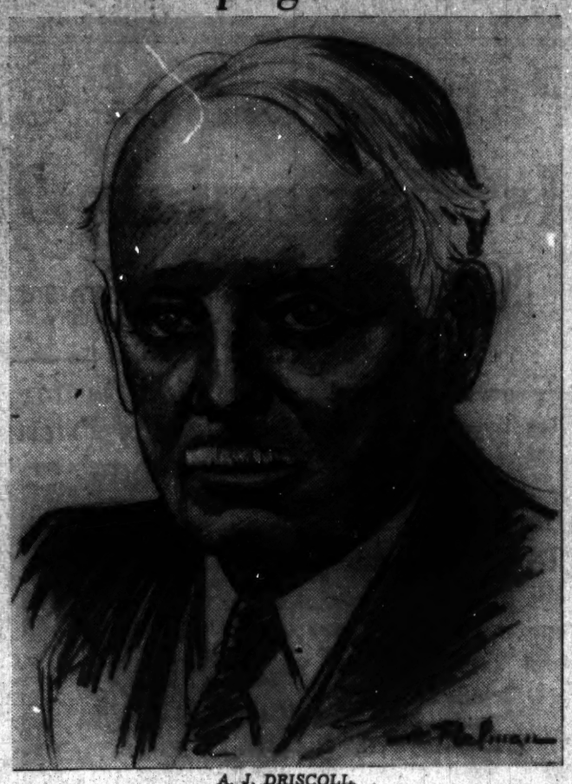
A. J. Driscoll Has Led Civic Unit In Its Campaigns for 23 Years



A. J. DRISCOLL.

Perennial President of Mid City Association First Headed Drive Against Sunning Street Cars on M Street.

By Christine Sadler

For 23 years the Mid City Citizens Association has been waging civic battles, and on 23 different occasions A. J. Driscoll has been elected its president.

The association was the "natural outgrowth of indignation of citizes at the move to run street car tracks up M street, which was much too narrow for such purposes," Driscoll says.

When that first fight was won and the car tracks idea abandoned, a celebration was held.

"We thought we had done pretty well; so we met to consider a permanent organization. Then we started out on a very active canvass of civic needs of our area. Our major need, it was determined was one of paving. When it all was done, we had another celebration and the members flocked in."

Two principal problems of the group within recent years have been those of street widening and rezoning.

At the present time, two committees of the association are most active. One was appointed to work with the Alley Dwelling Authority to see whether funds could be secured to clear some alleys in the midcity territory.

The other committee is working to see whether a boys' and girls' club cannot be obtained for the vicinity.

Driscoll became president of the first community center in the District, which was opened at Grover Cleveland School, with Miss Margaret Wilson as honorary vice president. He sees clubs for boys and girls as but an extension of this community viewpoint.

Driscoll was born in Maryland, but spent his boyhood in Pennsylvania. He has lived in Washington approximately 40 years. For many years he was clerk in charge of the railway mail service for the Postoffice Department. For the past six years, he has been citizens association editor of the Washington Times.

He is a delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations and is widely known as a man who has an excellent grasp of the civic needs and wishes of the city. He is a member of the Washington Board of Trade and chairman of its committee on American ideals.

His association is in favor of local suffrage for the District and has taken an active part in movements to "speed the idea along."

He has a wife and two married daughters, and lives at 2651 Woodley road northwest, the encroachment of business having been responsible for his moving outside the mid city area.

On Monday—George J. Cleary, president of Trinidad Citizens Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Pittman Brands Ickes Impudent In Burlew Quiz

By the Associated Press.

Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, accused Secretary Ickes yesterday of attempting to direct the Senate Public Lands Committee's investigation of the nomination of Ebert K. Burlew to be First Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

"I resent it," he told the committee, referring to a note Ickes sent the committee last week expressing anxiousness to get his office staff established.

"I think it's impertinent on the part of the Secretary of the Interior," said Pittman, "to attempt to direct the investigations of any committee of the United States Senate, particularly when the investigation of a nominee is involved. I don't think any other member of the Cabinet would assume such impudence."

Pittman's reference to Ickes followed his motion for a continuance of the hearing on the Burlew nomination to February 25.

The Nevadan said he wanted to subpena Thomas G. Kelliher, a former Interior Department investigator, to testify about evidence involving a Texas "hot oil" case, and that he also needed time to obtain Department of Justice records and reports in the case.

The committee took no action, postponing a decision until today pending an effort to have Kelliher here tomorrow. He was believed to be in Texas.

Pittman said he had enough evidence to support his contention that Burlew was unqualified for the first assistant secretaryship to occupy the committee's attention for six months, but expected to conclude with Kelliher.

3 States Report Recreation Needs

Virginia, Mississippi and Illinois have completed tentative reports on recreational needs, Director Arno B. Cammerer of the National Park Service reported yesterday to Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes.

In Virginia, many counties which were formerly purely agricultural, are becoming the sites of mechanized industries, with concomitant needs for planned recreation, the report revealed.

The National Park Service collaborated with the Virginia Planning Board and the Virginia Commission on Conservation and Development in the report.

Puerto Rico Ends Six-Week Strike

By the Associated Press.

Dr. Ernest Gruening, chief of the Territories Division, said the six-week strike of dock workers in Puerto Rico ended at 1 p. m. yesterday. The workmen agreed to return to their jobs while the matter is being arbitrated.

Labor Conciliator J. L. Bernard reported the shipping lines had accepted the arbitration proposal and workers would receive 40 cents an hour—an 8-cent increase.

Senate Refuses To Vote Inquiry On Labor Board

Burke Says He'll Conduct Own Quiz as Judiciary Body Vetoes Plan.

By Robert C. Albright.

Proposed sweeping investigation of the National Labor Relations Board for alleged "partiality" and promotion of labor strife yesterday was vetoed by a Senate Judiciary sub-committee, which recommended "indefinite postponement."

Later Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, author of the investigation resolution, declared "an investigation at this time is imperative, and if a Senate committee won't make it, I'll conduct one myself."

Burke voted with four other members of the sub-committee against his own resolution for an immediate inquiry by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

"It was a foregone conclusion the Judiciary committee would not make the investigation, so I voted with the others," said the Nebraskan.

"But I'm going right ahead, alone if I have to. There is plenty of evidence and I intend to assemble it. I shall attend some labor board hearings, and call certain matters to the attention of the Senate. Later, I will have some recommendations for amending the national labor relations act."

Five members of the seven-man Judiciary sub-committee were present when the shelving vote was ordered. Senator M. M. Logan, of Kentucky, and Senator Tom Connally, of Texas (Democrats), both of whom had indicated they favored an inquiry, did not attend.

The sub-committee's action was in the form of a report to the full Judiciary Committee recommending the Burke resolution be reported to the Senate, but action on it be indefinitely postponed.

Strife Fostered, Burke Says.

Recently Burke appeared before the sub-committee for two days, charging the board had created "more strife, more unrest, more uncertainty and more misunderstanding in the relationships between employers and employes" than ever previously existed. He charged the board favored one type of labor union over another, made "rank discrimination" in the issuance of subpenas and violated rights of free speech and free press.

J. Warren Madden, chairman of the board, later took the stand to deny the Burke charges and to assert the board is attempting impartially to carry out the provisions of the act. A majority of the sub-committee lined up behind Madden, after the American Federation of Labor, former bitter critic of the board, unexpectedly opposed a Senate inquiry.

Thomas Opposed Inquiry.

A move to transfer the investigation to the Senate Labor Committee was defeated when Senator Elbert Thomas, of Utah, chairman of that group, opposed an inquiry on the ground it would hamper the present work of the board. Thomas suggested the ac.. be permitted to function as it is until a wider body of evidence has been gathered on which to base improvements.

Meanwhile, the board yesterday certified both American Federation of Labor and Committee for Industrial Organization unions as representatives of workers in the Allis Chalmers Manufacturing Co.'s plant at West Allis Wis.

Viewed as a test of Labor Board policies in the existing conflict between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. for recognition of their unions, the board's action was received with dissatisfaction by both groups.

Skilled Groups Split Up.

The C. I. O.-affiliated United Automobile Workers, which sought to represent all employes, was certified as representing only production employes. Two A. F. of L. affiliates the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers—were certified as representing maintenance electrical workers and firemen. The Independent Engineers and Draftsmen's Association was chosen over C. I. O. to represent the draftsmen.

Certification followed elections held in the various departments of the plant.

Burke said last night the board's certification of both types of unions in this case convinced him his charges have "done some good."

A report made public by the board yesterday said 489 threatened strikes involving 125,243 workers had been averted in the last 27 months, while 957 others had been settled. Through its activities, 165,278 workers were reinstated after strikes or lock-outs, the board stated.

The report said the board handled 11,179 cases involving 2,997,826 workers. Of 7,760 of these cases acted on by January 1, 4,440 were closed by agreement of both parties, 1,162 were dismissed and 1,751 cases were withdrawn.

William A. White Serenaded at 70 Despite Modesty

Emporia, Kans., Feb. 10 (AP).—William Allen White tried his best to take his seventieth birthday in stride today but the home town wouldn't let him.

Arriving at his Emporia Gazette office, he spotted a huge birthday cake. He waved it off his cluttered desk so he could dictate his daily editorial.

Then bedlam broke loose outside. Going to the door, White was greeted by 1,000 citizens and a 40-piece band joining in a noisy serenade.

So he doffed his hat and decided that being seventy for the first time has its added responsibilities. Through his newspaper, he thanked Emporia because it "has put up with me" and the State of Kansas because it "endured me."

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Feb. 10.—With Senator Herring of Iowa now preparing a bill on stricter control of radio broadcasts, a Nation-wide survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion shows that Government censorship of programs is opposed by a majority of radio owners.

GEORGE GALLUP.

A movement toward Federal censorship was started among Congressmen after the National Broadcasting Co. was severely criticized by the Federal Communications Commission last month for permitting a broadcast by Mae West which the commission thought "vulgar."

The Institute survey found that 89 per cent of radio owners feel Government censorship of programs would be harmful, while 41 per cent think it would do good. Applied against the 24,500,000 estimated radio owners, the poll indicates that 14,500,000 prefer to have no Federal censorship while 10,000,000 favor it.

The question put to a representative cross-section of radio owners in the survey was: "Do you think Government censorship of the radio would do harm or good?"

Majority See No Vulgarity.

The commission put teeth into its rebuke of the National Broadcasting Co. by warning that the Mae West affair would be taken into consideration when licenses of the stations broadcasting the program come up for renewal. "Of all means of entertainment," declared the commission's chairman, Frank R. McNinch, in a press interview, "I believe radio must have the highest standards."

To determine whether radio listeners are satisfied with the moral standards of radio programs, the Institute survey asked: "During the past year have you heard any broadcast that has offended you by its vulgarity?"

An overwhelming majority replied in the negative. Only 15 per cent said they had been offended, while 85 per cent said they had not.

Why Censorship Is Opposed.

At present, radio broadcasters operate under a system of self-imposed censorship, with each station or chain exercising editorial veto power over programs submitted to them. The Federal Communications Commission, while it controls station licenses, does not attempt to censor programs in advance of broadcast.

Apparently satisfied with the present system, the majority of voters in the survey give several reasons for opposing Federal control over broadcasts. The main objection, judging by comments from voters, is that direct Federal censorship would be a dictatorial usurpation of power which would soon lead to censorship of other media besides radio.

Impairment of free speech is given as another reason. "Censorship would be used as a political expedient," declared one voter. "Whichever party was in power would choke off the opposition party for its own advantage."

Many others declared that both public opinion and the broadcasting companies themselves were now exercising a sufficiently effective censorship.

Those who, on the other hand, favor greater control by the Federal Government declare that better programs might result. "It would eliminate misleading advertising," said one typical voter. Vulgarity of programs was not mentioned as a leading reason by those who favor censorship.

Vote By Income Groups.

An analysis of the vote by income groups shows that Federal censorship is particularly opposed by radio owners in the upper levels, whereas those of below average income are divided about evenly. In the average and above average group, 64 per cent say censorship would do harm, and 36 per cent say it would do good. Among radio owners of below average income the vote is 51 per cent against censorship, 49 per cent in favor.

On Capitol Hill

Wage-Hour Bill to Be Reported in March, Mrs. Norton Says After Talk With President.

The House Labor Committee should report out a wage-hour bill "the latter part of March," Chairman Mary Norton (Democrat), New Jersey, said yesterday after a conference with President Roosevelt. Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), Georgia, and C. V. McLaughlin, Assistant Secretary of Labor also attended the meeting.

"We have no positive plans for revising or seeking action on the measure as yet," said Mrs. Norton, "but we think we'll be able to get it to the floor the latter part of March or the first part of April. And we expect to pass the bill at this session."

Senate attaches figured out yesterday that the anti-lynching bill filibuster had now occupied 26 days—127 hours in all—not counting interruptions for other business. Its a long filibuster but doesn't even approach as yet the record set by the filibuster over the silver purchase bill of 1893. That one, the longest on record, lasted from August 29 to October 31.

The sending of liquor samples through the mail would be permitted by legislation recommended yesterday by the House Postoffice Committee. Members of the committee said foreign countries could send samples into this country under international postal regulations, although American dealers are prohibited from sending their samples out of the country or from State to State. Mailing samples into dry States would be prohibited by the proposed law.

James R. Cromwell, husband of the former Doris Duke, tobacco fortune heiress, testified yesterday before the House Banking Committee. He proposed the Federal Reserve Board be empowered to back a system of subsidized loans and said this plan would answer the demands of small businessmen for more and easier credit.

Cromwell's appearance was at a hearing on a bill offered by Representative Goldsborough (Democrat), Maryland, to stabilize the economic system. The bill would arrange for retail sales discounts financed by $10,000,000,000 of currency which would circulate exclusively among banks.

* * * *

A national flood control program will be prepared immediately by the House Flood Control Committee without waiting for a recommendation from President Roosevelt, it was announced yesterday by Chairman Whittington (Democrat) Mississippi. He said the President, in asking the committee last year to hold up an $800,000,000 program, promised to submit a comprehensive plan after January 1.

"We should take steps to determine where that report is," Whittington told his committee members. He said hearings would begin in 30 days and that there had been a "general demand" for quick action.

A group of Kentucky and Tennessee Representatives will try today to remove Agriculture Department objections to a $1,500,000 sale of dark fired tobacco to Russia. The two co-operatives, the Eastern and Western Dark Fired Tobacco Growers Associations in Kentucky and Tennessee, who own the tobacco, owe the Commodity Credit Corporation and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation $5,000,000.

Injuries Fatal To D. C.'s 15th Traffic Victim

One Held for Grand Jury, One Exonerated in Other Deaths.

The District's fifteenth traffic fatality was registered yesterday in the death of James Price, 88, injured January 9 in a streetcar-automobile accident, as a coroner's jury held one driver on a traffic death for the grand jury and exonerated a second, holding the fatality was not the result of the accident under consideration.

Price, who lived at 147 Tennessee avenue northeast, was injured when the car in which he was a passenger collided with a streetcar at Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Police say William W. Winston, colored, 32, of 1432 C street southeast, was the driver of the car, and that Lenton L. Sauls, 27, 1605 Eames place northeast was the motorman.

Although believed not seriously injured, Price was admitted to Gallinger Hospital. He died there yesterday after treatment for a fractured pelvis and arterio sclerosis.

The coroner's jury yesterday ruled that the death of John Wade, 18, 3815 Chesapeake street northwest, on Tuesday was not due to a traffic accident five weeks earlier. First reports attributed his death to an infected mouth, believed the result of bruises in an accident New Year's morning.

John E. McHugh, 39, 1813 East Capitol street, was held for the grand jury in a second case considered by the coroner's jury. McHugh is alleged to have been the driver of a car that fatally injured Mattie Blockwell, colored, 56, 1317 Q street northwest, at Fourteenth and Q streets northwest Tuesday night.

McHugh did not take the stand, but police testified that his automobile struck a white button marking a safety zone, and dragged the woman's body on the fender for 96 feet before stopping.

Measurements showed 73 feet were in the safety zone and 23 were between the zone and the intersection.

Witnesses also testified that there were no other automobiles in the vicinity to force his automobile into the safety zone.

McHugh was represented by Representative Arthur D. Healey (Democrat), of Massachusetts.

Courts to Go on Air.

The board of Police Court judges yesterday reversed its earlier decision to prohibit radio broadcasts from Traffic Court and agreed to permit an experimental series of programs beginning at 10:45 a. m. tomorrow.

Kenneth H. Berkeley, general manager of the National Broadcasting Co., said the traffic court broadcasts will be heard over Station WMAL.

Purpose of the programs, it was explained, is to impress Washington motorists with the need for careful driving.

A mass meeting of motorists and pedestrians will be held at 8 p. m. tonight in the Interior Department auditorium under the auspices of the traffic subcommittee of the House District Committee.

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, who is chairman of the subcommittee, said that everyone interested in reducing the toll of highway accidents will be welcome.

Danville Woman Admits 3 Nuptials Without Divorce

Danville, Va., Feb. 10 (AP).—Mrs. Mildred Copeland Glover, comely 1-year-old woman who told police that she had been married four times, never divorced and that three of her husbands were still living, was ordered held by Magistrate C. K. Carter for grand jury action on charges of bigamy.

Mrs. Glover said she first was married, at the age of 16, to Thomas Cuneff, who since has died. She then married James Albert Glover and then Howard Jones, both of Danville, but never lived with Jones, she said.

Junius H. Phillips, also of Danville, was husband number 4 and "the man I really love," Mrs. Glover said.

The Danville Bee quoted her as saying in explanation of her voluntary surrender that "I got afraid I might be turned up and wanted to get it over with."

Dear Mr. Meyer:

Although we appreciate the fact that you are soon to have Donald Duck as a member of your family on the Washington Post, I think you should be warned that you will have trouble on your hands.

Before many weeks have past, Donald will undoubtedly have broken up both Houses, muscled in on the Supreme Court bench, and completely disrupted all seating arrangements at Washington dinner parties.

Although he's troublesome, we hope that your readers will find him amusing.

Floods Follow Winds Killing 6 In California

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Feb. 10.—Rivers swollen by 15 days of rain and snow reached or neared the danger level in the Sacramento Valley tonight, while central California counted six dead and surveyed widespread property damage resulting from yesterday's hurricanes.

Highway officials closed the flood gates at North Sacramento to protect the town from the American River.

Government Meteorologist E. H. Fletcher at Sacramento predicted the Sacramento would rise to within a foot of flood stage at Colusa tomorrow night. About 300 men were working there to strengthen levees.

Reports were lacking from many important river points because communication lines were torn down by the worst windstorm in years.

Falling trees and collapsing buildings accounted for the six deaths in the winds which struck 300 miles of the central California coast and swept inland 200 miles.

Wandering Wanda Is Reclaimed From D. C.'s 'Dog House'

Poundmaster Frank B. Marks, it developed yesterday, was correct in his assumption that the large white dog he bagged Wednesday was no stray pooch, but someone's esteemed pet.

Soon after the appearance of Wednesday's Post, which carried a picture of the dog, Mrs. Lester Buchanan, 1728 Massachusetts avenue northwest, went to the pound to claim Wanda.

Search Extended For Young Mother

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Feb. 10.—The search for Mrs. Goldie Mays, 25, was extended to nearby States today.

The woman, a granddaughter of William Golden, retired railroad engineer and a councilmanic candidate at the last municipal election, disappeared early yesterday with the family automobile. The husband, Floyd Mays, said his wife left sometime after 3:30 a. m., as she was in her bed at that time. She did not take along her 10-day-old infant.

Police, called into the case, believe that Mrs. Mays is suffering from some complication resulting from child-birth. Her condition, they were told, was such that would have precluded the possibility of her driving very far.

$50,000,000 U. S. Bills.

The Secretary of the Treasury gave notice yesterday that tenders are invited for 91-day Treasury bills to the amount of about $50,000,000. They will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders. Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks, or the branches thereof, up to 2 o'clock p. m. (E.S.T.), on Monday, February 14, 1938.

New Sulphur Compound Cures Virus Diseases, Scientists Find

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 10.—Discovery of a sulphur compound, the first chemical ever found in the history of medicine effective in treating a virus disease, was announced today in Science.

Flu and infantile paralysis are examples of human viruses. The new chemical cures distemper, an animal virus, and "cracks the ice" for the first time for the human field.

The announcement was made by A. R. Dochez, the man who found the virus of the common cold, and C. A. Slantez. Their work was done at the College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Presbyterian Hospital, New York City.

The new drug is sodium sulfanilyl sulfanilate. It is a distant chemical relative of sulfanilamide, the new "wonder medicine" in the germ disease world. It has cured distemper in dogs, cats and ferrets almost 100 per cent.

The human possibilities of the new chemical still are unexplored. They are not ruled out by anything found in the experiments to date.

While chemicals have been found to treat most of man's germ diseases, no chemical has ever been effective against viruses. The latter are not in the germ class. They are smaller, usually invisible, and whether they are alive is a question. There is evidence they are missing links between living and inanimate matter.

Treatments for viruses have been vaccines and serums, extracts from blood of animals with modified forms of virus maladies. Serum is the usual treatment for dog distemper. But the new sulphur compound has outdone serum. It gives the same immunity as serum, cures as well when taken early, and also has cured in stages too late for serum.

The new sulphur medicine appears to be non-poisonous and to leave no bad effects.

Cab Driver Sought In Meningitis Peril

Police Inspector Bernard W. Thompson yesterday said detectives and hack inspectors are still trying to trace the taxicab driver who took a victim of meningitis to Providence Hospital late Monday night.

Others exposed to the fatal illness of 10-year-old Mary Jane Gibson, 700 E street southeast, have been advised to have physical checkups, Thompson said. These include the mother, grandmother, nephew, uncle, a friend of the uncle and a second taxicab driver.

The hacker who drove the dying child to the hospital has not been located. While chances are slight he became infected, police want to be certain he is apprised of the risk he underwent.

House Bill Asks Capital Airport At Suitland, Md.

Rep. Wood, Missouri, Urges Flying Field Be Built in Prince Georges.

A new site for a National Capital airport was proposed in the House yesterday as little progress was evident on other pending airport legislation.

Representative Wood (Democrat), of Missouri, a member of the House District Committee, introduced a bill to establish the flying field at Suitland, Md., in Prince Georges County.

He said he had inspected the site and found it to be on high ground, convenient to the Capital. He expressed the belief it could be acquired and developed cheaper than any of the other sites proposed.

Wood's bill is modeled after the Smith Gravelly Point measure, on which hearings have been held by the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee.

Besides the Gravelly Point proposal, there is the Camp Springs site recommended by the Washington Airport Commission and adopted by the Senate, and another measure which would permit the extension of Washington-Hoover Airport.

Slaying Charge To Face Sprouse

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 10 (AP).—Albemarle County authorities tonight sought John "Buck" Sprouse in connection with the fatal shooting of Tandy Gibson and the serious wounding of Gibson's sister-in-law Monday night at the Georgetown Settlement near here.

Shortly after Gibson died today at University Hospital, Sheriff Mason Smith announced he had obtained a murder warrant for Sprouse's arrest. The whereabouts of the man, however, are unknown, the sheriff said.

Daniel Condon, Heating Plant Owner, Suicide

D. C. Man Slashes Throat With Razor Blade; Ill Health Blamed.

The body of Condon, who lived at 4400 New Hampshire avenue northwest, was found by Phillip S. Rupprecht, of 1050 Tenth street northwest, and William H. Brookshire, of 4400 New Hampshire avenue, associates at the plant.

They missed Condon, forced the door of the wash room open, and found him sprawled upon the floor, the razor blade beside his body. An Emergency Hospital physician pronounced Condon dead.

Condon was widely known among steamfitting and foundry men here. He had been a resident of the District the last 40 years.

Members of his family said he had been in ill health for some time, and seemed despondent. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Surviving Condon are his wife, Mrs. Jessie Condon, and a stepdaughter, Mrs. William Brookshire.

Mrs. Woods Denies All Mate's Charges

New York, Feb. 10 (AP).—Mrs. Marian L. Woods, former Washington, D. C., society woman, charged with infidelity by her husband, Louis Woods, jr., today accused Woods of deliberate falsehood. She is suing for a separation and asks $400 a month temporary alimony and $2,000 counsel fees.

Mrs. Woods entered a general denial of the familiarity which her husband alleged existed between her and Jack de Ruyter, Robert Royster, 18, high school student, and other men.

Two Women Are Seized In Capital Liquor Raid

Two colored women were arrested by vice squad policeman in a liquor and gambling raid yesterday led by Sergt. George Deyoe.

Gertrude Gray, 39, of the 2000 block U street northwest, was charged with selling liquor without a license, keeping liquor for sale and permitting gambling. Pauline Fletcher, 26, of the same address, was charged with selling liquor without a license and permitting gambling.

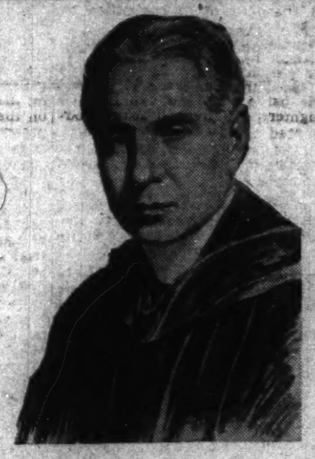
"Twenty Years After"
A Series of 10 Public Lectures



By
Edmund A. Walsh, S. J.
Vice President, Georgetown University
Regent, School of Foreign Service.

The entire world is disturbed as never before over the issues presented by Communism, Fascism, Democracy. Wars are in the making to decide which of these systems shall prevail. Communism has had twenty years, since the Russian Revolution of 1917, to demonstrate what kind of civilization it proposes. Hence, it is now possible to analyze and evaluate anew the results and fruits of World Communism. Democracy has existed in the United States under a Constitution since 1789, and we are now celebrating the Sesquicentennial of that Constitution. These lectures will present a comparison of the public record achieved by Communism and Democracy. They will also include a reply to the proposal of the Soviet Ambassador to the United States made on February 8 at the University of North Carolina. Abandoning accepted diplomatic procedure, he publicly urged a change in the foreign policy of the United States, and advocated an alliance between Communist Russia and the American Democracy.

On Friday Evenings
Beginning
February 18
in Memorial Continental Hall

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Eternal Battle.

Into the ear of this column's exasperation department a Federal official unburdened himself. Ordinarily, he said, the men and women in his offices get along swell—the only point of disagreement between them is over the temperature of the rooms. Women want a temperature of 75 or 80 degrees, the men want a temperature of about 65. A constant argument ensues, he said, as if weary of it.

And the rows will rage until summer comes and the temperature starts taking care of itself to the discomfort of all, he went on. And the situation must be pretty general, for another individual relates that the Navy Department is the worst place in town, as far as the temperature of the rooms goes. "Everything is haphazard about heat, light and moisture," said our caller. Which sums—or might sum—into endless argument, for the complaints are many.

For example, we found in our mailbox the other day a note, which carried the burden: "We're suffocating." It might go on forever, like the weather that everyone growls about but no one does anything about. We can only say, pessimistically, that hot summer weather is on the way and then we can all "kick" together.

Just a Thought.

A protest against the refusal by the State Department to grant the application of Harold J. Pritchett, English-born president of the International Woodworkers of America, for a permanent entry visa, is made by U. F. W. A. Local 12. "The action of the State Department can have only one result, to prevent Pritchett from continuing as the leader of the International Woodworkers of America and thus threaten the union with disruption and demoralization," says the resolution. Without arguing the matter it would seem natural to wonder (from the wording of that paragraph) how the rejection of a permanent visa to one man could break up—disrupt and demoralize—what must be a pretty big union . . . Anyhow, the Federal Show Window, popular WOL feature, is promising for tonight. The program is arranged by the Division of Insolvent Banks and will feature Robert Simpkins, violinist; Jerry Junkins, vocalist; an act participated in by Jack Larover, Frances I. Garrity, Lil Morck and Andrew Stern. The program starts at 10:30 . . . But, more elaborate still, is a program the Department of Agriculture Chorus will give tomorrow evening at 8:30 in the Agriculture auditorium:

• • • •

The "Gay Nineties" program by the chorus played to full houses repeatedly last fall; now they will give a program of favorite grand opera arias and choruses Saturday evening. Featured will be the Habanera from "Carmen;" Miserere, scene from "Il Trovatore;" sextet from "Lucia;" soldiers' chorus from "Faust;" toreador song from "Carmen; anvil chorus from "Il Trovatore," and barcarolle, from "Tales of Hoffman." Soloists will include Kathryn Campbell, Mrs. Eleanor J. Carter, Prudence Jackson, Hilda Nelson, May Delle Sandstrom and Mrs. Katharine Warren, sopranos; Irene L. Bartlett, Theresa Hammelman, Mrs. Alpha G. Knight and Mrs. Doris Menter, altos; Leonard Kephart, Ralph Marston, Walter H. Redit and Paul Wartenbe, tenors; Robert Frederick Freund, Roy B. Gray, Irvin Quigg and John M. Wilson, bassos. Mr. Freund will direct and Victor Neal will be at the piano. The public is invited.

Welcome Dept.

A welcome to Florence M. Maher of Syracuse, N.Y., a recent appointee to a position in the Administrative Division, Stenographic Section, FCA . . . And congratulations to the Indiana State Society for its novel idea—its thought of holding a "District Night." The society concluded that, after all, its members are living in Washington and should feel themselves to be citizens; so with a view to showing their civic-mindedness they've invited all the District Commissioners and other civic leaders to the society's party, to be held Wednesday evening in the main ballroom of the Wardman Park Hotel. Also attending will be Indiana State natives who now are prominent in the business or civic life of this city . . . Reminder: Another Farm Credit Club hike takes place Sunday, the route beginning near Paris, Va. You may register in room 336. Cars will leave the FCA Building at 9 a. m. Fred Heine is the hike leader; Mrs. Pearl Spicknall is the committee representative.

DO YOU KNOW WHO DEPARTMENT: (Yesterday the subject was Fred Orsinger, director of the Commerce Department Aquarium.) Today we present, in profile and full face, a gentleman known to you all, either by personal acquaintance or through the renown of his labors on behalf of Federal employes. He was once a member of the Congress; in these later days he spends much time on the Hill, concentrating on better working conditions for Government people. An eloquent speaker, he is persuasive; equally is he engaging at the arts of repartee. Not so very long ago, he was re-elected to his post in a growing organization: You named him, on the second guess.

The Farm Credit Club, which plans a dinner-dance at the Raleigh tomorrow evening, is in a pickle over what to eat. The club sent out a questionnaire asking members what kind of menu they wanted and to date so few have been returned that the final choice of the dinner is held in abeyance. Don't bother about it; steaks and French fried will be O. K.

Pretty Marguerite L. Hayes, of the Bureau of Mines (she is the girl who rated so high in the I. D. R. A. beauty contest lats fall) is one of the first contributors to the I. D. R. A. contest: "What the Interior Department Recreation Association Means to Interior Employes." Her paper said, in part: "The Interior Department Recreation Association has become a symbol—a symbol of fellowship, clean sportsmanship, honesty and a high regard for your fellow worker . . . Then there are the lonely people, shy individuals, who like friends but just don't know how to make them. I. D. R. A. breaks through the wall of reserve. You simply seem to thaw at those elegant dances . . . So here's an orchid—in fact, a whole bouquet of them—for our workers who first fostered the I. D. R. A." The organization says, "Thank you, Marguerite."

Agriculture Chorus In Concert Tomorrow

Under Robert Frederick Freund, the Deprtment of Argiculture chorus will present operatic selections tomorrow evening at 8:30 in the South Building auditorium. Kathryn Campbell, Hilda Nelson, Katherine Warren, Walter H. Redit, John M. Wilson, and Robert F. Freund will be soloists. Admission is free.

Eclipse Movies Slated.

Motion pictures of the Navy-National Geographic Society eclipse expedition to the South Seas will be shown at the Philosophical Society meeting at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow at the Cosmos Club, by two members of the party, I. C. Gardner, of the Bureau of Standards, and C. Bittinger, artist.

Nazis Continue Purge of Army; Rioting Denied

Berlin

place during ensuing weeks because of the appointments of Joachim von Ribbentrop as foreign minister and Walther Funk as economic minister, and consequent reorganization of their ministries.

As to continuation of the purge, Nazi circles made no secret of the fact that garrisons at Stolp and Allenstein in Prussia, for instance, were "filled with reactionaries." One party spokesman asserted:

"In East Prussia and Pomerania many top officers are members of the old nobility who never caught the spirit of national socialism. That changes must follow is self-evident. But you do not know the spirit of the army if you think they will do anything overt."

Men of Rank Changed.

Close reading of the provincial press disclosed men of the rank of colonel were being changed. Provincial papers have published words of welcome to the new commanders in the locality, indicating there have been replacement.

Von Ribbentrop's promotion to foreign minister was considered bound to lead to a shake-up in the foreign service both of the government and the party. For one thing, the "foreign political office" of Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, neo-pagan leader, loses its purpose. (Dr. Rosenberg is head of the Nazi Party's foreign political division.)

An evidence of this was seen in the fact that a "beer evening" for diplomats and the foreign press scheduled by Rosenberg for tonight was called off. Dr. Otto Dietrich, new press chief, was to have been the speaker and more than 50 diplomats and hundreds of newspapermen had accepted invitations. Dr. Rosenberg has been giving these periodical "beer evenings" ever since 1933.

Wants Own Reception.

Von Ribbentrop, however, insisted the first reception to diplomats following his own assumption of the foreign ministership should be given by himself, not Rosenberg.

Then there is the so-called "Bureau Ribbentrop," which has been functioning as a sideline to the regular foreign office.

Its reason for existence was the fact that von Ribbentrop was Hitler's special deputy for certain foreign tasks, such as negotiating the anti-Comintern Pact. (Germany, Italy and Japan are signatories of the pact.

Its staff was recruited solely from Nazi party men. This bureau probably will be merged with the foreign office, and a number of older foreign office officials not members of the party probably will be retired.

Consolidation of the four-year plan reorganization for German self-sufficiency and the economics ministry into one department also created the problem of what to do with an estimated 3,000 functionaries.

Two thousand of these are in the four-year plan administration and 1,000 in the economics ministry. Not all of them will be needed under the new plan.

Meanwhile, a Nazi decree was published requiring Germans remaining abroad more than three months to report their movements to the nearest consulate or risk loss of citizenship. The preamble said the decree was for the purpose of "gathering in all German citizens abroad to cultivate relations with the homeland."

"Revolt" Stirs London.

London, Feb. 10 (U.P.).—Sensational reports of a "revolt" among German army units, including the crack Berlin Watch Regiment, and closing of the German-Belgian frontier—officially denied in Berlin and Brussels—splashed bold headlines across London newspapers tonight.

The Evening Star's "report from Poland of German troops revolt" and "Berlin account of Hitler guard unrest" could not be confirmed in Berlin.

The reported closing of the Belgian frontier, which the Exchange Telegraph Agency said had been "officially confirmed" at the foreign office in Brussels and would be effected soon, resulted in a formal denial when the United Press made inquiries at the same source.

In Berlin, the propaganda ministry said:

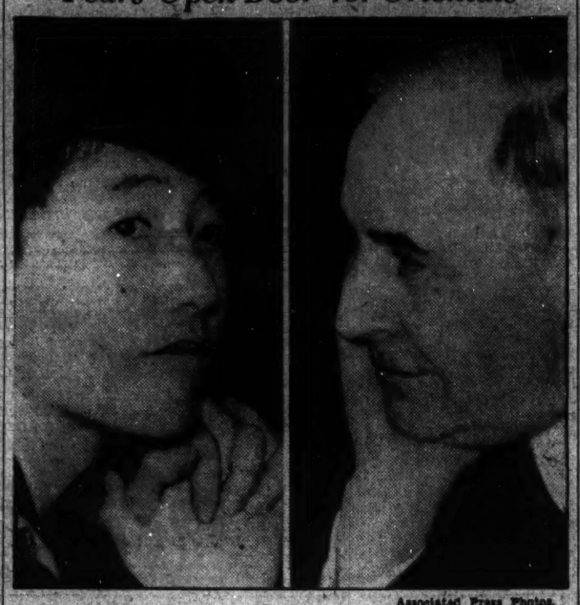
"Rumors that frontiers are closed or will be closed are complete nonsense. All trains and mails are passing the frontiers into and out of Germany absolutely normally. The rumors apparently are due to a maneuver of the Paris bourse."

Later the editor of the Gren Echo, Belgian newspaper published about five miles from the frontier, told the United Press he had visited the frontier gendarmerie, who told him they knew nothing of the rumors. Street cars were running regularly between Euben and Aix la Chapelle, he added.

Goering "a Butcher."

London, Feb. 10 (A).—William Gallagher, only Communist member of Parliament, created an uproar in the House of Commons today by calling Germany's Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering a butcher "soaked in blood."

Fears 'Open Door' for Orientals



Associated Press Photos.

Objection to a bill permitting Suye Narita (left), Japanese girl, to apply for citizenship was voiced in a House Immigration Committee hearing yesterday by Representative Charles Kramer (right), of California. He fears the bill would "open the doors wide" to demands of other Orientals now barred. Representative E. H. Gluett, of New York, is the bill's sponsor. Suye has lived in the United States 24 years, and was brought to this country when 7 years old by a missionary.

Patriarch of Church Becomes New Dictator of Rumanians

Rumania

France, by his leanings toward Germany and Italy.

King Carol, anxious to avoid unbalancing of the political structure of Central Europe, looked with disfavor upon this swing to the Fascist powers, and in turning to Dr. Cristea to form a new government was said to have wanted a conservative coalition government.

The King's announcement of the state of siege, placing the country's civil administration under the army, was made in a special edition of the royal gazette at 6 a. m. today.

Was Head of Regency.

The new premier, who served as head of a three-man regency for three years after the death of King Ferdinand in July, 1927, is the head of a church of 13,300,000 members, about one-third of the population of Rumania. He became patriarch of the Rumanian Orthodox Church, formerly a part of the Greek Orthodox Church, in 1925.

He resigned with the other regents in 1930 when Carol, son of Ferdinand, returned from voluntary exile to ascend the throne. Carol's young son, the present Crown Prince Mihai, was king during Dr. Cristea's regency.

The patriarch, born in humble circumstances in a small Transylvanian village, has devoted himself solely to religious matters since the end of the regency and belongs to no party, but is known to have Centrist Democratic views, as do many of his ministers.

To Reduce Mounting Tension.

The avowed purpose of Dr. Cristea's government, which took its oath of allegiance before the king early this morning, was to reduce the national tension which has been growing in the past six weeks because of Goga's racial and economic measures.

Although all parties ware prohibited from conducting any propaganda activities, this move was regarded as directed especially against the Fascist-inclined Iron Guard of Cornelius Codreanu. The other parties would not be hard hit by the order, their leaders seemed to agree, because of the broad base of Dr. Cristea's coalition cabinet.

Ministers without portfolio, Nicholas Jorga, National Democrat; Alexander Vaida-Voeved, Rumanian Front; George Mironescu, formerly National Peasant Party member; Alexandru Averescu, Rumanian Peoples Party; Gen. Viatoianu, Liberal; George Tatarescu, Liberal; Constantine Angelescu, also public works minister, Liberal; and ministers with portfolios, industry, Constantine Argetoianu; interior, Armand Calinescu.

Finance, M. Cancicoff, who also is temporary minister of justice; war, Gen. Ion Antonescu, who also is temporary minister for marine and for air; agriculture, Prof. Iinescu Sisesti; public welfare, Ilon Costinescu; education, Victor Iamandi; labor, Vojka Mitescu; foreign minister, temporarily, George Tatarescu; undersecretary for war, Paul Toedorescu.

Rumanians made no secret of their joy at the collapse of the Goga government.

Goga handed his resignation to King Carol in midafternoon. During the day Carol held audiences with a number of former premiers in an effort to find a way out of the crisis.

Juliu Maniu, leader of the National Peasant Party, saw Carol for the first time in four years. After a heated 45-minute interview, Maniu announced his party would not be represented in the new government.

Since Goga took office December 28, 1937, stock exchange shares have fallen as much as 20 per cent, and it was freely predicted that when the National Bank refused to give further help, Goga would fall.

Goga's plans to increase taxes caused sales to drop and capital to flee the country. The cost of living rose but prices to farmers dropped alarmingly.

Japanese Mass For Great Drive Into Mid-China

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Friday), Feb. 11.—Japan is pouring heavy reinforcements into the northwestern sector of the Lunghai corridor for a great inland offensive through central China.

Long-range artillery duels sounded the prelude of what foreign military observers considered might be the decisive battle of the war. Behind the incessant bombardment, infantry units were organizing for the attack.

Success of the Japanese plans would overwhelm resistance of 400,000 Chinese troops in the fertile Shantung and Honan Province plains, cut off the Lunghai Railroad, China's great east-west artery, and pave the way for an attack on Hankow, temporary Chinese capital 450 miles inland.

The Japanese have mobilized forces to spring traps at both ends of the 180-mile-wide Lunghai corridor where Chinese were rushing defense preparations.

Pressure at Suchow, Chinese stronghold on the east, could compel a Chinese retrert inland and force out the Chinese wedge between the Japanese-conquered areas north and south of the corridor.

Pressure on the west, against Chengchow, where the Lunghai and the north-south Peiping-Hankow railroads cross, could close the Chinese in between Japanese forces and open Japan's way inland.

Victors in Ulster Call Irish Unity 'Will o' the Wisp'

By the Associated Press.

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Feb. 10. Prime Minister Viscount Craigavon's government, bitterly opposed to unoin between Ireland and Northern Ireland, was returned to power for five more years today.

With eight contests in yesterday's parliamentary elections still undecided, Craigavon's party had won unquestioned control of Northern Ireland's House of Commons, electing 32 of the chamber's 52 members.

"It is now clear beyond all possible doubt that this talk of a united Ireland is just a will of the wisp," Craigavon commented.

The prime minister called the special election on the sole issue of Irish unification after Ireland's Prime Minister Eamon de Valera urged union in conversations with British cabinet officials.

George VI Delays His Visit to India

London, Feb. 10 (A).—King George VI again has postponed his visit to India for the planned coronation durbar, the India Office announced tonight.

"His majesty reluctantly came to the conclusion it would be advisable to wait until the general world outlook became more settled before committing himself to an engagement so long in advance," a communique said.

Japan Opens Drive on Eastern China

The position of Japanese armies as they began a "big push" on Eastern China is shown in this map. Arrows point to their six major objectives: 1. To cross the Hwai River, 90 miles south of Suchow; 2. To occupy Kweiteh and cut off China's main armies from the interior; 3. To drive overland from Tsining to Kweiteh; 4. To sever the lines between Haichow and Suchow; 5. Another thrust near Suchow, this one against the Tsinpu railroad, and 6. In position to strike at three towns, Chengchow, Kweiteh and Kaifeng.

Grecian Dictator Banishes 2 More Foes for Sedition

Athens, Feb. 10 (U.P.).—The government of Premier John Metaxas, the "little dictator" of Greece, announced tonight that former Premier Andrew Michalakopoulos and John Theotokis, prominent politician, have been banished for sedition.

This brought to 12 the number of first rank politicians deported by Metaxas in the last two weeks.

Soviet Explorers Harassed by Gale In Sight of Safety

Tromsoe, Norway, Feb. 10 (A).—The ice floe prison of four Russian scientists drifted in sight of Greenland today in the teeth of an Arctic gale which hampered rescue efforts by ship and dog sled.

Violent seas were encountered by the rescue ships and an attempt to reach the explorers by dog sled from Danish and Norwegian coastal stations was called off when authorities warned the perilous trip over ice would mean "certain death."

Phone Artist Launches Fake Charity Drive

Charity

There is an imponderable of overhead, sometimes claiming all the donor's dollar shortly after it leaves his pocket.

The rules above hold good for both the single-event rackets and the organizations which operate their own buildings for alleged feeding and shelter of the needy. The following break-down of the dollar applies only to the latter type of swindle.

Big Shots Dig In.

Solicitation and collection expenses having already whittled away an average of 40 cents, the leading humanitarians of the racket now take their cut.

Director, treasurer and executive secretary of the organization all draw regular salary checks for their professional services.

In the haven of shelter the director and his family generally occupy, rent-free, a suite of the more livable rooms.

Overhead exacts its tribute again, as the local organization pays tribute to its national office. Dues and charter fees are the price for using the name of the national organization.

Another bill occasionally falls due when the local branch must change its letterhead, following ejection of the national office from a city more vigilant than Washington.

Some Aid Dispensed.

All the semipermanent charity rackets in Washington, it must be emphasized, do dispense some aid to the needy.

Forewarned of an impending visit from investigator or possible contributor, these agencies can tidy their headquarters, clear out the more disreputable solicitors lounging in the office and round up some neighborhood children for a fancy meal.

Besides these special effects, ready for emergency use, there are bursts of activity at Christmas and Thanksgiving and a certain minimum of daily charity.

One typical racket, according to neighbors' testimony, dispenses 25 or 30 meals a day to women and children, while its solicitors tell the "tap list" that more than 200 persons are being fed.

A similar spread exists between the solicitor's description of the meals and the actual menu.

The same racketeers employ as one of their chief sales arguments the nightly accommodation of 12 or 15 homeless women. Many of these cases, according to the director, are referred to his organization by the Travelers Aid Society.

Three Given Lodging.

The actual number of women given lodging averages three a night. Travelers Aid officials say they have never sent anyone to the agency in question.

How much of the original dollar has escaped the numerous helping hands encountered along the way. Probably not less than 5 cents, and certainly not more than 25 were spent for genuine charity.

Overhead takes an equally heavy toll from cash contributed to the single-event rackets, but here the dollar loses weight in bigger and fewer chunks.

The common formula for a "one-night-stand" or short campaign for funds reveals the professional operator buying all rights to exploitation of the disaster or emergency.

The sufferers are guaranteed a flat sum by the terms of the contract. The organizer takes his expenses and winnings from all proceeds over the fixed guarantee.

A contract allotting a definite amount of the proceeds to the cause in question and assigning the remainder to operating expenses does not, of course, constitute evidence of racketeering.

Call Buiness Bureau.

Such an arrangement is employed by many reputable promoters. Faced with an appeal for aid to a single-event charity, the intelligent contributor will consult the Better Business Bureau, whose experts can soon separate the straight from the "loaded" contracts.

Similarly, solicitation by telephone does not necessarily indicate fraud at the other end of the wire. The telephone approach, however, should always spur the possible contributor to immediate investigation.

(Tomorrow's concluding article will describe the tests to which every charity appeal should be submitted and outline plans for putting the racket out of business.)

Josef Stalin Reported in Romance

Maria Demchenko, a collective farm girl, is reported romantically linked with Josef Stalin, Red dictator, with whom she is shown when he awarded her with the Order of Lenin and a personal letter of gratitude in 1935. Maria is the envy of every woman in Russia, it was said. Since her friendship with Stalin, she has become a Russian deputy.

Senate Leaders Speed Relief As Jobless Grow to 3,000,000

Relief

taling $1,266,000,000 for unemployment relief, including the CCC for the year commencing July 1.

Mr. Roosevelt's letter to Speaker Bankhead was as follows:

"I have the honor to submit herewith for your consideration a supplemental estimate of appropriation of $250,000,000 for relief of the unemployed.

"Emergency and Work Relief: To continue to provide relief and work relief as authorized in the emergency relief appropriation act of 1937, and subject to all the provisions thereof, $250,000,000, which amount shall be added to, and proportionately increase the specified amounts of the limitation prescribed under the appropriation made in such act (50 Stat. 352)."

"According to the best estimate available at this time it appears that, during the past three months, approximately three million persons have lost their jobs with private employers. This increase in unemployment could not, of course, have been foreseen at the time the last relief appropriation was under consideration. Hundreds of thousands of needy unemployed persons have recently applied for relief work which could not be provided for them with the funds on hand. It has become increasingly clear that these needs cannot be met unless employment by the Works Progress Administration is increased immediately.

"The funds available on January 1, 1938, would permit employment of an average of only 1,700,000 persons for the six months ending June 30, 1938. The number of persons on the Works Progress Administration rolls today is 1,950,000. Funds available at this time will not only not take care of the additional burden caused by the recent increase in unemployment, but will require a sharp reduction in the near future of the number on Works Progress Administration rolls. This estimate of $250,0000,000 will permit the continued employment for the next five months of the number now on such rolls, and will provide a reasonable measure of relief for those who have recently become unemployed and are in need.

"Respectfully,

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

Corporation Used To Cut Tax Upheld

The Board of Tax Appeals held yesterday that deliberate use of a wholly-owned corporation to minimize income taxes did not constitute fraud.

The Internal Revenue Bureau contended use of a wholly-owned corporation by George W. Griffiths, of the first Illinois revenue district, was evidence part of an income tax deficienmy was due to fraud with intent to evade tax.

Jerusalem, Feb. 10 (AP).—The Holy Land's first snow in 12 years and its worst storm in a decade today tied up land travel and shipping. Hundreds were marooned at Beirut by snow-blocked roads. Highways from Syria and Egypt were cut off. Snow-covered camels were a strange sight.

RFC Creates $211,000,000 Mortgage Unit

Housing

real estate not in excess of 80 per cent of the appraised value of the property. Banks lending on first insured mortgages may sell such holdings to the association in times of stringency. Thus real estate mortgages are given new liquidity by the creation of the new association.

Cold to Industrial Loans.

In addition, the association under the recently enacted legislation will have authority to make direct loans to limited dividend corporations or public housing authorities up to 80 per cent of the value of property pledged as collateral, when such loans are insured by the FHA. Thus it will be in a position to supply funds for the large-scale projects which the President envisioned when he sent his housing message to Congress in November.

At the same press conference in which he announced organization of the first mortgage association, Chairman Jones indicated that he is distinctly cool to current proposals for expansion of the Government's authority to make industrial loans to small business. Indeed, he asserted he believed a resumption of RFC lending to small business under the terms of the existing law was all the present situation demanded.

Opposes Unsecured Loans.

Jones pointed out the RFC had all the authority needed to make loans needed by businessmen who could qualify. His agency last October discontinued making industrial loans, but Jones said that if the President thought it wise to do so the agency could resume lending on the former basis. He took a stand against the Government making unsecured loans, asserting he would not want to administer a law which permitted character loans, "because I would not want to determine who had character and who lacked it."

The RFC chairman said that under the present terms of the law the RFC had authorized 2,727 industrial loans for a total of $201,616,000. Of these authorizations, 1,063, for a total of $69,763,000, were canceled by the applicants either because the customer no longer wanted the money or could get it elsewhere.

The RFC has disbursed $105,000,000 in the form of industrial loans, Jones said. Of these loans $29,280,000 had been repaid. A number of those outstanding were in arrears, the chairman said, but he did not have the figures available. He also said there had been some defaults and foreclosures.

"We will have a loss on these loans in the aggregate," Jones said. "But it will not be large, from present indications. Most of the loans in difficulties were to textile manufacturers, an industry which has been hardest hit. Some of our coal loans are not very happy."

Flynn to Study Deep-Sea Fish

Erol Flynn's next expedition will be in the interests of ichthyology.

Flynn will equip his recently acquired ship, which will be called the Sirocco, with tanks in which to bring back Caribbean Sea and Gulf of Lower California deep-sea specimens.

When Flynn has completed his next film, in which he will appear with Bette Davis, he will go to New York with a hand-picked crew of adventurers to start the long sail to California. He hopes to bring to a California aquarium a record scientific catch of specimens of Eastern ocean denizens and rare Pacific fish.

resolution here to ascertain whether there is any understanding or agreement with various countries," Johnson said.

"He (Hull) responded 'No' in a way that could not be misunderstood. I accepted that declaration as conclusive. But I feel the Secretary of State and I were taken for a ride the other day.

"I felt that perhaps something was in the wind that he didn't know and I didn't know."

Senator Robert M. La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, joined Johnson in a vigorous complaint against Lewis for his "unwarranted attack" upon "patriotic citizens who have appeared before the House Naval Affairs Committee."

La Follette charged that Lewis referred to Prof. Charles A. Beard, noted historian and author, and said Beard expressed the viewpoint of "many of our citizens" in questioning the necessity of the expanded naval program."

'Overlook War.'

Lewis, attacking the so-called educators, said "they have come down to enlighten the Congress on public defense and they have issued statements that indicate this government is being conducted either by lunatics or by persons who are leading us into bankruptcy.

"But these people who come to us completely overlook the fact that the nations of the world have been preparing themselves for assault in some direction.

"There is but one measure for this country to take. It is, that we want no war, but stand ready to defend ourselves."

Libby, testifying in opposition to Mr. Roosevelt's big navy program, said the United States could expect no help from Great Britain in event of Far Eastern hostilities. A short time later the hearing was thrown into an uproar when Brewster demanded Krock be summoned.

Reading from Krock's column of Wednesday Brewster quoted the writer as saying he had been "expertly informed" that such an agreement, which is "hardly more than a wink or a nod," exists.

Banking his fist on the committee bench and jumping to his feet, the former Governor of Maine shouted, "I demand that we call Mr. Krock before this committee to tell us where he got this information which we cannot get!

"Let's find out who so 'expertly informed' Mr. Krock. Are we mice or are we men?"

Representative Joseph B. Shannon (Democrat), Missouri, sided with Brewster, stating that "not only should we call Mr. Krock, but we should call in everybody connected with the New York Times."

Shannon charged the Times is the "perfect representative" of the British empire, with the purpose of deliberately drawing the United States into war.

Japan Will "Help."

Tokyo, Feb. 10 (AP).—A Japanese naval spokesman today indicated Japan would join in efforts to halt the world naval race if Great Britain and the United States would approach the problem from her point of view.

Davis Lectures To Christian Science Group

Member of Board of Mother Church Speaks on Healing.

A lectureon "Christian Science: "God's Law Revealed in Spiritual Healing" was delivered last evening in First Church of Christ, Scientist by Richard J. Davis, C. S. B., of San Jose, Calif. Mr. Davis is a member of the board of lectureship of the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist in Boston. He was introduced by Bernard C. Duncan, first reader of First Church which sponsored this lecture. The lecturer said in part:

"It is clear that Christian Science is eminently Christian, because it radiates and exemplifies the whole and undivided spirit of the Christ. What was this spirit of the Christ which Jesus manifested and which was expressed in his mighty works? First of all, it must have been a correct concept or understanding of God, of what God really is, and of what man is. Jesus understood that God was not a manlike Deity, a divine entity somewhere in space, but rather the self-existent, spiritual and perfect cause of creator of the universe, and the teaching of Christian Science conforms to this definition, declaring God to be the one infinite divine Mind, or intelligent Principle of all being.

"The God that Jesus knew and the God of Christian Science is absolutely perfect. The premise and basis of true spiritual healing is perfection. Christ Jesus understood that since God or Mind is the intelligent and perfect cause, man, His image or spiritual expression, must also be perfect and intelligent, since a divine spiritual cause must inevitably express itself in an equally spiritual and perfect effect.

"That spiritual understanding of the perfection of all things which Jesus possessed, and which made him the Christ, was the Saviour of mankind then and is today."

You'll have more fun when the SKIN is clear from WITHIN

NO man or woman wants to have a finger poked at them or receive sympathy because of an unhealthy skin appearance.

Some skin troubles are tough to correct, but we do know this—skin tissues like the body itself must be fed from within.

To make the food we eat available for strength and energy, there must be an abundance of red-blood-cells.

S.S.S. Tonic builds these precious red cells. It is a simple, internal remedy, tested for generations and also proven by scientific research.

You, too, will want to take S.S.S. Tonic to regain and to maintain your red-blood-cells... to restore lost weight ...to regain energy...to strengthen nerves...and to give to your skin that natural health glow.

Take the S.S.S. Tonic treatment and shortly you should be delighted with the way you feel... and have your friends compliment you on the way you look. Available at any drug store.

Toward a new international record hurtled this sleek racing car of German driver, Rudolf Caracciola, who reached a speed of 268.5 miles an hour over a track at Frankfort-on-Main. Soon after Caracciola set this record for a kilometer, Bernd Rosemeyer attempted to smash the record and was fatally injured.

Virginia's Cupid Ties 32,695 Knots

Richmond, Va., Feb. 10 (AP).—Altar-bound couples kept marriage license clerks busy in Virginia during 1937. A total of 32,695 obtained licenses to tie the nuptial knot.

The Bureau of Vital Statistics said today, all counties in the State had reported with the exception of King and Queen County. Licenses during the year showed a gain of 2,557 over the preceding year.

Counties and cities near the State's borders showed the largest increase in licenses on the basis of 1,000 population. Winchester led the increase. Other cities showing a gain included Williamsburg, Staunton, Bristol and Alexandria. Counties showing increases included Highland, Bland, Tazewell, Alleghany, Giles, Frederick, Clarke, Richmond, Arlington and Fairfax.

The Senate's Responsibility.

Responsibility for enactment of the farm bill now rests with the Senate. It may be taken for granted that the President will sign it if it goes to the White House, despite Secretary Wallace's dissatisfaction with some of its provisions. Should the Senate accept the bill on faith, as did the House, the last possibility of saving American agriculture from a form of compulsory collectivism will have passed.

The only excuse which can be offered for enactment of this legislation is that it will benefit farmers economically. Yet one of the two outstanding farm organizations of the country, the National Grange, has protested to the Senate that "no emergency, however great, could justify Congress in passing the bill in its present form."

Every one who has studied this legislative monstrosity seems to recognize some of its grave defects. Even Senator Smith, chairman of the conference committee, admits that "it is hard to determine just what is the 'general principle' of the farm bill." That statement is made in a letter printed elsewhere on this page in which the Senator defends the proposed bonus for cotton farmers, one of the least defensible provisions of the measure. In the House debate shortcomings of the bill were readily admitted. Yet it was railroaded through that body with the plea that the House would have to take this bill or nothing.

It is all too evident that few members of Congress fully understand the bill. Some have spent many hours considering this legislation. But the more it is studied the more confusing it tends to become. Only one fact stands out clearly: The measure imposes coercive control upon agriculture against the wishes of many farmers and in apparent defiance of the Constitution. Even the minority decision of the Supreme Court in the AAA case condemned coercive control.

In many respects this is the most important piece of legislation sponsored by the Roosevelt Administration. Unless it breaks down in operation, it will revolutionize farming in the United States in a way that heretofore has been regarded as inconsistent with democracy.

The least that the Senate can properly do with such a bill is to discuss it until its obscure portions are thoroughly understood and its obvious defects have been corrected. To sanction such a drastic and at the same time bungling control measure on the assumption that it is the only alternative to inaction would be close to confessing a fatal weakness in democracy.

Goga Goes.

After six stormy weeks of power Octavian Goga has resigned as premier of Rumania.

The support of King Carol had enabled the leader of the pro-Fascist and anti-Semitic National Christian Party to take office, despite the fact that this party polled less than 10 per cent of the total vote in the recent general elections. But royal patronage alone has proved insufficient to keep Goga in office.

During his tenure he sought, on the one hand, to smash up the Iron Guards, Rumania's leading Fascist organization, and, on the other, to put through far-reaching measures against the Jews. For a time it looked as if Rumania would in this latter particular follow the Nazi pattern. And the fact that the monarch had dissolved Parliament and ordered a new election suggested the possibility that pressures of various kinds, not unknown in his kingdom, would suffice to give Goga a parliamentary majority.

From the first, however, Goga's path was strewn with obstacles. His measures against the Jews had a highly disruptive effect on Rumanian economy and met with the opposition of powerful elements both in the government and business. The other day he received a body blow from the Juridical Committee, whose function it is to pass on the constitutionality of cabinet decrees. The committee decided that the edict which would have compelled every Jew in Rumania to prove his right to citizenship was both unconstitutional and an infringement of treaty obligations. The presumption is that similar decisions were probable regarding other recent royal decrees.

At the same time Goga's leanings to Germany and Italy have antagonized the large number of Rumanians who favor a pro-French orientation in foreign affairs. And in the face of the possibility that Rumania might become a totalitarian state, all democratic parties began to close their ranks. By this week it was far from certain that, no matter how the forthcoming election might be rigged, Goga would come out on top. But failure to succeed would also have reflected on the monarch who had placed him in office.

Rather than court a third defeat at the polls, Carol has apparently decided to change his course. He has commissioned Dr. Miron Cristea, Patriarch of the Rumanian Orthodox Church, to form a new government. There is now a fair chance that Rumania will turn from the incipient Fascism which the retiring premier represented.

3,000,000 More Unemployed.

President Roosevelt's request for the addition of $250,000,000 to WPA relief funds comes almost on the heels of Secretary Morgenthau's assurance that sufficient money is on hand to meet essential needs in this field for the remainder of this fiscal year. There seems to be disagreement within the Administration as to the necessity for a supplemental appropriation at this time.

It is true, of course, that Congress did not foresee the present depression when the relief appropriation for the current year was made. But it is also true that the $1,500,000,000 provided in the 1938 budget was larger than the prospective need at the time it was appropriated, in view of the unemployment insurance benefits now available. Before voting any additional sum Congress ought to have more information than it now possesses as to the extent to which benefits of the social security program are ameliorating the effects of new unemployment.

Men without jobs last year could expect no unemployment insurance benefits. But the reason for considering the additional relief outlay now proposed is the increased unemployment since November. A considerable number of those in current need are eligible for unemployment insurance checks and the Administration very literally can not afford to ignore the fact that they are being paid.

Where acute need exists, of course it must be relieved. But the Federal Government is already carrying a very large share of the load. With the budget still unbalanced, and with the enormous increase in the Federal debt, the Treasury is in a less favorable position to meet the increased demands for relief than are many local communities. Certainly cities could handle the undertaking more economically.

The common sense of the local approach is emphasized by the situation in Washington. Citizen groups here are not appealing to Congress for larger WPA outlays, but for an adequate appropriation for relief in Washington's own budget. Undoubtedly this community can meet its own relief problem if it is given the authority to do so. The same is true in many localities which have the power but will naturally prefer Federal funds as long as they are readily obtainable.

Every local government will be inclined to rely upon Congress in preference to coping with the problem itself. But that attitude does not gainsay the unquestioned ability of many communities to increase allowances for unemployment relief. Unless Congress takes a firm stand in requiring the localities to do their part, relief will continue to be a heavy burden on the Treasury indefinitely.

One important aspect of the President's request is the tacit admission that the Administration at last recognizes the serious character of the present slump. When Mr. Roosevelt estimates that 3,000,000 persons have been thrown out of work in the last three months, a real emergency is indicated. That being so, the most important question for Congress is to relieve the pressures upon private industry which have helped to produce so catastrophic a result.

Uncoordinated Playgrounds.

There is good reason for the City-wide Playground Council's keen disappointment over the failure to bring about a coordination of recreational facilities here. For many years now the undesirability of maintaining three separate local recreation agencies has been clearly recognized. But as yet there seems to have been little progress toward a solution.

This failure to bring about a unified system is the more unfortunate because of the substantial improvement which has been made in the city's play facilities. A plan for the acquisition and development of recreational areas was agreed upon in 1930. Under that arrangement the city has acquired the physical properties for one of the finest recreational systems in the country. But management of these play centers is still decentralized and unsystematic.

Attempts at coordination seem to have failed because of two divergent points of view. Lewis Barrett, to whom the job of bringing order out of the present confusion was assigned, drew up a unification bill some time ago. It would set up a Recreation Board consisting of the Superintendent of Schools, the head of the National Capital Parks, one District Commissioner, a District citizen and the chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. To this agency would be granted power to operate all public playgrounds and recreational facilities of the District. But such property could be used only with the full consent of the agency now in control.

Objection to this plan seems to come chiefly from the Board of Education. Henry I. Quinn has made the reasonable criticism that the proposed recreation board would be too heavily weighted with Federal officials who have no intimate concern with a distinctly local problem. It is pointed out, too, that the recreational programs carried out by the schools are an essential part of their educational program and should not be turned over to any other agency. Indeed, the present tendency is to extend the jurisdiction of the schools over supervised recreation for children.

School authorities are undoubtedly right in demanding that play activities connected with education be left in their control. But it does not appear that this would preclude coordination. Full guarantees that the schools will retain this function could easily be written into the Barrett bill, if the existing provisions are not strong enough. Moreover, it could readily be amended to bring the recreation system unquestionably under local control.

In any event there is urgent need for coordination of the activities now carried on by the National Capital Parks and the District Playground Department. There seems no compelling reason why this function could not be assigned to a single agency that would be closely associated with both the local government and the schools. Certainly the benefits of coordination justify further efforts to reach an agreement along this line. With a real effort for cooperation the solution should be forthcoming.

U. S. Steel And C. I. O.

The contract entered into a year ago by the U. S. Steel Corporation and a C. I. O. affiliate has been extended subject to termination by either side at short notice.

Under such uncertain conditions collective bargaining loses some of its value as a stabilizing influence in industrial relations. In spite of the provisional nature of the agreement, however, its extension is significant, in view of the depressed state of the steel industry. Instead of trying to capitalize on this situation at the expense of organized labor the corporation has wisely reaffirmed its willingness to deal with the union representatives and has not taken advantage of the opening afforded by business depression to insist upon immediate wage cuts.

This forbearance has evoked an enthusiastic endorsement of the agreement from John L. Lewis, who calls it a "triumph for moderation and sound business judgment at this time." In thus diplomatically ignoring the fact that the agreement is subject to revision under an escape clause, Mr. Lewis shows a capacity for compromise that might well have been displayed in his dealings with the A. F. of L.

While both Mr. Lewis and Mr. Philip Murray, head of the steel workers' union, profess to regard the settlement as a protection against wage cutting, there is of course no assurance that existing wage scales can or will be maintained for any definite period.

The current announcement of cuts in prices of steel products initiated by an independent concern necessarily calls for matching cuts by competitors. And if price reductions in the industry spread to cover a large number of products, they are likely to be followed by reductions in wages. The mere fact that competitive price cutting by independents has begun in an industry traditionally following the lead of "Big Steel" is itself a development of great importance.

At first glance it might seem as though the so-called independent companies, having no contractual wage obligations to observe, are advantageously situated to meet the challenge of lower prices by simply decreeing reductions in wages. But the U. S. Steel Corporation actually has the very real advantage of having cultivated the good will of organized labor, first by entering into an agreement and then by renewing it at a time when the bargaining power of the employes is seriously impaired. By thus demonstrating its good faith in the matter of collective bargaining the corporation has prepared the way for friendly negotiation of wage agreements, even if reductions should be required.

The independents, having acquired the reputation of being hostile to organized labor, would on the other hand subject themselves to very critical comment if they initiated cuts in wage rates. Furthermore, if they take the lead in this direction they will be charged with responsibility for any subsequent reductions in wages by the U. S. Steel Corporation. Regarded solely from the viewpoint of strategy, therefore, "Big Steel" may yet prove the wisdom of its policy as contrasted with the unyielding anti-union attitude of some of its competitors.

Buddies?

It is perhaps fortunate that the local Cat and Mouse Show will open April 2. If it were a day earlier the exhibition might not be taken with the seriousness it deserves. And there would be some excuse for ribald skepticism, at least among those who recall the young lady of Niger who went for a ride on a tiger.

While cat and mouse are in a sense affinities they have distinct identities only when kept apart. What the show's best cat would prize most of all would be the show's best mouse. Nor would the mouse complain after it had been properly assimilated. As that genial philosopher, Don Marquis, has pointed out, it would then begin to think like a cat.

The faintest praise ever accorded a cat is that it is harmless and utilitarian. Few have said so much for the mouse. And yet there are estimable people who insist that the mountain that brought one forth might have done worse. Indeed the show manager declares that the coloring of some of the wee rodents is exquisite; as, for instance, "a delicate shade of lilac and light fawn with an undercolor of blue."

We find this just a little hard to believe. But we know an unskeptical cat that would gladly swallow it whole.

Leviathan Memories.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The passing of the Leviathan from our waters to her sunset, in the East, brings to memory an incident regarding her, which occurred February 5, 1917, and which I here relate, in addition to that of "The Post Impressionist" of a few days ago.

On the above date I was leaving Boston, having gone to the Elevated from the north station, I sought a spot, before boarding the train, where I could look down on the bay. There anchored was the Vaterland in all of her original splendor, as she had come to these shores, and by her side the Crown Princess Cecilia, of whose fate I have always wanted to learn.

Some of the officers and crew had visited a neighbor of my brother in Melrose, Mass., where I had been a guest, and as the relations between the neighbors were most cordial my brother had enjoyed the opportunity of coming in contact with foreign seamen. After the Government interned the crew, these pleasant relations became strained on the part of the German neighbors, although the crew was allowed to plant a garden and have animals and chickens.

Upon the declaration of war, before the crew was shipped South to be kept for the duration of the struggle, there occurred on the Vaterland an action the German crew planned would prevent the United States from using the vessel, as they expected the injured engine and machinery could never be replaced or repaired.

However, due to the skill and ability of our naval engineers, who repaired the damage to the chagrin of Germany, it was possible for the Leviathan to accomplish what she did during her days in our waters. The work was a monument to our engineers. E. E. H.

Jails As Crime Breeders.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Conditions in most jails and prisons tend to break instead make character, with the result that a person makes his exit worse than when he was committed and becomes a repeater, with a parole system utterly inadequate.

What is this new plan to incorporate the District Training School for Girls with the Woman's Workhouse and thus let them come into contact with seasoned criminals? To me, this appears as confusion of thought.

Senator Smith's Cotton Amendment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial appearing in The Post of February 8 relative to cotton assumes so many false premises, and consequently so grossly misrepresents the purposes and expected results of the legislation discussed, that I am impelled to give you the facts. I feel confident that you will publish them, and also that your own conclusions will be drastically revised in the light of them.

I list your false premises and the controverting facts in order of their appearance in the editorial as follows:

1. You refer to a "special bonus" for cotton farmers.

There is no such thing in the legislation discussed. The payment of 2 cents per pound is in lieu of, and not in addition to, the price adjustment payment, and it will require no additional funds.

2. You say that the result of the 12-cent loan program of 1934 was to cause substantial losses to taxpayers.

If the cotton covered by this loan had been properly classed, it could have all been released at or above the loan value without any losses at all to taxpayers. As it is, the losses do not begin to approach the cost to the Government for relief if cotton prices had been permitted to decline to where they were headed.

3. You say that "in effect Senator Smith would require the Commodity Credit Corporation to buy an enormous amount of cotton at approximately 12 cents per pound and withhold it from the market.

In the first place, although I am proud to have made the suggestion, the entire membership of the free Conference Committee shares the credit and the honor of approving it with me. In the second place the provision does not require the Commodity Credit Corporation to purchase cotton at 12 cents per pound, but to take it over at the face value of the loan, which in no case is more than 9 cents per pound. This the Commodity Credit Corporation is already obligated to do unless the farmer voluntarily pays his loan, which is without recourse. The Commodity Credit Corporation would assume not one cent more liability than it already has.

4. You say that "the Commodity Credit Corporation has already made loans of 9 cents per pound on 1937 cotton."

Actually loans of 9 cents have been made only on the best cotton. The probable average is around 8 cents.

5. You say that "the probable result would be to impound nearly 5,000,000 bales . . . until the price could be raised to around 12 cents."

Actually the result would be to impound probably half that much cotton until its average price could be raised to approximately 8½ cents instead of 12 cents. As matters now stand the entire 5,000,000 bales is impounded unless the Government wants to take a heavy loss.

6. You say that "the amendment . . . at direct variance with the general principle of the farm bill, for its special bounty to cotton growers would be paid whether or not farmers have co-operated with the soil conservation program."

I confess it is hard to determine just what is the "general principle" of the farm bill, but if it is, as has been so often stated by Secretary Wallace, to pay the growers parity for their products through the operation of an "ever-normal granary," then the provision you say the Secretary so vigorously opposes is the only thing in the present bill that will remotely tend to accomplish such an objective. And, of course, you did not know that the loans themselves are conditioned upon compliance by the borrowers with soil conservation and other provisions of the act.

If those who are at this time so assiduously telling the South what kind of legislation is needed for cotton could ever get it through their thick skulls and their thicker consciences that the price per pound for cotton represents the price per hour for a cotton farmer's wages, perhaps they would not be so hasty to malign our desperate efforts to remedy this shocking discrimination.

How can we become enthusiastic supporters of legislation to guarantee industrial workers 40 cents an hour minimum wages when the ragged and underfed workers in our cotton fields are condemned to receive less than 8 cents an hour average wages?

You publish a great newspaper. I urge you to investigate the facts as I have laid them down beside your false premises, and to correct the erroneous and unjust implications of your editorial on cotton.

ELLISON D. SMITH.

[Editor's Note: In printing the above letter The Post does not retract any of the statements made in the editorial referred to, for they were based on reliable information supplied by the Government's own experts on the cotton problem.]

Challenging C. I. O. Gains.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of my brothers is a Chrysler worker, or, in the lexicon of the politician and labor agitator, a wage slave ground down by the heel of capitalism. So downtrodden, in fact, he was only able to support his family (like some thousands of his fellows), pay for a modest home, buy 100 scattered shares of leading stocks and lay an occasional scad on a noseless mustang.

In a recent letter he appraises the magnificent gains realized as a result of alliance between the Government and the C. I. O. He wrote it, I suspect, because in earlier days I had been a pin-headed young zealot in the labor movement with a chip on each shoulder and the material for a flock of them between the ears. He had joined the movement after absorption of much ebullient oratory of the "we gotcha" type. He appraises the gains thus:

1. Twelve months income cut $700 to $1,600.

2. Prospective promotion delayed indefinitely pending return to some semblance of stability.

3. Five weeks of strikes and expenses incident thereto—not omitting the workless leisure during which he might study music, literature, folklore and love of his fellowmen; also peruse one rabble-rouser of the "Government's with us—we can't lose" order. One red pamphlet showing how to get a real cut by grabbing the whole works and splitting executive salaries—where orders would come from and who salvage the ruin being left unexplained; but by inference simple of arrangement by the big shots of the "new order."

4. Elimination of company bonuses paid in previous periods, for payment of which union loud talkers had usurped full credit.

To which he might have added contribution of these strikes toward undermining purchasing power and solidifying today's New Deal depression—and certainty of more workless weeks from the combined causes. G. A. FARSON.

Washington, Feb. 9.

A Netherlands Custom.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a native of the Netherlands, better known here by the name of one of its provinces, Holland, it always irritates me to read news dispatches in which quotations are misspelled. When Princess Juliana gave birth to her baby girl on the last day of January, a news story told in honor of the occasion former Kaiser Wilhelm, who resides at Doorn in hospitable Nederland, had distributed to the members of his household "orange mice." Today's Post shows a picture of little Dutch schoolchildren munching cakes and it is told us that these are "beschuit met misjes."

May I explain? It is an age-old custom in Nederland that when a new baby arrives the parents send to each child of their acquaintance a small net bag of "muisjes." These are tiny candies, the shape of eggs, but so small that it takes 20 or more to fill a teaspoon. They are sugar-coated anise seeds. When the baby is a girl they are smooth, when a boy they are rough. They are delicious, especially when sprinkled on well-buttered "beschuit," which is a toasted bread well known in the United States as Dutch Rusks. They are made from a special bread dough, baked, split and toasted slowly. The addition of the letters "je" in the language of Nederland always indicates a small edition of something large. Therefore "beschuitje" is a small "beschuit."

As in all languages, identically spelled words have different meanings. An American mouse is a Holland-Dutch muis, but that does not mean that a lot of Holland-Dutch muisjes are the same as a bunch of little American mice. The fact that the little princess is a member of the House of Orange accounts no doubt for the orange color of the "muisjes" distributed on this occasion. MRS. M. C. P.

The Post Impressionist

Nuts!

THERE are a lot of people who take a peculiar pleasure in knocking into a cocked hat the ideas and opinions of others and in demolishing things as they are. They are the kind who double on general principles, not on the cards. They take it for granted that there must be something wrong with any idea that many people have held for a long time. "The majority is always wrong." They are the iconoclasts, the debunkers.

They will never let sleeping dogs lie, but are always dragging some beloved, trusted patron saint onto the carpet and summarily expelling him. A few years ago the poet Edgar Lee Masters disgraced himself by trying to debunk Abraham Lincoln. He did not get to first base. Americans do not like to have their heroes tampered with too much. Even if it's true, they don't like it. Sometimes, of course, it may be true, but that makes debunkers all the more irritating to us law-abiding citizens who still believe in Santa Claus and are proud of it.

It is as if someone were to say to you: "Now take this fellow Lindbergh. What did he do? Flew across the ocean alone. Well, why all the fuss about that? I don't think he's so much."

You never felt like socking anyone so much in your life.

* * *

Quite unexpectedly, the other day, I came upon the anonymous tracks of one of these pooh-poohers. I was reading a book at the Library of Congress by an eminent poet-critic and had come to the end of a chapter that had worked up to an eloquent and prophetic climax. I copied it out:

"We face a war to the death on war, and none can afford to be a slacker in it. In this ultimate war the deadliest weapon is the germ of thought in human brains. Only the poet can spawn that germ, and send it flying forth in invisible millions to mature in the minds of men. Cervantes wrote 'Don Quixote,' and suddenly a rotten thing, long ready for death, was dead. Let some poet—or perhaps a number of poets in a number of arts—stab with laughter or scorch with tears the rotten hulk of war, and suddenly the world will know that war is dead."

But someone at the very end had written in lead pencil, "Nuts!" And no one will ever know how many readers have ended the chapter with their mental sails so pathetically deflated.

* * *

Nothing is sacred. Not even Shakespeare. I have always been led to think that Shakespeare's sonnets were something of a paragon, of even "immortal texture" in spite of his departure from Petrarchan standards. In fact, I thought his sonnets ranked with Milton's, Sidney's, Donne's, Mrs. Browning's, Longfellow's, and Edna Millay's. But John Crowe Ransom, professor of poetry at Kenyon College, in the current number of the Southern Review, tells us that Shakespeare's sonnets are "generally ill constructed," that about half of them are seriously defective so far as logical structure is concerned. This is not to say that Mr. Ransom has not some good things to say about Shakespeare, but he calls him a "careless workman" (and us "careless readers"), and I shall never again feel quite the same about the great bard. The idea!

Too, I have for a long time regarded A. E. Housman as a great poet—he who wrote "A Shropshire Lad." I should have been greatly surprised if his poetry did not outlast any of our generation. But now I have been gently pushed off my perch by a few remarks by Louis Kronenberger in a recent issue of The Nation. He says that Housman is not a great poet, that he is sentimental and meager in philosophy, with a "period air" and with the manner of poetry rather than poetry itself, with nothing of the revelations of greater poets, for "he had nothing to give." Not much left of Housman to worry about, so if you have tears . . .

I would not, of course, deny this pleasure of idol-smashing to anyone, least of all to literary critics. It's such fun. I only hope that all the victims of the iconoclasts are as obdurate as I am. I shall doubtless go right on kidding myself in believing that Shakespeare was a great sonneteer and Housman a poet par excellence.

Sometime ago I vowed I would not read "Gone With the Wind." That would be one idol, said I, that would not be shattered. And now, sure enough, Lewis Gannett in Story Magazine intimates that there is something ironically fitting about that book's title and that although it may be worth reading it is hardly worth having around the house very long, and he looks forward with concern to the day when all those million and a half bound copies of "Gone With the Wind" will be wafted back to the secondhand bookstores.

There is nothing like keeping ahead of the debunkers, but what does that make you?

Seeking to determine just how fantastic a woman's hat can be without attracting undue attention, a Hollywood girl ventured forth upon the film city's boulevards wearing a gaudy lampshade bedecked with two artificial flowers, a chain off a bathtub plug, a shoe lace and a rubber band—and was rewarded with no more than ordinary attention.

Her technique was wrong, of course. She should have worn just a modest hat of, say 1933.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Chicago's Tax Dodgers.

BUT FOR Chicago's fine civic honor a rather serious situation might prevail just now. John S. Clark, the county assessor, has undertaken to levy the personal property tax on the basis of the more or less true confession of the citizens as written in their Federal income tax returns.

PEGLER.

He is permitted to consult these intimate documents by authority of an amendment to the Federal law which now makes them available to the officers of local taxing bodies. Formerly they were accessible only to tax commissions of States having the State income tax. Illinois has no State income tax, and the personal property tax, if collected in full, would suffice in its place.

On the basis of the Federal returns Mr. Clark is proceeding in a sort of way to tax as personal property a vast amount of possessions of all kinds, including the plant and equipment of great corporations and their treasure. That is to say, he is going through the preliminary motions of proceeding. He will not proceed far, because the temperament of Chicago and public sentiment are such that any serious attempt to collect taxes would be regarded as grave misconduct in office, and he probably would be impeached.

• • • •

A JURY might even send him to prison for it. Perhaps no other community in the world would understand this, but Chicago does not resent thieving in public office, and has turned loose several distinguished public servants who were shown to be guilty of burglaries committed from the inside.

They were not scorned but forgiven as erring brothers. Yet Chicago people regard a taxpayer as something on the order of a traitor and anyone who attempts to collect taxes, other than Federal, as a subversive influence.

On Mr. Clark's list one firm which appeared to have no property at all in 1936 is accused of having possessed $414,000 worth in 1937. Another, which reported $857 worth of this world's goods in 1936, is now listed at $2,746,000. These are just samples, and Mr. Clark strongly dissents from the dissenting opinion of Mr. Justice Hugo Black, who changed from a white night shirt to a black one as destiny beckoned him on, that a corporation has no personality.

• • • •

MR. CLARK also has accused most of the civic leaders and rich men of the county of dodging their personal taxes—which is true, of course, because that is one of the most honored customs of the country. He showed a little snobbery there, incidentally, because the poor and middlers also have dodged their taxes just as faithfully as the rich.

After all, a poor man or a middle class man deserves the same credit for good citizenship as a rich man in this democracy, and their groups can look Mr. Clark square in the eye and defy him to show where they ever paid any more in proportion to their means than the most distinguished aristocrat in town.

In the matter of dodging the personal property tax all Chicago has kept the faith for many years, and there are many proud citizens who can take their oath that they never paid a dollar in their lives. These are zealots, however. The average run have been content to pay a nominal amount, based on a nominal appraisal of their own reckoning.

Fortunately, even if Mr. Clark were serious, it would be impossible for him to achieve his foul purpose, because it has been so long since anybody did pay the full rate on a full appraisal that there is nobody left in Chicago who can remember how to reckon a full tax. Mr. Clark's department, therefore, lacks the talent and the machinery for his purpose—if, indeed, a Chicago assessor can seriously entertain such a purpose.

Mr. Clark's department has wiped out thousands of small delinquent accounts, in vindication of the sacred local tradition against taxes, on the ground that it would be too much trouble to collect them. Therefore, even if he had the talent and the machinery to pursue his plan those who were called on to pay could fault him in the courts for discrimination. He will never get away with this dirty work.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

"The Specialist."

One of the country's graduate medical schools has come over for fewer and more bona fide "specialists" in the medical profession. Which brings up the point that it is getting harder and harder in this country to find a physician who is just an all-around doctor.

• • •

A fellow who feels sick "all over" is up against it today. Very few doctors take in that much territory any more.

• • •

Can you remember when, no matter how you felt, you just called the family doctor and didn't have to contact him through an office staff?

• • •

If you had a head cold you called in almost any competent doctor. Today you have to call a specialist in head colds and if it gets to your throat he has to drop you and turn you over to a throat specialist.

• • •

The minute it gets to your chest the throat specialist explains that it's out of his territory and you have to consult a chest man. And so on.

• • •

The day seems to be over when you could just get two general practitioners and have one start at each end to save time.

• • •

Once you get to a specialist the old-time neighborly and human touch goes out the window. He erects a barrier of antechambers, suboffices, filing cabinets and waiting rooms.

• • •

Even his private secretaries and nurses have difficulty reaching him at times.

• • •

All you can do is make an appointment for some year at an hour that suits him and then just look over the National Geographic for a few months until your turn comes.

• • •

Rep. Fulpan Emerges Loser In Bugle's Contest.

By Louis M. Jiggitts.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Detour.
Jan. 19, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I have been invited to address the Petunia Ladies Upward and Onward Club on the subject of Government reorganization. I am anxious to prepare a worth-while paper not only in my own behalf but for the sake of Detour, as I feel that I am representing the ladies here. I know you would not want me to let the ladies down and so I am asking you to tell me just how you expect to reorganize the Government as soon as possible.

I know you will be interested to learn that the Verbena County weekly Bugle and Gazette is holding a contest to select the Verbena County Poet Laureate for 1938. My good friend, Mrs. Carmen Squalls, is representing Detour and I hope you will help her. Yours truly,

(MISS) PRUDY PRIMM.

Miss Prudy Primm,
Detour.

Dear Miss Primm:

I appreciate your very interesting communication requesting information on the proposed Government reorganization. I have been giving this highly important subject my most serious consideration for some months and I am happy to report progress.

The specific problem which is commanding most of my attention for the moment is how to give the executive branch of the Government certain desired authority without encroaching upon the long-established prerogatives and constitutional powers of Congress. I expect to solve the question shortly and shall be glad to give you any specific information you may desire. You may expect me to speak quite openly and frankly in answer to any question. I have never let a constituent down.

I shall be interested in learning of the outcome of the contest for poet laureate. Please convey my regards to my good friends, Mr. and Mrs. Squalls. Yours very sincerely,

CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Detour,
Jan. 24, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I don't have to give the address for three weeks so you will have time to tell me all about the subject. I don't know any particular questions to ask. I just want to know how you expect to reform the Government and if you think it can be done. They have been talking about it a year and haven't done anything yet. Why? Please let me know as soon as you make up their minds.

The poet laureate contest is getting everybody excited. As you know, Miss Pinky Tulepp of Morning Glory, Mrs. Fannie Sitz of Petunia, and Mrs. Carmen Squalls of Detour have entered the contest. The way the votes are counted is that for each one-year subscription 1,000,000 votes, for a two-year subscription 5,000,000 votes, and a three-year subscription 10,000,000 votes. And I want you to take our a subscription in favor of Mrs. Squalls.

Mrs. Squalls said the editor has just asked her to contribute a poem and she guesses he will ask the other two to, too. I let you know this so you can be on your guard, as I know you will want to see them.

What are the Congressional prerogatives and constitutional powers you don't want to get encroached on? Yours truly,

(MISS) PRUDY PRIMM.

Washington, D. C.
Jan. 27, 1938.

Miss Prudy Primm,
Detour.

My dear Miss Primm:

I regret that the other leaders have demanded the Congressman's presence in a conference on a very important and highly technical matter today. I am sure that you can sympathize with him during these days when he and the other leaders have hardly solved one crisis before another confronts them, but in his absence I am delighted to answer your inquiries. You want to know if he expects to reform the Government. I am glad to inform you that he is hopeful, but with conditions in Washington as they are now he is fearful that the task may prove difficult even for him.

You want to know what Congressional prerogatives and constitutional powers are. They are such things as to appropriate money and say where it is supposed to go and to investigate when it doesn't; to levy more taxes to pay for more appropriations; to pass general laws not encroaching on the States any more than the Supreme Court will let them; to send mail free; to get free haircuts; and if you are a member of the Senate to appoint postmasters, while if you are in the Senate to appoint WPA, FHA, TVA, AAA, etc., employes. There are some other prerogatives, but this will give you an idea of the more important ones.

CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

I regret that the Congressman is already a subscriber of the Verbena County Weekly Bugle and Gazette.

You want to know why they have been talking about reform for a year and haven't done anything. This is another one of the prerogatives.

Assuring you that the Congressman will be delighted to let you know as soon as he has made up in mind, I am yours sincerely,

WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Detour,
Jan. 29, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan: The poet laureate contest has got so exciting you can forget about trying to reform the Government. I am not going to Petunia, as the poetry contest has aroused the home towns of the contestants so much that it has become a matter of city price. Detour is determined to elect Mrs. Squalls and as all the ladies are so excited about it I don't feel like talking to the Petunia ladies now about something like our Government.

As you know, Mr. Sam Squalls owns and operates the Detour Poultry and Pillow Feathers Co. and he is giving away a sack of pillow feathers to everybody who takes out a subscription in favor of his wife. He said he didn't quite understand all his wife's poetry and wasn't so sure she did herself sometimes, but if she wants to be poet laureate he is going to see that she gets it if he has to give away every feather in his store.

Miss Fannie Blotz, who is still mad about you not giving her the postoffice here, said she is not surprised that you are not taking a subscription and that people here would remember it when you come up for re-election. Yours truly,

(MISS) PRUDY PRIMM.

Washington, D. C.
Feb. 1, 1938.

Miss Prudy Primm,
Detour.

My dear Miss Primm: I regret that the Congressman has had to return to conference, but I am glad to inform you that he instructed me to subscribe to the Verbena Weekly Bugle and Gazette in Mrs. Carmen Squalls' behalf.

He is sorry that Miss Blotz is mad about him, but of course he feels confident of re-election regardless and says he is not worried about Detour.

I hope you will keep us informed about the interesting contest. The Congressman greatly admires the poetic abilities of the three distinguished ladies involved in it. Yours sincerely,

WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Detour,
Feb. 3, 1938.

Congressmen Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I told Miss Blotz about you not being worried about Detour or her and she told Mr. Hawks, who is even madder than she is about you appointing Mr. Zeke Zeegler postmaster instead of him and he said you'd see whether you worried about Detour. He said he was going to tell everybody.

But I am glad to tell you that you made Mr. Squalls happy and he said he was certainly going to be for you. He wants to know if you want him to send the sack of feathers to Washington.

I am sending you a clipping from the Verbena County Weekly Bugle and Gazette of February 1, in case you haven't seen it. Your friend, (MISS) PRUDY PRIM.

By Mrs. O. Fuller Rimes, Special Poetry & Dramatic Critic.

The contest for Poet Laureate of Verbena County sponsored by the Verbena County Weekly Bugle & Gazette is creating unprecedented interest throughout the State. Requests for new subscriptions are pouring in and votes for the contestants are steadily mounting. From every section of Verbena County, from widely separated parts of the State, and even from the Nation's Capital have come requests for subscriptions with direction to accredit the allotted votes to one or the other of the highly talented contestants.

Not in the long course of its distinguished history has the circulation of the Verbena County Weekly Bugle & Gazette mounted so rapidly in such a short period as it has since the start of this greatly intriguing contest. To be exact the number of new subscriptions, some one, some two and some three years, has reached the two century mark less one. That the two century mark will be broken momentarily is confidently expected as patriotic friends of the contestants light-heartedly search for new subscribers.

The editor has requested the contestants to contribute to this week's edition, which they have graciously condescended to do. In keeping with his policy to arouse the Nation's interest in its Government and to make the people "Congress conscious" the editor requested the distinguished poets to make Congress or Congressmen the subject of their poems. He has always contended that it is deprecating for the people and Congress to remain unconscious.

Miss Pinky Tulepp, the talented muse of Morning Glory, contributed a beautiful poem in her distinctive style, which she calls Rythmatic Resolution, being poignant poesy with a point, entitled "Heed, Congress, or Else," as follows:

WHEREAS, we admit that in the past
We sometimes didn't vote,
WHEREAS, now be it known at last
We are starting to take note.

WHEREAS, pressure groups make us sick
For they only help themselves,
WHEREAS, we'll now strike a lick
We people will help ourselves.

NOW, THEREFORE, Be It Resolved by all
On Congressmen we'll take notes,
And if they heed not the people's call
We'll unseat them with our votes.

Mrs. Fannie Sitz, the noted poet of Petunia, contributed an excellent poem in her own entrancing style which she calls a diminutive octant, being an airy little eight-lined poem entitled "Regret," which follows:

With plenty here
And plenty there
There's nothing free
Except the air.
But this costs, too,
As I and you
Pay Congressmen
For hot air, too.

Mrs. Carmen Squalls, talented decanter of Detour, contributed a splendid poem, which she says is from her "Father Gander Rhymes for Adolescent Adults." She called attention to the fact that this particular poem was created at the time the Supreme Court bill was defeated, but that she feels it may be timely at most any time in these critical times. It is entitled "A Split," which follows:

As Congress jumped over the trace.
A Republican laughed in a Democrat's face
As the leaders ran round in a dace.

Mrs. Squalls carefully explained that she was compelled to exercise her poet's license on the last word, which in prose would ordinarily be spelled as "daze."

Friends of contestants are here reminded that the contest closes promptly at midnight February 4, 1938, and no votes will be counted after that date. Subscriptions, of course, will be acceptable at all times, but the contestants will not receive credit after the above date.

This is the last call for votes. In four more days we will know which of the brilliant poets will wear the laurel during 1938.

Miss Prudy Primm,
Detour.

Dear Miss Primm:

I hasten to reply to your most recent letter. I am afraid that my very able secretary's letter has created the wrong impression. Of course, I am concerned about Detour and its wonderful citizens. While I am not worried as to the ultimate outcome of the ensuing campaign, I am certainly deeply interested in the attitude of my many fine Detour constituents. Please inform my numerous friends of your splendid city that I look forward with the greatest pleasure to seeing them again this summer.

I am very interested in the poet laureate contest and shall be pleased to learn of the results. Your friend,

CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Detour,
Feb. 8, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

Well. That's all I feel like saying—well. I guess you know Mrs. Fannie Sitz won the contest and has been crowned poet laureate of Verbena County for 1938. And it's all your fault. Mr. Hezekiah Hawks came back from a visit to Petunia yesterday and told us he found out you had given a three-year subscription to Mrs. Fannie Sitz, while you gave only a one-year subscription to Mrs. Squalls. The final vote was: Mrs. Sitz, 408,000,000; Mrs. Squalls, 400,000,000; Miss Tulepp, 102,000,000. So you see if you had given Mrs. Squalls a three-year subscription she would have beat Mrs. Sitz by 1,000,000 votes.

Everybody here is just waiting for this summer. Mr. Hawks even said he'd be glad to furnish the tar to go with the feathers Mr. Squalls is holding for you. Yours,

(MISS) PRUDY PRIMM.

Miss Prudy Primm,
Detour.

My dear Miss Primm:

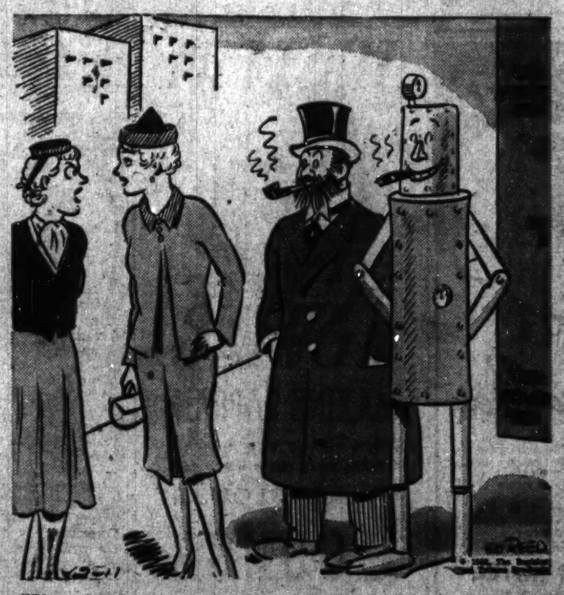
I regret that the Congressman has had to retire with a very severe headache. But I feel practically certain that he will not care to accept Mr. Hawks' offer.

Assuring you it is always a pleasure to serve the Congressman's constituents, I am yours sincerely,

WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Off the Record

By Ed Reed



"You should have known better than to ask that inventor to bring along a friend."

Francophile

By Didier Lazard.

Mr. Greenwall's Labor Of Love.

POETS, IT HAS BEEN SAID, are they who receive from things stronger impressions than other men do. According to this definition, Mr. Harry J. Greenwall is undoubtedly a poet. He does more than describe the "face" of France. In his travels through all of France he has observed, beneath the surfaces of both things and people, what nobody had noticed before. His understanding of France is the product of a precise observation, an acute psychological analysis, a vast historical knowledge and a delightful British sense of humor. It is not strange that the French government should have awarded its International Travel Prize to him for the best book on France written by a foreigner.

Mr. Greenwall has an easy style and is always interesting. He is familiar with every kind of sport, either as a participant or spectator. His gastronomic knowledge is not less remarkable. In any given part of the country he tells you exactly what dishes to order, which wines to drink and where to have your lunch or dinner. Here you must go to a de luxe restaurant, there you need just drop in at a certain small cafe, in another place the farm around the corner will provide you with all you may wish.

• • • •

BUT MORE IMPORTANT than this is his psychological understanding of Frenchmen. It is amazing in how few words Mr. Greenwall can give life to people in every walk of society. Peasants at a wedding, the mayor of a village, the customers of the best hotel in a small town, the cure in his house, the civil servant, the army officer, the jockey, the postman—all these he describes vividly. He knows how they work, how they think and how they live in their cottages, their flats, their factories and their cafes.

He knows what newspapers they read, what people they see and what their pleasures are. He knows, too, that unchangingness is a feature of France, that people there have led the same lives for centuries and centuries, dwelling in the same stone houses and working in the same fields generation after generation. "The grandfathers were there long before you passed this way and the grandchildren will be there long after you have passed on. This is France." He knows that "people who live close to the soil are the real people, even though they may not be conscious of their own history."

For Mr. Greenwall always remembers history. Beyond the landscapes and the monuments he sees all the human background of love and pain, life and death, peace and war. He looks at everything with the mind's eye and repeoples the cities, castles and cathedrals with the ghosts of their former inhabitants. It does not matter whether individuals or groups are concerned; or whether the main events have taken place a few years or many centuries ago; he brings them to mind with the same ease and the same accuracy. "Is it possible," he says, "that all the history, the wars, invasions and burnings—just as the troubadours and their beautiful ladies—have passed away without leaving something behind, something indefinite perhaps, but something physical or mental, that lives today in the life-blood of the people?"

BUT OFTEN the historian and poet give way to the wit. There is no chapter that is not replete with satirical observation or delightful stories. The "5 o'clock tea at any time," the 40 establishments selling, each one, the only genuine Montelimar nougat, or the fight for life against street cars in the tram-infested streets of Bordeaux, are among the best examples of British humor. If you know anything about France, it is positively impossible to keep a straight face in reading these pages.

Mr. Greenwall, who has studied the various faces of France for many years, openly loves that country. Although "the beauties and the attractions of France have to be personally investigated to be properly appreciated," his book, written to "help the French to explain themselves, their points of view, their philosophy," will be read with the utmost interest and pleasure by all those who know France already or expect to visit it.

"THE FACE OF FRANCE," by Harry J. Greenwall. (Funk & Wagnalls, $2.50.)

"Love, Faith, Light"

By John Willard

DR. JOSEPH A. LEIGHTON, professor of philosophy at Ohio State University, has arisen to remind us that the collectivized state is not a threat, but an actuality that must be dealt with here and now. The problem, he thinks, is how to make this existing and increasing collectivism compatible with the social and spiritual necessities and desires of man.

Dr. Leighton discusses the Fascist, Nazi and Communist dictatorships, reviewing their origins and present organization. He sifts a wide range of data to prove that they do not solve human problems, that standards of living under the dictators are low and falling (except for a possibly slight rise in Russia) and that their philosophies are false. He draws the conclusion that "the proposal that we should do best to adopt communism is foolish in the extreme." Though he says it is doubtful that fascism is any worse than communism, he rejects the former without ado because he finds in Russia at least a potential object lesson for other nations.

Calling forth a mass of facts and figures, Prof. Leighton paints a gloomy picture of our present society. He cites extensively the studies of the Brookings Institution, the National Industrial Conference Board, Berle and Means, and Loeb Associates to show the extent of concentration, the very slow progress of the masses, and the plenty which could be ours if the economic system were better organized. What, then, he asks, must we do, in view of the fact that unrestricted capitalism is dead, economic individualism bankrupt, the middle class on the decline, and our democracy "hobbled?"

NO PERSON knows the answer. It can be found only by experiment. Social science and natural science must be synthetized after extensive experimentation to the end that society will have solid foundations upon which can be built a co-operative democracy, the ethos of which must be "compacted of three spiritual powers—love, faith and intellectual light." Through love will be seen "the essential pathos and dignity of persons," by faith, which is born of love, he means "an active confidence in the possibilities of human progress;" by intellectual light "the light of reason." These elements can be found in Matthew Arnold's synthesis of Hebraism and Hellenism, and, of course, in Christianity.

Experiment does not have to be blind. Collective factors in our present society, such as corporations, labor unions, churches, and many other group manifestations of human activity, are instruments with which to work and offer means for intelligent social experiment. If instead of using them we float along in some escapist ideology, dictatorship and human repression is inevitable. Experiment may be slow and costly, but that is the price we must pay.

Without going too much in detail concerning practical measures, Dr. Leighton suggests that natural monopolies should undoubtedly be nationalized and that, where it is probable that Government ownership or control would be to the interests of the people, large industries should likewise be subjected at least to Government regulation. Co-operatives should be encouraged, speculation and "financial wizardry" curbed, and corporations whose managements are divorced from ownership rigidly regulated.

• • • •

PROF. LEIGHTON does not trouble himself with ultra-logical economic theories. He looks rather at social man and envisages a humanistic society which will offer the spirit an opportunity for full realization of its powers.

Tom McCarthy

Chain Bridge.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT looked at it from the Maryland side. And the six of us in the store looked at it from the Virginia side. There was a very select audience. But the event had its importance. They were putting the last bit of steel into the new Chain Bridge.

Nobody knew exactly what the President felt, although District Engineer James J. Sweeney claimed the President was satisfied. However, it was quite certain that Joe Merritt, who remembers the old Chain Bridge across the Potomac when it saw nothing but horses and men, was well pleased.

McCARTHY.

Mr. Sweeney, District engineer, supplied the facts, as the sun sank lower on the Potomac, and for those interested it may be well to record them. Nearly 3,000,000 pounds of steel have gone into the framework of the new bridge. It is 1,319 feet long.

"The most wonderful thing," said Mr. Sweeney, slipping off his windbreaker to make room for a suit of clothes, "is the fact that the old stone abutments, built in the seventies, are still good.

You see, although the new Chain Bridge, between Maryland and Virginia across the Potomac, is very new they're still holding to the old foundations, laid years ago.

"We had to build them up a bit," said Engineer Sweeney, "but they were solid."

According to the District engineer they built things to last in those days. The stone piers, which support the bridge, were built of Potomac blue stone and given a core of concrete.

"The masons told me," said Engineer Sweeney, "that the blue stone was four to six times as hard as granite. To look at it you'd think it had been put up last week. But it's stone right out of the river that was thrown up there in the seventies. And you can still see the marks of the chisels on it."

• • • •

THE REAL romance in the new Chain Bridge came from Lyndon Kirkley, who works for the steel company charged with putting up the frame for the new bridge.

"We're almost through," he said, "and it's always fun to finish up a job."

He was a young man, with thin lips and a leanness to him, and a ready smile.

"Sure," he said, "there's some romance in these jobs, look!"

He pointed to the rivet thrower stationed on a wooden platform above the steel of the bridge. The rivet thrower thrust black iron tongs into a salamander, came out with a red-hot and smoking rivet, and brought it around in a graceful arc. The hot rivet soared through the air. A broad-shouldered guy with thick gloves brought up a little rusted pail, . . . and caught it.

"There's excitement in these jobs," he said.

"Will the boys celebrate tonight?" I asked.

"Some of them will," he said, "and some of them will plan to drift South, but there's no real celebration because the next job is still a problem."

It seems that while steel workers, called "bridgemen," get as much as $70 a week, they never know when, and where, their next job will turn up.

But they're a peculiar craft, according to Mr. Kirkley. The best of them are known from coast-to-coast. They are fairly young men, who average 35 years of age. They are known as "Mike" and "Red" by the steel bosses of the country. And the best of them can work as well hanging by their knees a hundred feet in the air, as most men can on solid ground.

"To be a good bridge man," he said, "you've got to get over being afraid of heights. Of course we wear special shoes. They have a tread like a tire. They're shoes of rubber and cotton, with a tread.

ABOUT 45 bridgemen put the 2- to 36-ton girders in place out at the Chain Bridge. They wore hard fiber hats so when they were walking under the bridge they wouldn't feel too hurt if they got conked on the head by falling tools. And they all felt that it was a lucky job, because nobody was badly hurt.

The concrete paving of the bridge will begin soon, and it should be open by June. And the fellow who runs the store on the Virginia side of the bridge is looking to increased profits. But as he says, "I'd rather lose for a year, and then be okay, than be tied up by every spring flood." The new bridge, it seems, isn't in much danger of washing away.

• • • •

THE VARIOUS remarks about the difficulties of walking the steel girders persuaded this columnist to try it. About half-way across a young fellow from West Virginia drifted by with a pail of acid.

"What're you doing?" I asked.

"I paint the rivets," he said, "with the friendliness born of standing 60 feet above the river, on a half a foot of steel.

"Do you get nervous?"

"Not anymore," he said, "because if I trip, I also grab."

That gave me something to think about. Particularly when a little guy in a windbreaker came up and told me to get off the girders.

"I won't fall," I said, not daring to look down, and not commenting on the wind which kept shifting around and jostling me at the shoulders.

"You'd better get off," he said.

"Comin' through," yelled two guys toting a load of iron. I stepped off on a side girder.

"You don't need to worry about me," I told the little guy as I balanced above the rocks along the river.

"What the hell do I do now," I asked the little guy.

"You get out of the way," he said.

And so I moved over about 6 inches, and that's why there isn't any column today!

Emblem Contest Entries Pouring In

Entries for the emblem contest arranged by the Federation of Business Men's Associations and The Washington Post still are pouring in. The number of entries is expected to reach several hundred before Tuesday midnight, the deadline.

The winning emblem, which must be colored in blue and gold, will be displayed in the windows of every member of the federation, which numbers more than 3,000.

First prize is $25. The judges are Mrs. John Allen Daugherty, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Theodore S. Grape and C. Powell Minnigerode, of the Corcoran Gallery of Art. The contest is open to all but members of the federation or employes of The Washington Post.

Digging forensic barbs into State medicine, Group Health Association and the committee of 430 physicians who signed a medical "declaration of independence," Dr. Morris Fishbein entertained a capacity audience of 1,000 last night at Georgetown University.

The editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association asserted that Group Health Association, Inc., set up here with HOLC funds, was the brain child of the late Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant, and that Filene lived to regret it.

He chided the Federal Government, for spending $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 annually on health functions without having a Department of Health. He deprecated the national health survey recently completed by the Public Health Service as a WPA project. He pointed out that 750,000 of the Nation's 2,000,000 hospital beds are owned, managed and controlled by the States, and strongly opposed Federal subsidization of medical schools or hospitals.

Cites Low Death Rate.

"Today under our system of medical care," he said, "we have the lowest rates for death, for infant mortality, and for most of the infectious diseases that prevail anywhere in the world. It has been said that this is largely a reflection of the superior standard of living of our people.

"Perhaps it is. But the character and the quality of our medical service must be considered a part of these living conditions."

A department of health was first proposed in 1875, he said, but today the nation is no nearer that goal than the pending bill to create a department of welfare, which would blanket together relief, education and health.

Minimizes WPA Survey.

He minimized the practical value of the WPA health survey, which canvassed some 750,000 families over a two-year period, on the ground that only experts who could qualify as diagnosticians and psychologists could make such an undertaking worth while, not relief workers.

Group health plans of one kind or another are not new, he said, but to date they haven't worked. One of the reasons they are unsuccessful, he continued, is that inevitably they must increase the fees to pay costs of operation or else cut the quality of service to fit the budget.

The Committee of Physicians' "declaration of independence" got as many signatures as it did "because we as a nation love to sign our names," he declared.

Sees Ulterior Motive.

"The principles and proposals emanating from the studies of the American Foundation Studies in Government are significant only because some 430 and perhaps even 760 physicians saw fit to indorse them," Dr. Fishbein asserted.

"Today we know that these principles and proposals, heralded as a 'revolt' in the American Medical Association, were designed to impress the Government with the view that the American Medical Association is disorganized, not representative of medical thought throughout the Nation and opposed to the best interests of the people.

"If that was their purpose they have failed dismally."

He said Group Health Association, Inc., "is not well established and is predicated upon a plan that cannot possibly yield good medical service."

Scientific experimentation on the medical care problem is salutary, he said, but he G. H. A. plan is doomed to failure. A good representation of the Group Health Association membership was present last night and several audience questioners prodded him on his assertions.

Leibowitz and Murder Defendant

Samuel Leibowitz (left), New York criminal lawyer, talks to his client, Duncan H. Ladd, on trial at New Haven, Conn., for the slaying of Michael Di Leo, Meriden barber. Leibowitz announced that he would contend Ladd, who has admitted the killing, had no "criminal intent" in killing Di Leo because the barber became "too friendly" with his wife.

26 More Seized Here in War on Undesirables

Majority Have Records; All to Go Before Police Line-Up Tonight.

Police arrested 26 colored men yesterday in continuation of a drive to make the city "unhealthy for undesirables." Most of them had police records.

Together with 14 arrested Wednesday they will be placed in a line-up at police headquarters tonight at which 150 victims of holdups, pocketbook snatching and other crimes will view them.

Under Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, detectives raided cheap rooming houses, beer and pool halls to sweep up all petty criminals.

"Washington is not having a crime wave, we are just making the city unhealthy for undesirables," Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police said.

He added that orders to round up the undesirables emanated from a recent meeting with the District Commissioners, and is in line with the department's recent plea for a law to require all persons with criminal records to report to police upon entering the city.

Fifteen of the men were arrested in a hall in the 800 block of Fourth street northwest, four in a hall in the 400 block of G place northwest, and three in a rooming house in the 800 block of Second street northwest.

Prayers Asked For Niemoller

All Washington ministers were called upon yesterday to offer prayers for the Rev. Martin Niemoller, anti-Nazi clergyman on trial in Germany, and for "Christian liberty in Germany."

The summons to prayer came from the Federal Council of Churches' department of relations with churches abroad. In a telegram to the Rev. W. L. Darby, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, an organization of more than 130 member churches, the department said:

Shoemaker Held in 5 Silk Stocking Killings

Brussels, Feb. 10 (AP).—A 27-year-old shoemaker was held today in connection with the death of five women who were found bound and strangled with their own silk stockings.

Edouard Bru was charged with three murders—two by strangulation and one by shooting—while police of Antwerp, Ghent and Liege sought to connect him with similar stocking murders. Bru's wife was held on a charge of complicity. Police said less than $60 was obtained from the slain women.

Soviet Warns Estonia After Clash at Border

Moscow, Feb 10 (AP).—The Russian Minister to Estonia was instructed tonight to protest against alleged violation of Soviet territory by three Estonian frontier guards near Lake Peipus.

A government communique charged the Estonians came about a quarter of a mile into Russian territory with intention of kidnaping Soviet fishermen on the lake. (In the same region two members of the Russian border patrol were killed in a clash with Estonian guards January 20.)

Playwright Who Made 2 Fortunes Dies Poor

Quincy, Ill., Feb. 10 (AP).—Charles T. Dazey, who friends said made two fortunes from his play "In Old Kentucky" and died a poor man, will be buried here Saturday. The 82-year-old playwright, who continued his writings until several weeks ago, died last night.

"In Old Kentucky" was filmed in 1935 starring the late Will Rogers.

Mrs. Mary Clark Dies.

Salt Lake City, Feb. 10 (AP).—Mrs. Mary Louisa Wolley Clark, 89, mother J. Reuben Clark, jr., first counselor in the Latter Day Saints Church first presidency and former United States Ambassador to Mexico, died here today.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation presents the Roth String Quartet (Feri Roth, Jeno Antal, Ferencz Molnar and Janos Scholz) in the Library of Congress chamber music auditorium Thursday night. Program: Die Kunst de Fuge: Contrapunctus I-V (Bach), Quartet No. 4 (Quincy Porter), Quartet No. 14 in G (Mozart).

Beginning the exposition of Bach's "The Art of the Fugue," which is to be continued in two concerts Fer Roth and his associates played last evening with a precision and clarity worthy of admiration. The division of the composition into three sections for separate performances is, of course, a disruption of its continuity and logical unfolding, but there is justification for the procedure from the viewpoint of auditors who might feel a certain strain of attention in listening to the complete work without interruption.

Bach probably intended this masterly exemplification of the different ways in which a single subject can be fugally treated as a composition for the clavier, but its richness of matter has inevitably tempted arrangers to try its resources on other instruments and combinations of instruments. The version which is now under consideration was made by Roy Harris and M. D. Herter Norton, and has undergone some criticism on technical points which would be of no interest to the average music lover.

It was a wide jump from 1750, the date of "The Art of the Fugue," to 1931, the year of Quincy Porter's fourth string quartet, and in that chronological gap many things happened to music. Yet Mr. Porter's logic is as strict as Bach's, even though his idiom is variant. His musical thought is expressed with conciseness, and there is nothing vague about his intention. Primarily an intellectual composer who finds pleasure in the development of ideas rather than in the coloring of tones, he is nevertheless with poesy, none but a poetic impulse could have dictated the atmospheric slow movement, which is so subtle in implications as to remind one of Debussy.

The G major quartet of Mozart, the first of the six dedicated to Haydn, was a most satisfactory close of an interesting concert. Its seriousness, so remote from the gallant syle which he easily assumed, is an integral part of its beauty. The exaltation of the slow movement almost attains the height reached by Beethoven in his later works.

Model Farmstead To Be Shown Today At Greenbelt, Md.

A model farmstead, erected at Greenbelt, Md., Uncle Sam's housing development, will be open for public inspection, beginning today at 11 a. m., the Farm Security Administration announced yesterday.

The farmstead includes a residence, a barn, henhouse, smokehouse and outdoor toilet—all prefabricated. The exhibition provides an example of the use of steel in producing low-cost farm buildings, according to Robert Gregg, president of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., of Birmingham, Ala., which erected the buildings.

Mathis Club Will Hold Its Card Party Tonight

The Mathis Club, which helps support mission work of the Holy Cross Fathers of Notre Dame, Ind., in Decca, Bengal, India, will hold its fourteenth annual card party and dance at the Mayflower Hotel tonight.

Patrons will be Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Justice and Mrs. Pierce Butler, Postmaster General and Mrs. James Farley, Senators David I. Walsh, Sherman Minton, Frederick Van Nuys and Augustine Lonergan; Representatives Mary T. Norton, J. J. McGrath and Patrick Boland; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose O'Connell and Joseph Tumulty.

Delbert J. Mott Rites Held Here

Funeral services were held in Lee's chapel for Delberd J. Mott, a Washington resident for 40 years, who died Sunday at St. Petersburg, Fla. Burial was in Mt. Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Mott, who was 78, came to Washington from Nebraska in the early '90s with his brother-in-law, United States Senator William Allen, of Nebraska. After serving as Allen's secreatary, Mr. Mott took a position in the office of the architect of the Capitol. He was on a leave of absence when he died in St. Petersburg.

He is survived by his wife, the former Elizabeth McCormick.

It's Party Night Every Night at Pall Mall Room

Raleigh Hotel to Be Scene of Valentine and Military Events.

By Chanticleer

It's party night every night next week at the Raleigh's Pall Mall Room. The Valentine Party is Monday night, the Military Night Tuesday, and "Moon Over Miami" on Wednesday. On Valentine Night there will be a shower of ballons, each of them numbered, and a lucky number will win a prize. The new new dance team opening on Moonday is Vasilo and Yoanne.

Minute steaks a la Jacques Hearinger—in other words, minute steaks, tender and juicy as only prime beef prepared by the Shorehani's chef can be—are on the dinner menu in the Blue Room at the Shoreham every night. There is no cover charge for dinner guests and the floor show includes that sensational adagio team, Orville Stam and Martha LaRue, in the "Tarzan" dance.

These midwinter spring evenings mean only one thing to Madrillon customers—an opportunity to forget income tax worries and other troubles in the pleasant atmosphere. There Johnny Shaw will entertain with some new arrangement of old lilting tunes, and the chef will serve you perfectly seasoned food with a Spanish flavor. Recommended this week is venison steak with mushroom caps served with fluffy wild rice. The venison, of course, is cooked in wine.

First Lady of Swing.

Maxine Tappan, the first lady of swing, adds tempo and rhythm to your favorite lullaby at the Mayflower lounge each night with Sidney's orchestra. Last night in duo with handsome Bobby Simpson, the air tingled with "I'm in the Mood for Love." Incidentally each Thursday Maxine can be heard on the N. B. C. network at 8:15 and on Saturday is the featured singer at the Thrift Club Frolic held for charity.

Helen Green has been back only three days but Washington opinion, as sounded out by Chanticleer's ace reporter, finds most of her fans are impressed. The Miss Washington of 1937, after her fling on Broadway as mistress of ceremonies at the Hollywood Restaurant, is more attractive than ever.

Anything for an angle is the slogan at the Mayfair this week. Candid camera fiends are finding Beverly Stull and Perry Martin perfect subjects. The contest continues for three days and the prize is $10, so you still have a chance. Even if you don't win, you'll not lose on one of Beverly Stull's infectious smiles.

What is Milt Davis's system for remembering names? Many statesmen would like to know. This genial maestro at the Hamilton Rainbow Room has a knack of greeting people by their first names even when they haven't been in for some time.

Specialities are flung about thick in the floor show at the Lotus this week. Johnnett and Kalan, here from a long engagement at Roxy's in New York, do clever tap routines. Also, the Renny Brothers and the Mayband trio with the Eight Miracle Delovelies of 1938 add glamour.

The Big Moment.

The big moment at the Bamboo Gardens this week is when the entire ensemble of dancing gals swing out with skirts, hoops, and headdresses studded with light bulbs. This number is only one of several attractions in the Winter Garden Revue featured there this week.

Friends of the Three M's at the Hi-Hat have only this week to enjoy their favorite entertainers. They leave Saturday.

For the second time rumor has recahed us that the lovely Dale Sherman, whose throaty contralto thrills patrons nightly at the Carlton's Shar-Zad is not as fancy free as she'd have you think. Wonder who the lucky boy is that Dale is interested in?

The other night at the Shar-Zad, Jimmy Walker, former Mayor of New York, held the spotlight, much to the delight of the orchestra and assembled guests. He took the place of Arthur Ferguson at the piano.

Our nomination for the hardest working orchestra and leader is Paul Kain and his boys out at the Wardman Park. They rehearse every afternoon for three hours, and on the nights they broadcast (twice a week) an extra hour is added to the schedule.

At Mayflower Lounge

Two More Penguins 'Sitting' At Zoo, but They Have No Egg

Officials, Who Already Shared the Hopes of Mollie and Moe, Now Speculate on Chances of Another Blessed Event.

Mollie and Moe have competition.

The other pair of penguins began sitting yesterday at the Zoo. No eggs to sit on yet but both birds optimistic.

Already the situation has formed visions of a housing problem in the minds of keepers. While counting no penguins before they are hatched the Zoo is wondering if the air-conditioned Antarctic department won't be just a wee bit crowded when and if the stork arrives.

As though envious of the publicity received by Mollie and Moe since the sit-down was disclosed in The Post last Saturday, the other pair—shall we call them Tux and Ada?—showed they, too, mean business when they climbed onto the nest and squatted.

The nest has been building several days, but it wasn't until yesterday that either Tux or Ada got down to cases. An egg is expected any day. Mollie has two to her credit.

Throughout the day, while delighted crowds viewed the goings-on through the thick plate glass window, the two pairs of penguins sat upon or stood close by their respective treasures and exchanged jealous glances with each other. If you go out to the birdhouse to see them, Mollie and Moe are on the extreme left, Tux and Ada on the opposite end.

Forgotten man of the colony was Thumb II, who may be so called because he is about that important with things as they are. All dressed up, but with no place to go, he stands upon a ledge, feebly attempting to look superior and oh, so bored with it all.

Thumb II's mate died several months ago, otherwise he too might be looking forward to the patter of little feet. Anyway, we think he is a he, because Malcolm Davis, bird keeper, says the thinks the males are those with the straighter bills and Thumb II's is quite straight indeed.

$14,465,914 Allotted By RFC in January

Authorizations and commitments of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in the recovery program during January amounted to $14,465,914; rescissions of previous authorizations and commitments amounted to $237,833, making total authorizations through January 31, 1938, and tentative commitments outstanding at the end of the month, $12,136,451,085.

Authorizations aggregating $4,543,196.52 were cancelled or withdrawn during January, making total cancellations and withdrawals of $1,845,304.02. A total of $337,352,304.02 remains available to borrowers and to banks in the purchase of preferred stock, capital notes and debentures.

U. S. 'In Dark' In Spite of Talk To Mrs. Rubens

Soviet Official Present as Censor When Aide Visits Prison.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Feb. 10.—Soviet officials imposed a heavy censorship today on the efforts of United States diplomats to obtain from Mrs. Ruth Marie Rubens the full details of the American woman's arrest and detention as a suspected spy.

The carefully supervised interview in Butirka prison on the outskirts of Moscow shed little new light on Mrs. Rubens and her mysterious mission in Russia. A Russian military court official was present throughout the hour and 15 minutes to shut off questions the Soviet Union did not want her to answer.

Although the judge was understood to have objected to questions that might have brought out the full story, the American officials were believed to have gathered the impression Mrs. Rubens would be held in prison for a considerable time.

Loy W. Henderson, United States Charge d'Affaires, did not divulge how far the often-postponed interrogation—demanded by the United States when Mrs. Rubens was proved to be an American citizen—has pierced the mystery. Henderson cabled a full report of the interview to Washington.

Mrs. Rubens, paler than when she was seen last before her arrest, was interviewed before a representative of the Russian foreign office, an officer who acted as interpreter, and United States Consul Angus I. Ward.

Henderson put the questions to Mrs. Rubens in English. They were translated for the benefit of the judge, who then gave or refused her permission to answer.

Mrs. Rubens, it was believed, was prohibited from disclosing any details of her arrest, including whether she was served with a warrant, as Russian law demands, or from mentioning "Donald L. Robinson," as whose wife she was traveling on a false passport.

Her identity was established definitely by both Henderson and Ward as the person to whom a valid American passport had been issued in the name of Ruth Marie Rubens.

Motorist Robbed Of Car and $40

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 10 (AP).—Charles Ziegler, of York, Pa., stepped out of his car in front of the Fredericksburg police headquarters last night and met a bandit who took his car, watch and $40 in cash.

Ziegler, who was traveling to Richmond, was forced to drive 10 miles into the country, where the thief left him stranded.

15 Dead, 20 Hurt in Rio As Flood Wrecks Homes

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 10 (AP).—Fifteen persons were killed and 20 were injured when several houses weakened by floodwaters collapsed today. A heavy rain fell overnight, flooding Avenida Rio Branco and other districts.

G. W. U. Professor Took 2 Children, Ex-Wife Charges

Taunton, Mass., Feb. 10 (AP).—District Attorney William C. Crossley today asked the Bristol County grand jury to consider evidence on a complaint of kidnaping against John Albert Tellema, professor of political science at George Washinton University, by his divorced wife, Catherine, daughter of the late David J. Hill, United States Ambassador to Germany.

Mrs. Tillema claimed her former husband kidnaped their two children, Juliette, 11, and John Albert, jr., 13, of whom she had legal custody.

She said after a divorce at Carson City, Nev., in 1933, she was given custody of the children.

It was said yesterday at the Tillema home in Arlington, Va., that the children have been living there with their father since last fall. Although their father has remarried, it was said the children have been receiving letters from their mother regularly. Both are attending school in Virginia.

5 Long-Termers Flee Michigan State Prison

Michigan City, Ind., Feb. 10 (AP).—Five prisoners escaped from the State Prison here tonight, Warden Louis E. Kunkel said.

The men, all serving long terms for robbery, were August Cummins, 37, and Theodore Hulburt, 26, of Indianapolis, and George Christian, 26; Frank Pavlench, 24, and Angelo Gengo, 27, of Gary.

The five sawed their way out of their cells and took two automobiles in Michigan City, after beating a trusty who tried to stop them.

Biggest Air Transport Crashes in Germany

Berlin (Friday), Feb. 11 (AP).—The crash of Germany's largest transport plane during a trial flight Tuesday was disclosed today. Only a factory crew of five was aboard. Two men were killed and three escaped by parachutes. The plane, the GU-90, was built to accommodate 40 passengers. It was reported to have crashed near Dessau when, flying at top speed, it banked sharply to turn.

Army Assured Of Contractors' Aid in Wartime

If war comes out of a strife-torn world to the United States, American contractors are prepared to cooperate with the Army for a speedy victory, Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, told 500 delegates to the annual convention of the Associated General Contractors of America last night.

"We must develop a strong program of national defense," said Johnson, in address before the banquet which concluded the convention.

"We must provide not only for the raising and training of a fighting manpower, but for the equipment and supplies of our soldiers with fighting materials and transportation.

"The members of this association have been of considerable help to the War Department in our studies of industrial mobilization. We are happy to note that the resources and production capacity of the contractors of this country are ample for war."

Attacks on WPA.

Last night's banquet climaxed the sessions, which were marked by sharp attacks on the WPA in the construction field.

E. P. Palmer, secretary-treasurer of Senior & Palmer, New York City, was inducted into the office of president at the banquet. He succeeds W. A. Klinger, of Sioux City, Ia., who has served two terms. Both Klinger and Palmer delivered short addresses.

The undistributed profits tax was attacked by the contractors in a resolution adopted at their nineteenth annual convention at the Willard Hotel yesterday.

Protesting the tax as "unfair," the 800 delegates went on record as asserting that the "tax has imposed a hardship in creating a penalty on productivity and created a positive retardent in the expansion and development in manufacturing, construction and transportation."

The purchasing power of millions of consumers who buy the products of agriculture and all the other industries has been seriously curtailed by the tax, the contractors contended.

Wage-Hour Bill Hit.

Wage-hour legislation, now under consideration by Congressional committees, also was assailed.

The construction industry, they contended, pays higher wages and observes shorter hours than any other industry, and any legislation would have little effect directly on construction.

The association went on record as opposing enactment of national legislation on wages and hours.

Under present laws, social security taxes in certain States will cause a serious handicap to construction, the convention held. Merit rating plans, it continued, providing for a sliding scale of taxes, the amount to be determined upon the measure of continuity of employment furnished by a given employer, will be a handicap in the States where it soon will be put into effect.

"Such a system will be entirely impracticable in the construction field," the convention held, adding that workers could not be carried from one territory to another.

Gives Emphatic Support.

In still another resolution the convention asserted that a large part of the total construction market is supplied by the highway market. The resolution therefore gave emphatic support to the bills now pending before Congress to continue the Federal aid highway program for the next two years.

Once more following the lead of the retiring president, W. A. Klinger, the association went on record as opposing WPA construction work and citing the efforts of the WPA in the construction field as a step in the direction of socializing industry.

Division officers named included J. S. Miller, of Pittsburgh, chairman of the heavy construction and railroad contractors' division, with Oscar Coblentz, of Baltimore, as vice chairman; Russell H. Hunter, of New York City, chairman of the building division, with Thomas R. Carmichael, of Akron, Ohio, as vice chairman, and M. W. Watson, of Topeka, Kans., chairman of the highway division, with F. W. Parrott, of Sioux City, Iowa, as vice chairman.

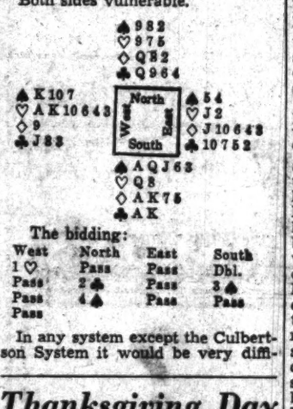
Contract Bridge

Don't Squander an Entry!

A millionaire need not be careful to extract the last ounce of value from every dollar he spends. The man who has only one dollar, however, is a fool to do otherwise. Precisely the same philosophy applies to the resources of a declarer at the bridge table. If he finds that he has only one entry to the dummy, it is his duty to put that entry to the best possible use.

West, declarer.

Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Pass	2 ♣	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

In any system except the Culbertson System it would be very difficult for South to reach four spades—the correct final contract—without simply taking the bit in his teeth and bidding it. In this system South's three spade jump bid following on his original takeout double was an absolute force. From South's point of view, North might have had long clubs to the Queen, a doubleton spade, and something like the K-10 of hearts, in which case he would bid three notrump. Hence, the three spade bid left more possible final contracts open to North's discretion than a sheer leap to four spades would have done.

West opened the heart King, and East, not knowing the length of West's suit, signalled with the Jack. The Ace was continued and then, in an effort to establish two spade tricks for the K-10 by a possible high ruff from East, West properly led, not the heart ten, but his lowest heart. East unfortunately was a broken reed. His highest trump was very low indeed and brought only the six from declarer. But the latter then proceeded to do for the defenders what they were helpless to do for themselves. Instead of realizing from the bidding that the spade finesse was doomed to failure, declarer now took out the one possible card of entry in North's hand, by leading to the diamond Queen. The spade finesse was then taken and, naturally, lost. West returned a low spade, and from that point declarer never had a chance to get rid of his losing diamond, since there was no way to re-enter dummy for the vital discard on the club Queen.

It was out of the question, considering West's opening bid and East's pass, that the trump King lay right. But even without any bidding, declarer's play still would have been atrocious. In order to finesse the trump King successfully East would have had to hold precisely the King and one guard. Declarer not only should have seen that he would, barring a miracle, have to lose a trump trick—he should also have seen that he could well afford this loss. What he could not afford was to lose a trump trick and a diamond. Obviously he should have laid down the Ace and Queen of spades from his own hand, preserving dummy's diamond Queen as a jewel of great price.

Thanksgiving Day Places Most Strain On Gas Light Firm

Thanksgiving Day, especially when cold, places the most strain on the Washington Gas Light Co. of any day in the year, Emory Kirwan, company construction engineer, yesterday told the Cosmopolitan Club.

The daily service peak comes around 5 p. m. when dinner is started, he said.

The company must carry equipment to meet zero weather, he explained, in a climate that averages only a few zero days each year. He told of the arduous task of maintaining service, especially in the face of any kind of a catastrophe. Only 20 per cent of the employes are engaged in the actual manufacture of gas, he said.

Woman's Party Asks Congress For 'Equality'

Removal of 'Artificial Handicaps' Urged by National Group.

By the Associated Press.

Officials of the National Woman's Party urged Congress yesterday to help remove "artificial handicaps" imposed on women by "unequal" laws.

Mrs. Sarah Pell, of New York, chairman, and Mrs. Burnita Selton Matthews, counsel, told a Senate judiciary sub-committee the Woman's Party wanted Congress to approve a constitutional amendment to guarantee equal right for women. Congressional approval must be followed by ratification by three-fourths of the States.

Mrs. Pell asserted there was "only a difference in degree" between woman's "status in a society which proudly calls itself democratic, and a society in which all human liberties are denied, and women are relegated to the position of drudges and slaves."

Mrs. Jane Norman Smith, vice chairman of the New York branch of the Woman's Party, said it would "take a generation" for women to obtain equal rights through separate State laws. "And even then," she added, "though we might secure passage of State bills, there would be no permanency about them."

Davis Has Fight With Killer Horse

Much to Diablo's amazement and chagrin, Johnny successfully stuck to the bronco's back through a series of evolutions, stifflegged jolts and pinwheels. After several minutes of this, Diablo displayed the killer cunning typical of the wild horse.

Before Johnny could rein him in and bring him under control, Diablo dashed for two trees growing close together, with the obvious intention of running through them in an effort to knock the rider from his back. The horse was successful in the trick.

Davis was knocked to the ground and momentarily stunned, but was saved from the infuriated horse by Larry Wright, ranch superintendent.

One Wall St., New York City

Granville B. Jacobs has been training adults in effective speaking and in influencing people for the past twelve years. Many leading business and financial institutions have engaged his services to improve their personnel in the art of dealing with people.

He has had wide experience, not only as an instructor, but also as a practical business man. He has held key positions in direct sales, sales promotion and sales training work with The Celotex Corporation of Chicago, manufacturers of insulation and acoustical materials.

The originator and director of this course was awarded an L. C. Roberts Fellowship for advanced study at Columbia University, New York, in 1922-1923. He has served as special lecturer at the Walton School of Commerce and at Loyola University, Chicago. Companies and organizations which have benefited from his instruction and talks include such as the White Motor Truck Co.; Butler Brothers, Baltimore; The Glens Falls Insurance Co.; The Financial Advertisers' Association of America, and The Safe Deposit Association of Washington, D. C.

Where Granville B. Jacobs Courses Have Been Conducted

The Riggs National Bank, Washington, D. C.

Manufacturers & Bankers Club, Philadelphia, Pa.

Washington Business Men Who Have Taken This Training Say:

"This course not only trains people to think on their feet and get out of their shell, but it gives them a practical training in the psychology of dealing with people."

ROBERT H. DRISKILL,
Attorney,
Woodward Building.

"A two-fisted course that generates a new degree of self-confidence and enthusiasm. A practical training for dealing with individuals as well as with groups."

L. S. WEBSTER,
Peoples Drug Stores, Inc.

"This training in straightforward thinking and forceful expression has been most valuable to me."

HARRY H. STEIDLE,
Bureau of Standards

"The Granville B. Jacobs' Course is of such great practical value that it would be a sound investment at five times its cost."

CHARLES B. QUARLES,
Assistant Manager,
Mackubin, Legg & Company,
Woodward Building.

In Washington, and in other cities where the Granville B. Jacobs Course has been given, graduate speaking clubs have been formed. All who have taken this course are welcome to visit meetings of these clubs.

WHY DOES "THE LIVEST BODY OF BUSINESS MEN" IN NEW YORK CITY SPONSOR THIS IDENTICAL COURSE IN NEW YORK CITY?

The Advertsing Club of New York, a nonprofit organization of 2,500 business and professional men from various fields of endeavor, is frequently referred to as "the livest body of busines men" in New York. At the present time this organization sponsors THE GRANVILLE B. JACOBS SYSTEM OF TRAINING IN NEW YORK CITY.

THE REASON: This progressive organization sponsors this training so that their members may have available a course which provides the benefits of personal instruction.

Personalized instruction is important to you.

One of the reasons Coach Rockne developed all-American football players is because he knew his men personally—they knew him. They received personalized coaching. That is what you get in this course. Granville B. Jacobs organizes this course and Granville B. Jacobs himself conducts every class session except two.

You will know him—he will know you. He will follow your progress from the beginning of the course to the end. You will get personalized instruction according to your needs.

COME TONIGHT OR TOMORROW AFTERNOON—SHOREHAM HOTEL—and get acquainted with your instructor. Bring a business associate with you if you care to.

8 Things This Training Will Do for You

1. Banish fear of an audience.
2. Advance you to greater leadership through your ability to think on your feet.
3. Train you to remember names and faces and what you want to say.
4. Speak extemporaneously before boards, business conferences, organizations, clubs, dinners.
5. Give you more poise in appearing before groups and with individuals.
6. Approach people with greater ease, more personal force.
7. Handle interviews with increased assurance.
8. Increase your personal power and influence by improving your ability to apply practical principles of psychology in dealing with people.

By . . . HARLAN MILLER

When the town of Corpus Christi, Tex., turned down Gutzon Borglum's proposal to sculp a statue of Christ walking on the water in the bay there, because some residents deemed it blasphemous, someone suggested that this statue be erected on Roosevelt Island in the Potomac. "What!" cried Borglum, "Christ in Washington?"

* * *

"What is the government?" he asked.

* * *

Terse, dead-pan Bill Hard, of the Republican National Committee, has an old fur coat which once belonged to Mark Hanna. . . When Hanna died his daughter, Ruth, took it for her husband, the late Senator Medill McCormick.

"—the lobbyists avoid 'em"

On Senator McCormick's death his widow gave it to Bill Hard. . . But it's too big for Bill, and he tells Washington friends that he's looking for another Republican of McKinley's or Hanna's stature . . . Meanwhile, he wears it hopefully. So far, no takers. He hasn't offered it to Senator Vandenberg.

* * *

At the Washington Zoo an animal which attracts much attention is the peculiar long-eared caracal . . . Because it was a gift to President Roosevelt back in the honeymoon days of 1934 . . . A wealthy American nimrod captured it in Italian Somaliland.

* * *

It is a sort of middle-of-the-road animal, with rudiments of fox, rabbit, bobcat and coyote, resembling nothing very definitely . . . Apparently the President couldn't use it in his official menagerie, so there it is, for pensive middle-of-the-road liberals to study. It's one of the last gifts he received from wealthy nimrods.

* * *

Glamorous Lady Astor, at a party the other day, warned Joe Kennedy that the American Embassy in London is too small for nine children. . . . She offered magnanimously to take care of four or five of his youngsters at her house. . . Joe will want them out of the way when he puts on his knee pants.

* * *

Confidentially, quite a few Army officials will tell you that the CCC money was well spent, if only because it has prepared 500,000 boys for Army life. Despite all the tut-tutting on the subject, they regard the CCC boys as excellent Army material, with so sound a basis of discipline that by Gen. Johnson Hagood's 18-day training formula they would make good troops in much less than half the time required to polish the raw recruits during the war.

In a serio-comic vein some of the newer young Congressmen complain that they don't see anything of the insidious lobbies they had been warned against. . . .

Wall Street and the other big sinister octopi leave them severely alone; the only lobbyists who approach them are the farmer and the labor smoothies, with occasionally a spellbinder for the war vets.

They've been all wound up to punch a sinister lobbyist in the schnozzle, but not one gets within range!

* * *

After shaking hands with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House receptions, most of the chosen guests come away without a very clear recollection of either one. . . .

Mrs. Roosevelt.

First they are lined up in the brilliantly illuminated East Room, until the President is in place under the chandelier in the Blue Room. Their eyes grow accustomed to the glitter.

* * *

Then they are carried along with the tide of the handshakers, and find the Blue Room dimly lit. . . . Eyes are slow to adapt to the change. The President and the First Lady stand with their backs to a lofty bank of potted plants and ferns, and in the dim half-light both seem to be somewhere between 8 and 10 feet tall. . . .

Most handshakers are a little startled as they clutch the Presidential hands, and a little off balance. . . . All except the tallest emerge with a vague impression of having peered upward at two august faces framed in the green semi-tropical foliage.

Shop Center On Conn. Ave. Is Forbidden

Permission to construct a shopping center on Connecticut avenue, between Legation street and Military road, was denied Fulton R. Gordon, real estate dealer, yesterday by the District Zoning Commission.

Gordon based his plea on the necessity of a shopping center at that locality and asked the commission "to co-operate with me and allow me to use my property as God Almighty had intended I use it."

Property Owners Object.

Yesterday's denial by the commission was the second time that his petition for a change has been refused. The petition drew more than 40 individual protests from Chevy Chase property owners in the vicinity.

By another order the commission approved an amendment to the zoning regulations which will require philanthropic or eleemosynary institutions to receive from the District Commissioners permission to construct buildings.

The commission approved the change from first commercial to residential all property abutting the north side of Benning road, between Thirty-ninth and Forty-fourth street, northeast; all property zoned on the south side of Benning road between Fortieth street and Forty-fourth street, northeast; all property zoned on both sides of Benning road, from Central and Texas avenues to the District Line, northeast; all property south of First street, near the District Line. The only exception in the change from commercial to residential zoning was an island on both sides of Benning road from East Capitol and Forty-second street northeast.

Petition Deferred.

All property on Good Hope road, from Minnesota avenue to Good Hope Hill, southeast, with the exception of an island on top of Good Hope Hill and all property west of Eighteenth street, was changed from commercial to residential. Likewise, all property on Naylor road, from Good Hope Hill to the District Line, southeast, with the exception of an island at the District Line at Naylor road, southeast.

A decision on the petition by the General Conference of the Seventh Day Adventists to change from commercial to residential the property located on the west side of Laurel street, between Aspen street and Eastern avenue northwest, was deferred.

Other Approval Given.

The commission also approved the following:

1. Commercial to residential: square located between Blaine street and Washington place, west of Fiftieth street northeast.

2. Residential to commercial: square, being the rear of the premises known as 3539 to 3540 Georgia avenue northeast. A 12-foot alley must be dedicated, however.

3. Petition to grant a variance to permit the excavation of sand and gravel in squares 3738 and 3739, for a temporary period, the said squares being within the area bounded by Rice [illegible] place, Third and Orlethorpe streets northeast. The period [illegible] year subject to renewal.

4. Residential to commercial: square 2580, located on the south side of Lanier place, near Adams Mill road northwest.

5. Residential to commercial, square located at 1316 Kenyon street northwest.

6. Petition to grant a variance to permit the remodeling and enlarging of the nonconforming undertaking establishment on lots 49 and 50, square south of 2627, known as 3501-03 Fourteenth street northwest. No additional entrances on Otis place, however.

7. Residential to commercial, all of that part of square 387, bounded by Ninth, Tenth, D and Liberty streets and known as 900 to 940 D street, 409-11 Ninth street, and 412-14 Tenth street southwest.

8. First commercial, 40 ft., "C" to Second Commercial, 60 ft., "D;" that part of parcels, bounded as follows, beginning at a point on the northeast line of the Unnamed Highway Plan street running along the east side of the right-of-way of the B. & O. Railroad, northeast, 100 feet northwest of the west line of Sligo Mill road, thence northwesterly along said line 500 feet east of and parallel to the east line of Kansas avenue northeast, thence northerly along said line to a line 140 feet northeast of and parallel to the northeast line of the aforesaid Unnamed Highway Plan street, thence southeasterly along said line 100 feet northwest of and parallel to Sligo Mill road northeast, thence southerly along said line to the point of beginning.

A variance granted for parking lot in the square bounded by Eighteenth and Hamlin streets and Brentwood road northeast, was ordered. The petition to change from residential to commercial of this square was refused.

A petition for change from residential to commercial on the north side of North Carolina avenue, near First street northeast, was denied. Variance for barber shops and beauty parlors were granted.

Two other petitions, both for changes from residential to commercial, were denied. The properties are located s 617-625 and 604-620 S street northwest; 1800 and 1742 Sixth street northwest, and 1109-15 Thirteenth street northwest and 1226-34 Massachusetts avenue, northwest.

Grower of World's Highest Corn Writes on Apartment Gardens

Dr. Regina Jais Makes Annual Visit Here for Birthday.

REGINA JAIS.

The woman who grows the highest corn in the world (Iowa papers please copy) left tulips blooming at home while she slipped off down here for her annual Lincoln's Birthday visit.

Mrs. Regina Pais is her name. Writing travel books and planning New York penthouse gardens are her hobbies.

Yesterday at the Mayflower she was working on the last chapters of her first book on "sky gardening," which has been so designed that it will bring the bounties of Mother Nature within the reach of all city dwellers.

"Step-Mother Nature we should say in a case like that. It takes plenty of coaxing to get a garden growing 17½ stories up," she declared.

For eight years Mrs. Jais and her husband, Jacob D. Jais, have been coming to Washington for February 12. As Mrs. Jais explains it:

"It happens to be my birthday, oo. Furthermore, it was my mother's birthday. I count the days hers first, Lincoln's second, and then mine."

Mrs. Jais has written "Legendary Germany" and "Legendary France." Egypt and Italy will be next—after "Sky Gardening," that is.

She has been winning prizes on her garden for a number of years and for the two years straight has won the medal in the New York Herald-Tribune's yard and garden contest. Several times a season she turns her garden over to some club for "charity" purposes and the visitors pour in. So important has her garden become in the penthouse picture of the big city that every time she moves a plant or gathers in her tomatoes it is real news.

Last summer her corn towered eight feet high and set New York a-gog. Forgetful of their country raising, New Yorkers dared any other place to produce such results. Iowans—righteously irate—sent in stalks that measured 13 feet.

But what are 13 meager feet, when Mrs. Jais has corn which doesn't begin to grow until it is 17½ stories high?

Corn and tomatoes are not the only harvests gathered on the Jais estate. The grape arbor is a magnificent one, and there's a double Japanese cherry tree which blooms the same time the double ones bloom around the tidal basin.

And then there are moon flowers, trellises covered by Van Fleet roses, a privet hedge higher than the head, luscious evergreens, lilies, begonias—in fact, everything one would expect to find in rock gardens or flower boxes anywhere, and much more besides.

Citizens Fight Shift in Rule Of Playgrounds

Two Associations Oppose Giving Control to Community Centers.

Two citizens' associations, the Congress Heights and American University Park groups, went on record last night as opposing the transfer of school playgrounds jurisdiction from the Playgrounds Department to the Community Center Department.

The Congress Heights Association also adopted a resolution urging that $1,900,000 be added to the present $900,000 appropriation for District relief already approved by the House.

$765,000 Is Sought.

A protest was registered against diverting funds from the gasoline tax to provide for street lighting. It was asked that Congress make a separate $765,000 appropriation for that purpose.

To replace the present emergency taxes, the association urged that an income tax on salaries over $2,000 be put into effect. The tax would apply also to persons who work in the District but who do not live here.

In another resolution, the association asked that an item providing funds for the construction of a new Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge be restored to the District supply bill. It was voted to oppose reduction of school librarians' salaries.

Charles F. Foster, vocational training teacher at Anacostia junior and senior high schools, was indorsed by the association for the proposed new office of District vocational training director.

The American University Park Association adopted a resolution offered by Dr. Charles Ryland urging that a field house be constructed at Fort Bayard Park to serve both that immediate area and the entire District. As proposed, the cost of the field house would be borne by the WPA.

Toy Weapons Opposed.

A strong protest against gangster movies and the sale of toy pistols and knives by stores was made last night by the East-Central Civic Association, meeting in the Dunbar High School.

In the same resolution which contained the protest, the members appealed to civic associations and churches to take an active part in Crime Prevention Week, March 6 to 13.

The association went on record as opposing the transfer of custodial forces from the Board of Education to the District Commissioners, and named a committee to study sentiment for suffrage in its area.

Seven Policemen Move in Shake-up At Tenth Precinct

Seven Tenth Precinct policemen including a lieutenant and a sergeant were transferred to other precincts last night in a shake-up that followed a police trial board's recommendation that Private Howard O. Hurd, also of the Tenth Precinct, be dismissed from the force.

The trial board recommended yesterday that Hurd be dismissed for insubordination. He will appeal the verdict.

Immediately afterward, it was learned that Lieut. Lewis D. Redmond had been ordered transferred to the Ninth Precinct and Sergt. George Helmuth sent to the Eleventh Precinct.

The five privates transferred and their new stations are Edward McCormack, Sixth Precinct; R. E. Goodwin, Fourth Precinct; J. B. Jones, Twelfth Precinct; George Washburn, Eighth Precinct, and J. L. Meek, Seventh Precinct.

Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, assistant police superintendent, said it was done "for the good of the department."

D. C. Man Indicted For Income Fraud

Baltimore, Feb. 10 (AP).—Dr. Grafton T. Brown, 42, of 1315 Thirty-first street northwest, Washington, was indicted by a Federal grand jury here today on charges of attempted income tax evasion and filing fraudulent tax returns for 1931 and 1933.

Dr. Brown, allergist and lecturer at Georgetown University, claimed a gross income of $16,581 for the two years, Government attorneys said, while Internal Revenue Bureau investigators alleged the income was $51,432.

The Government claimed the physician paid $167 on his income taxes for both years, and should have paid $2,805.

32 Wreaths To Be Placed For Lincoln

Organizations to March in Uniforms and Display Flags.

Simple wreaths will be placed in the Lincoln Memorial at noon tomorrow to commemorate the 129th anniversary of the Civil War President.

President Roosevelt intends to place one wreath, and Capt. Patrick H. Tansey, U. S. A., will place another in behalf of the District Commissioners.

Other wreaths will be placed at the foot of Lincoln's statue by 30 organizations participating in the ceremonies sponsored by the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, District of Columbia Commandery. Ceremonies will start at 12:10 p. m.

The Marine Band will furnish the music, and soldiers, sailors, marines and coast guardsmen will form the escort. They will carry their arms, and all organizations will display their colors and emblems.

G. A. R. to Have Services.

Col. Lawrence C. Crawford, U. S. A., is in charge of arrangements, assisted by Capt. Chester Wells, U. S. N.; Col. Godwin Ordway, U. S. A.; Charles M. Remey, Laurence V. Benet, O. A. C. Oehmler and Charles C. Clark, jr.

The Department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic, assisted by allied patriotic organizations, will hold services at 8 p. m. at the First Congregational Church, Tenth and G streets northwest.

Lincoln Cabin Rebuilt.

The cabin in which Abraham Lincoln studied by firelight in the village of New Salem, Ill., is being reconstructed by CCC boys and is nearing completion, it was announced yesterday.

A special program of Negro History Week, sponsored by the United Government Employes and the Goodfellow Recreational Association, will be held at 8 p. m. in the departmental auditorium. Senator M. M. Logan, of Kentucky, and Judge Armond W. Scott will speak.

Tomorrow and Sunday the veterans of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, composed of Americans who served in the Spanish loyalist army, will pay tribute to Lincoln at their conference at Wesley Hall, Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

The Commandery-in-Chief, Pennsylvania Commandery, New York Commandery, District Commandery, Military Order of the Loyal Legion; American Gold Star Mothers of the District; District Department, American Legion Auxiliary; District Chapter, American War Mothers; Bi-Centennial Chapter, American War Mothers; Aztec Club of 1847; Capital Society, Children of the American Revolution; National Society, Dames of the Loyal Legion; District Society, Dames of the Loyal Legion; National Society; District Daughters of the American Revolution; Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey Tent, No. 1, Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War; District Federation of Women's Clubs; Girl Scouts; Department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic; Italian World War Veterans; Ladies' Auxiliary to Italian World War Veterans; Department of the Potomac, Ladies of the G. A. R.; Kallipolis Grove, Military Order of the Carabao; District Commandery, Military Order of Foreign Wars; District Chapter, Military Order of the World War; Navy League; the National Patriotic Council; District Department, Reserve Officers' Association; Third Division Society, Branch No. 7; Heroes of '76; National Sojourners; National Society; District Society, Sons of the American Revolution; Society of the Sons of the Revolution in the District; Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War; William B. Cushing Camp, No. 30; William B. Cushing Auxiliary, No. 4, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War; Warren G. Harding Camp, No. 9; Lincoln Camp, No. 2, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War; Department of the Potomac, Woman's Relief Corps, Auxiliary to G. A. R.; Washington Unit, Women's Overseas Service League.

N. M. U. Agent in Forum.

Ralph Emerson, legislative representative of the National Maritime Union, will speak on "Democracy on the High Seas" at the Capital City Forum, 1502 Fourteenth street northwest, at 8:15 o'clock tonight.

D. C. Woman Doctor, at 75, Helps Deliver 4,150th Baby

Dr. Lauretta Kress. Harris & Ewing

Dr. Lauretta Kress Marks Birthday by Doing Job She Has Carried on for 44 Years and Scoffs at Idea of Retiring.

Dr. Lauretta Kress, obstetrician extraordinary, celebrated her seventy-fifth birthday yesterday by holding a long-distance telephone conversation with her daughter, entertaining a few of her old friends at a party, and delivering two more babies.

That puts her total number of deliveries, at the minute of this writing, at 4,150—but perhaps you should add at least two more just to be on the safe side. Dr. Kress has been delivering babies for 44 years and business is as good as ever.

"Ready to retire? Indeed not!" she declared last night.

The youngest person at the party was a 19-year-old granddaughter, Patricia Mason, who is enrolled for a premedical course at Washington Missionary College and some day will follow in the footsteps of Dr. Daniel Kress, Dr. Lauretta Kress and Dr. Ora Kress Mason—her [illegible], grandmother and mother, respectively.

They're a medical lot, these Kresses. "We have to say Dr. D. H. and Dr. Lauretta to say which we mean," a friend of the family said. Dr. Daniel Kress is director of the Washington Sanitarium and is also 75 years of age. Dr. Mason, the daughter, helps her husband—also a doctor—run a hospital at Murray, Ky.

Dr. Lauretta Kress graduated from the University of Michigan in 1894, as did also her husband. He specialized in digestive diseases, she in babies. They worked in Australia together before coming to Washington more than 30 years ago.

For 20 years Dr. Lauretta Kress gave much of her time to work at the Women's Clinic in Washington, but at the beginning of this year she gave up that work in order to devote more time to her own practice. Her office is on the ground floor of the Kress home at 705 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, just across the street from Washington Sanitarium. Its walls are covered with pictures of the 4,150 babies, which are living in all parts of the world, the oldest of which is now 40 years of age.

Old-time songs were sung at the party last night in her own living room, and there were reminiscences of happenings stretching over the past 30 years. At first it was stated that no guest at the party would be under 60, but that was a mistake.

"All my friends are not old," Dr. Lauretta declared. "I think it was too bad such an account got out."

Hardy Discharged From Hospital, His Shooting Unsolved

Russell Hardy, Justice Department attorney who said he was shot by a "panhandler" in Alexandria January 29, was discharged last night from Sibley Memorial Hospital. Hardy quietly left the hospital at about 9 p. m.

Meanwhile Mrs. Hardy said yesterday her husband would appear before Alexandria authorities "whenever they ask him to do so." Last night Lieut. Edgar Sims, of the Alexandria police, stated he is "not ready" for a hearing on the case.

Catholic U. Will Hold 'Junior Prom' Tonight

The Catholic University Junior Prom will take place tonight in the Continental room of the Wardman Park Hotel with dancing from 10 to 1. Dick Messner's band will play.

The committee members were Anthony Sparacino of Beckley, West Virginia, chairman; Leo Daly of Omaha, Nebraska; Jerome Wyble, Washington; Bernard Robinson of Laconia, New Hampshire; and John Kasunich of McKeesport, Pennsylvania. Chaperons for the prom include the Rev. Patrick J. O'Connor, acting dean of men; Dr. and Mrs. Leo Behrendt, Dr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Harriman and Mr. and Mrs. James Bowe.

Tong Yields Man Wanted In Soo Killing

Chinese, Last to See Slain Laundry Man Alive, Is Held.

On Leong Head Turns His Fellow Member Over to Police.

Trailed by members of his own tong, a stocky Chinese with a gold tooth was held incommunicado last night in the brutal murder of Henry Dor Soo, laundryman found tied, his throat slashed, in a room above his little laundry, February 1.

The prisoner, William Der, was turned over to Inspector Bernard Thompson, chief of detectives, by Frank Fong, leader of the On Leong Tong, composed of Chinese merchants. Both the murdered man and Der were members of the Tong.

Der, detectives announced last night, was the last person who saw Soo alive. He had been in the little upstairs living room with Soo the night of the killing, they said. It was there he and the doomed man brewed and sipped a pot of tea as they talked.

When Soo's garroted body was found, Thompson called on Fong to aid police in penetrating the mazes of Washington's Chinatown and Fong was glad to co-operate.

By that evening he had three members, including Der, in the inspector's office. Here police took blood tests. Then all were released in custody of Fong and the tong, with the understanding any of them was to be surrendered at Thompson's request.

Investigations into the killing were led by Capt. Ira Keck and Detective Sergt. Robert Barrett. Barrett learned that Der had come to Washington from Fall River, Mass., only fifive months ago.

Detective Sergt. William Liverman was sent to Fall River two days ago to find out what he could about Der. He learned that he went under the alias of "Nee Yee" in the New England textile center, and that Soo had known him when he lived there several years ago.

The officer also discovered that Soo had skipped bond in Fall River on an assault charge, and that apparently Der was the only person who knew his whereabouts when he came to Washington.

As soon as Inspector Thompson called Fong, Der was brought to headquarters. He was then jailed without bond.

At the time Der was taken to jail, police released Soo's maid, Mary Tesvie, and her husband, William, both colored, who had been held since the investigation was begun.

It was Mrs. Tesvie who discovered the body and described to police the last visit Der paid Soo.

At the time she said Soo and Der were conversing, Der looked at her and said:

Chinese in the neighborhood reported they saw Der later in the evening at familiar haunts.

The murdered Soo was a cousin of Fong.

Famous Film Director Reveals an Unexpected Quirk As Author of an Inspiring New Book for Children

"Chuck" Riesner, in His "Little Inch-High People," Discloses New Facet of Versatile Nature; Frank Lawton Coming to National in New Play of Shelley; Youngsters Make Their Bows on Screen Today.

ALMOST astonishing revelation of the hidden character of a man long high in the councils of Hollywood comes to hand in the form of an advance copy of "Little Inch-High People," a book for children, to be released on March 4 by Junior Progress, Inc.

BELL.

It is a work that seems destined to take its place with the late Palmer Cox's "Brownie Books" that were so immensely popular with the youngsters of 30 or 40 years ago. It is illustrated in line-drawings and color by George Wolfe, with that peculiar apprehension of juvenile viewpoint that must at once catch the fancy of the tots who will be engrossed by its contents.

Furthermore, "Little Inch-High People" deftly combines with its imagination, drama and beauty a subtle suggestion of decorum, obedience and right living that must surely find its way into the consciousness of every child in the formative period of life.

The book is published in a unique format, with halved pages that permit the turning of the story and its illustrations separately. There are many full-page illustrations in color that will intrigue the fanciful interest of any alert kid of whatever gender.

The foreword is by Angelo Patri, noted educator and child psychologist, who has this, in part, to say: "An ideal story should have imagination, drama, beauty and scale. The story, 'Little Inch-High People,' has them to a rare degree and children of all sizes will take it to their hearts and cherish it in their memories for that reason. Children are not miniature adults. They are a race of little folk who have characteristics and special needs. It is because this book accepts that point of view that it has unusual value for little children and for their fathers and mothers."

Almost an old and case-hardened bachelor wishes he had a son!

• • • •

But what I started out to say was that the most amazing aspect of this fine enterprise is that "Little Inch-High People" should have been written by Charles Francis Riesner. You may recognize him more readily by his customary tag of "Chuck" Riesner. "Chuck" Riesner has been around the Hollywood film plants for a long, long time now in a variety of important capacities. He has, during the vicissitudes of a variegated and colorful career, been newsboy, bootblack, program seller, vaudeville and musical comedy actor, prize-fighter, wrestler, song writer ("Goodbye Broadway, Hello France"), gag man, scenario writer and, finally, motion picture director. He has directed Chaplin and the late Marie Dressler and half of the famous stars in the film capital.

If you remember "Chuck" Riesner on the screen, you have a mental image of a slightly battered little man who generally lent his talents to the depiction of "tough guys;" a sort of running mate in this particular with the late Tammany Young. He isn't a handsome fellow and always gave the suggestion of being a bit on the seamy side. But what a heart the fellow has!

"Little Inch-High People" was inspired and is dedicated to, "Chuck's" small son, "Dinky." It is a tender, inspiring and valuable book.

One sits back now and awaits some similar demonstration of the possession of a boyish heart by Jim Tully or "Bull" Montana—if they can manage it!

"I Am My Youth," a play in which the principal characters are the poet Shelley, his wife, Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley, and William Godwin, literateur and social philosopher widely known in London during the early years of the last century, will have its pre-Broadway opening in the National Theater on Monday night, February 28.

The play will be presented by Alfred de Ligare, jr., who later this season also will offer his earlier production of "Yes, My Darling Daughter" on the same stage. This opus recently completed a year's run in New York.

In the new play, Frank Lawton, young English star, who, in private life, is the husband of Evelyn Laye, seen here with Jack Buchanan and Adele Dixon in the "command performance" of "Between the Devil," will play Shelley, and Charles Waldron, long in the Katharine Cornell productions, beginning, I believe, in the role of the father in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," will impersonate Godwin.

The play is the work of Ernest Pascal and Edwin Harvey Blum, two of the outstanding screen writers on the West Coast, whose recent contributions to the cinema include "Lloyds of London" and "Wee Willie Winkie." The period of the play is 1815 and scenery and costumes appropriate to the period are being designed by Donald Oenslager, who also contrived Cornelia Otis Skinner's "production" of "Edna, His Wife," soon to be seen at the National.

Two new juvenile actors will be introduced to Washington audiences when "Of Human Hearts" is presented on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater, beginning today. They are 13-year-old Leatrice Joy Gilbert and 10-year-old Martin Graff.

Miss Gilbert, of course, is the small daughter of the late John Gilbert and Leatrice Joy, to whom he was married twice, with an intervening divorce. Little Leatrice bears a striking resemblance to her famous father, one of the screen idols of his day, who suffered a partial eclipse when sound came to the screen.

Master Graff is a sort of "cinderella kid." The youngster normally sells papers at the entrance to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios and on certain days is allowed to peddle magazines on the lot, where he is accustomed to make the rounds of the shops and stages. He walked on to the set of "Of Human Hearts," costarring Walter Huston, Beulah Bondi and James Stewart, and offered his wares to the director, Clarence Brown. Brown bought a dime's worth of pulp, or something, looked the boy over and in a moment of inspiration exclaimed "the perfect type." So there he is.

Reserved seats for the Washington Civic Theater's production of the English comedy, "George and Margaret," now are on sale in the lobby of the Raleigh Hotel. This is the Civic's special benefit play—for itself—which boasts an exceptional resident cast, including Maud Howell Smith, Director F. Cowles Strickland and Harry MacArthur, a member of the Fourth Estate turned actor—one hopes. The supporting ensemble is one of local distinction. The first Washington performance of "George and Margaret"—which, by the way, is still a popular hit in London—will be on Wednesday night, February 16, in the Wardman Park Theater.

• • • •

Edward T. Greville, who directed "Whirlpool," current at the Little Theater, will transfer his talents to Hollywood in the near future, probably as a new addition to the directorial forces at Selznick-International. Mr. Greville "went begging" in his native England until after he had directed "Whirlpool" in France. That is the way such things sometimes work in this crazy business.

Notable overtures will comprise important parts of the bills at the Earle and Capitol theaters, beginning today.

At the Earle, Jo Lombardi, guest conductor, has devised a review of the musical styles which have been popular in America during recent generations. The basis of his musical structure will be "Alexander's Ragtime Band," rendered in the original "ragtime," then in "jazz," next in the "symphonic syncopation," originated by Paul Whiteman, and finally in present-day "swing."

At the Capitol, Phil Lampkin will pay tribute to the memory of Susan B. Anthony, who devoted her life to the fight for "women's rights"—and lefts. The overture will be highlighted by a colorful tableau in which Mrs. C. M. Lewis, noted clubwoman, will appear as the great suffragette. This observance is in honor of the 118th anniversary of the famous leader's birth.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Feb. 10.—Mutterings: Wonder how much longer some of our 50-odd-year-old stars can continue to get away with young-lover roles? Nervous itch: To kidnap Freddie Bartholomew long enough to outfit him in a he-kid suit of corduroys. I would like to strangle some of the gossip-mongers who telephone me to report unprintable—and unfounded—scandal about screen stars. Wondering muse: If Fate had made Joe E. Brown and Martha Raye mates, what would the little Brown-Rayes have looked like?

JOE E. BROWN

Too many Hollywood big shots seem to think the best evidence of good taste is the ability to distinguish between different brands of whiskey. Gratis suggestion to Secretary Morgenthau: "Why not balance the budget by fining actors 10 cents for each use of that word, "I?" The indecision that keeps Janet Gaynor inactive after her triumph in "A Star Is Born" reminds me of "The Charge of the Light Brigade"—somebody has blundered. Reportorial ambition: To ask Mother Eve what she thinks of Mae West as an impersonator.

• • • •

If Carole Lombard finds it so much fun to be a "regular" with the lowlies on the set, why don't some of our other stars try it? Growl: Why some one of Hollywood's producers does not give that swell little trouper, Peggy Shannon, a break, beats me. Phil Regan is one of the few people who can strut while sitting down. If I wanted to ruin a dentist's trade, I would hire Ned Sparks to stand in front of his office.

In a town of strange characters, Michael Romanoff is undoubtedly the strangest. For 20 years he has made a business of being a phony. He posed as Prince Michael Dimitri and victimized New York's Four Hundred. He posed as a world-famous art critic—and was accepted by even the art dealers of southern California. Exposed time and again, jailed often, he has never shown the least trace of embarrassment. And the very people who have been hoodwinked by his colossal fabrications are the first to come to his aid. The fact is that Mike Romanoff—now under contract to Twentieth Century as a writer—is the most entertaining chap that ever lived.

The other day, Ginger Rogers, who takes inordinate pride in her ability to hide her identity behind simple disguises, offered to bet Doug Fairbanks, jr., that she could visit the Brown Derby, wearing a black wig and glasses, without being recognized by a soul. Doug took the bet—and today Ginger made the trial—with amusing consequences. As she approached the Derby entrance, a whole swarm of autograph hunters swooped down on her, shouting "Autograph, please, Miss Rogers." I've never seen a girl so chagrined—and unless that red hair is artificial I would hate to be Doug Fairbanks when she discovered that every one of those autograph hunters was an extra hired for the occasion!

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, February 10, 1938.

ENTERPRISE: Arthur Kober always has insisted upon advance royalties from those who produce his plays or publish his books. He calls it "superstition"—and so when Simon & Schuster published his "Thunder Over the Bronx," and Marc Connelly produced his "Having Wonderful Time," Kober received advance payments . . . He now is at work writing a new play, "Teacher Trow." It will be produced by Mr. Connelly and Bela Blau. Kober asked for advance royalties. Yesterday he received from them a check for $100, framed in glass, suitable for hanging. Attached thereto was a sign: "In Case of Emergency, Break Glass."

• • • •

CENSORSHIP: The Hays office has received some complaints from Parents Association, etc., about the cruelty and terror employed in "Snow White." One school principal complained that Disney had failed to interpret the classic faithfully, pointing out that in the Grimm version the witch gets Snow White into a tight corset, from which the dwarfs rescue her . . . The Hays office explained that the witchcraft and other terror sequences—sequences which caused the British to ban the kiddies from seeing the picture—were substituted, because the purity code does not permit the showing of women with their corsets visible.

• • • •

WORRY: The London Express assigned C. V. R. Thompson, its New York correspondent, to get a story about the $90,000 Palm Beach jewel robbery at the home of Mrs. Philip Hill, wife of one of England's wealthiest financiers. London Express readers, of course, would be interested in learning of the distress caused a Britisher victimized by American thieves . . . Mr. Thompson phoned Mrs. Hill, but could get no story—because the distressed victim wasn't home. She was out playing golf.

• • • •

DECEIT: Three people whose names sound alike are employed in the Shubert publicity department: Sam Friedman, working with "Hooray For What!;" Leo Friedman, working with "Three Waltzes," and Mrs. David Freedman, working with "Bachelor Born" . . . Lee Shubert examined his worksheets, saw the three similar surnames, called his assistants and ordered: "Fire this guy Friedman" . . . "Why?" the assistant asked . . . "Because he's a thief," Shubert declared. "His name is on three pay rolls!"

• • • •

CHATTER: Maj. Bowes sat huddled behind his desk, at his last broadcast, because of threats that he would be shot . . . Fred Fradkin, highest-priced violinist in the radio industry, will retire and open a restaurant opposite Carnegie Hall . . . Paul Draper has been signed by Goldwyn, to appear with Heifetz in "The Music Festival" . . . Sam Harris will produce Sinclair Lewis' new play, "Queeny" . . . Arthur Hopkins is supervising "Spring Thaw," which will be revived by Max Gordon . . . The appellate division sent circulars to its jurist members, advising them not to appear in broadcasts concerning controversial matter.

• • • •

AWARD: Price, Waterhouse & Co., the accountants, now are tabulating the nominations for the Motion Picture Academy awards. In the lead, so far, are Robert Montgomery, for his performance in "Night Must Fall"—and in the women's division, Barbara Stanwyck, for her "Stella Dallas," followed by Irene Dunne in "The Awful Truth" . . . The drama Critics Circle prize now rests between "Of Mice and Men" and Thornton Wilder's "Our Town."

• • • •

LEISURE: Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, the famous art collector, is taking it easy now. His industry always is among the first affected by industrial recessions—and so Rosenbach is devoting his time to doing the things he had no time to do while business was more prosperous . . . "Tell me, doctor," he was asked last night, "how's business?" He sat back leisurely and replied: "Enjoyably bad."

• • • •

PROTECTION: Nicky Blair, of the Paradise Restaurant, met Charlie MacArthur and showed him his son's toy pistol . . . "I always leave it in my overcoat," Blair stated . . . "But why in your overcoat?" MacArthur asked . . . "Because," was the explanation, "I don't want any one to steal my overcoat."

• • • •

FAME: Frederick Lonsdale, the British playwright, whose new play is being produced by Gilbert Miller, walked out of Jack and Charlie's last night and stopped before two deep excavations in the middle of the street. He stared at the excavations, turned to his companion and asked: "Is this what Gilbert Miller meant when he said there's gold to be found on Fifty-second street, if one looks for it?"

• • • •

HOMAGE: Monday evening a group of eight arrived at La Conga and were seated. The headwaiter summoned Bobby Martyn, one of the owners, and suggested that the cover charge for this group be lifted . . . "Oh, no," Martyn ruled. "I wouldn't lift a cover charge here for the King of England" . . . "The King of England isn't here," the headwaiter returned, "but the lady in that party is Princess Torlonia, daughter of the former King of Spain."

Farm Bill Foes Say Conference Went Too Far

Point May Send House-Passed Measure Back; Showdown Today.

Progress toward enactment of the Administration's $500,000,000 crop control program was halted abruptly in the Senate yesterday by a charge that the Congressional farm conference committee exceeded its powers in rewriting the bill.

Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Oregon, Administration stalwart, made a point of order against conference changes in dairy provisions.

If sustained, the parliamentary technicality could force defeat of the report and send back to conference the measure which passed the House Wednesday.

Showdown Today.

The showdown will come today, when Vice President Garner rules on Schwellenbach's objections. Garner is expected to overrule the Washington Senator's point of order. Senate dairy bloc members may appeal from the decision and force a direct ruling by the Senate. But Administration henchmen, following an informal poll, insisted they "have the votes."

The bittter bi-partisan contest was an aftermath of a similar fight waged unsuccessfully in the House, where all points of order against the report were waived by a special rule.

The controversy centered on the so-called Boileau-McNary amendment, which originally denied benefit payments to farmers who used diverted acres to raise dairy cattle or other livestock or produce for market.

South Complains.

The amendment was designed to protect the dairy industry from new competition, but Southern members complained it would "freeze out" the South.

The conference committee limited its application to dairy cattle and allowed for "normal" increases in dairy herds in each county.

Dairy bloc members, led by Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary on the Republican side, and Schwellenbach and Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, on the Democratic side, insisted the report should go back to conference for restoration of the original provision.

Johnson Blocks Action.

Schwellenbach read from precedents to support his contention that conferees have no power to change provisions agreed to by both houses. The Administration leadership today will contend the whole bill was open to change, since the Senate substituted an entirely new bill for the House measure.

A drive for hasty action was blocked by Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), California, who forced Senate reading of the entire conference report, consuming about three hours.

Then Chairman Ellison D. Smith, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, vainly pleaded with his colleagues to act at once on the measure, asserting 95 per cent of the farmers are for it.

What the Farmers Want.

"If you don't take this bill," said Smith, "you will have no farm legislation in 1938. If there is anything wrong with this measure, then let the members of the committee be held responsible for it."

McNary argued that Secretary Wallace's "ever normal granary" proposals had been cut from the report, and it was "an entirely different measure" from the one originally recommended by Wallace. McNary asked Smith what principles it was based on.

"Control of production and prices to enhance prices," replied Smith. "The farmers said they wanted control with teeth in it, and we gave it to them."

Smith Answers Vandenberg.

O'Mahoney asked if Smith personally favored those principles.

"I'm not giving my personal opinion," said Smith. "This is what the farmers said they wanted. We want to give it to them. I hope it works. If it does not, it's too bad."

O'Mahoney said he doubted the wisdom of stress on production control rather than higher prices.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, asked what Wallace thought of the measure.

"I don't know what his attitude is and, what's more, I don't care," said Smith. "I think the sooner this body asserts its judgment and begins to legislate its own legislation, the better off the country will be."

Smith said the bill provided "not one penny more than $500,000,000," but declared the Senate should take money it is "lavishly" appropriating for other purposes and spend it on the farmer, "who feeds you."

Dale Carnegie Tells 4,000 How To Be Leaders

Ability to Think on Feet and Express Selves Called Key.

Leaders are distinguished from average citizens chiefly by their ability to think on their feet and forcibly express their ideas, Dale Carnegie last night told a throng of 4,000 potential public speakers in Constitution Hall.

The ability to speak fearlessly and clearly is latent in every man and woman, Carnegie said, and opens unlimited vistas for higher income and greater enjoyment of life.

"Every member of this audience has hundreds of good speeches in his system," Carnegie declared.

He advised the novice to begin his public speaking career by discussing himself, "the subject on which he is the world's greatest authority."

From discussing this subject, on which no one can dispute his remarks, the amateur speaker passes easily to more difficult topics and soon is recognized as a leader in his club or office, Carnegie said.

Skill in handling people, according to the speaker, is equally essential for success and happiness.

Seeking guidance on the technique of human relationships, Carnegie said he was amazed to discover no textbook on the subject ever had been written.

His book, "How to Win Friends and Influence People," written after years of research, was an attempt to fill the gap, he said.

Past and present pupils of Carnegie's public speaking courses rounded out the program with 100-second talks on the value of their training.

Lieut. Charette, Merrimac Hero, Rites Set Today

Services for Lieut. George Charette, 70, U. S. N. (retired), who achieved fame for his part in the sinking of the U. S. S. Merrimac at the entrance to Santiago harbor in 1898, will be held at 10 a. m. today in the Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Charette, who died in Lowell, Mass., his native city, Monday, was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for "extraordinary heroism" in the Satiago incident. He entered the Navy as an enlisted man in 1884, and retired at his own request in 1925.

Yacht Passenger Wins $3,750 Injury Award

District Court yesterday awarded Thomas R. Monroe $3,750 for injuries sustained when a pleasure yacht on which he was a passenger figured in a collision with the S. S. Potomac July 12, 1936.

A. H. Bakshian Dies; Expert on Oriental Rugs

Authority, 68, in Business Here Since the Late Nineties.

A. H. Bakshian, 68, proprietor of a rug shop at 2601 Connecticut avenue northwest, and an authority on Oriental rugs, died yesterday at his home, 1865 Kalorama road northwest. He had been ill four days with pneumonia.

A resident of Washington for nearly a half century, Mr. Bakshian had been in the rug business since the late nineties. At one time he operated his own looms in Asia Minor.

Born in Constantinople, he came to the United States when 17 years old. He attended a Connecticut preparatory school and then entered Columbian College, now George Washington University.

After leaving college, he became a buyer for the W. B. Moses Department Store, representing the firm in London, Paris and New York. He then set up the store on Connecticut avenue.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Yefkime Bakshian; two daughters, Armand and Mary Bakshian and a son, Aram Bakshiam. All live in Washington. Plans for funeral services had not been completed last night.

Farouk 18 Today; Egypt's Legation Plans Reception

King Farouk I of Egypt will be 18 today and here, as well as in his ancient land, the event will be celebrated with festivities.

Flags will fly gaily at the Egyptian Legation, 2301 Massachusetts avenue northwest, and in the afternoon there will be a reception, with Hussein Mahmoud Rrady, Charge d'Affaires, acting as host in the absence of the Minister.

King Farouk, whose recent marriage to Miss Farida Zulficar attracted wide attention, is the youngest ruling monarch in the world. However, he is not the first to have mounted Egypt's throne at such an early age. Thirty-three centuries ago the Pharaoh Amenhotep II, eldest son of Thotmes III, also took over the reins of government when he was 18.

Mrs. Boyle Willing To Have D.C. Scan Committee Books

The request by District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan to examine the books of the Citizens Permanent Committee will not go unheeded, Mrs John J. Boyle, jr., chairman, declared yesterday. Mrs. Boyle indicated the board would have no objections.

Several days ago she sent Donovan some bills for milk, bread, butter and other supplies purchased for needy school children. She asked that the District, which is holding approximately $2,000 deposited by the Citizens Emergency Committee, predecessors of Mrs. Boyle's group, use that fund in paying the bills.

In a letter to Mrs. Boyle, Donovan said the bills totaled $2,949.92, which "amount to some $800 more than the balance remaining in the account referred to."

Dr. John K. Cartwright will preside at the closing service at 7:45 this evening.

Mrs. Edna Patton Dies in Roanoke

Mrs. Edna Patton, 38, wife of Clarence E. Patton, utility officer at Roanoke Veterans' Facility, died yesterday in Roanoke.

A former nurse at Providence Hospital, Mrs. Patton had lived in Washington for several years. She was born in Seneca, Md., and was a graduate of Darnestown High School.

Mrs. Patton was a sister of R. Cecil Allnut, District employe; Warner S. Allnut, connected with the C. & P. Telephone Co., and Miss Edith L. Allnut, of Lyon Park, Va. She is also survived by her mother, Mrs. Betty M. Allnut, of Lyon Park, and four daughters, Mary, Jean, Patricia and Barbara.

Services will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. at the V. L. Speare Co., 1009 H street northwest. Burial will be at Beallsville, Md.

Artillery Captain Killed by Own Gun

Fort Bragg, N. C., Feb. 10 (AP).—Capt. Carl E. Berg, 40, of the Thirty-sixth Field Artillery, was killed by a bullet from his own pistol late yesterday as he was making a reconnaissance preparatory to target practice. Authorities of the Army post said they believed the death was accidental.

Surviving are his widow and two children. He will be buried tomorrow in Arlington Cemetery.

Central Council to Meet.

Members of the Central Neighborhood Council will be guests of the recreation committee at the Y. W. C. A., 614 E street northwest, at 3:30 p. m. today. M. O. Eldridge, of the Traffic Bureau, will speak on "Traffic Hazards." James Ring, chairman of the council, will preside.

Wife Sues Film Writer.

Miss Blakeslee to Talk.

Miss Ruth Blakeslee, of the Social Security Board, will address the Council of Social Agencies committee on service to the blind at 3:45 p. m. today in the Y. W. C. A. at Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

Now . . . a new type of Hollywood column written by a true insider—HEDDA HOPPER

Here's a Hollywood column written with charm and humor, rather than smart cracks and rumor . . . a column containing sustained daily interest because it is written by a true "insider." Hedda Hopper has been associated with Hollywood for 20 years. You have seen her dozens of times in important, sustaining roles. She knows everyone—knew them when—knows them still.

And Hollywood agrees that of all Hollywood people, Hedda Hopper is best fitted to write this new kind of column. Witty—gay—charming—vibrant—these are a few of the adjectives Hollywood applies to Hedda. And, too, Hedda Hopper is known as the best dressed woman in Hollywood. With the movies setting the world's styles, knowing and reporting fashion is important as well as entertaining.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The man with whom I've been going regularly the past six months is 23 years old, good looking, agreeable and a hard worker. However, before we met he had been leading a rather wild and reckless life, which included drinking and questionable companions. As our friendship progressed (we first met over a year ago) he stopped drinking (at my request), dropped most of his former companions and started going to church with me.

• • • •

Now he claims I am the only girl he ever really loved, and that he wants to marry me as soon as he is earning enough money. He lives at home and helps support his family. Our parents have known each other for years, but my mother does not approve of him because of his past. I realize his family is partly to blame for not having disciplined him as he was growing up. He has only a fifth grade education while I am a high school graduate.

• • • •

I have gone with boys of different types and ages since my freshman year in high school. I've had chances to marry some of these boys but no matter how good their character was, I did not care for them as I do for this boy. I know I am very fond of him but I am not sure I love him. I am only 19 and have tried to make up my own mind, but I find I need your advice. Should I stop going with him entirely before great unhappiness is caused, since it is possible he may return to his old ways? Or should I continue helping him lead a better life—which he says I am doing—even if it means becoming his wife eventually? Sincerely, VIRGINIAN.

• • • •

Things to Consider.

DEAR VIRGINIAN: An erstwhile wild and wayward man's love for a "good woman" is seldom, of itself, an efficient incentive to keep his feet steadfastly on the paths of righteousness, because, as I have said before in this column, as the twig is bent, so the tree inclines. Of course, a man whose early environment had been such as to deny him opportunities for wholesome companionship and constructive outlets for being and doing—whose character had blossomed in weeds for sheer lack of proper cultivation and seeding—might, if he were a fundamentally purposeful and decent person of intuitive fastidiousness, take to the better life like a duck to water, if and when finally introduced to its ways and benefits. But he would thereafter lead a sober, industrious, disciplined, God-fearing existence for its own sake; not for the shallow, unrooted purpose of keeping in the good graces of a given woman.

• • • •

In this case what to do with your admirer depends, very largely, on the true nature of his hold on and interest in the way of life you represent. If he has given up drink only to please you, and not because he realizes now what a foolish, evasive, cowardly and destructive opiate it is; if he has given up his questionable companions only because he would be embarrassed to introduce them to you, or because they do not fit into his present scheme of higher social pretentiousness, and not because he realizes they are wastrels whose lives are going nowhere, whereas he sincerely desires and intends to turn his life to constructive account; if he goes to church with you because he finds real solace, inspiration and guidance in the house of God and in the pattern of orthodox religious practice, and not out of sheer social expediency, as a handy means of ingratiating himself with you and your family, and also out of a purely human desire to spend as much time as possible in your company; if, in other words, his changed attitude spells a fundamental reorientation to life and not merely a hither-thither superficial adaptation to a current situation and a current emotional attraction, then you might be justified in letting yourself fall in love with him.

• • • •

But these are considerations which you must weigh carefully for yourself. None knows the answers but the man himself, and a man in love, or in the throes of an infatuation, finds it very difficult to be honest with himself. Rationalization of motives and conduct comes much more readily to him then than honest, searching analysis and irrefutable deduction.

• • • •

It is my opinion that a man with a fifth grade education is seriously handicapped in making his own way in the world, particularly when his lack of education is his own fault, and not to be attributed to lack of opportunity. It is my opinion, too, that marriages are happiest when the man, for reasons of ability, character, and intellectual and educational equipment, is easily able to be the sturdy oak; when the woman may know that in all emergencies he can be depended upon to see the twain through. And, in this case, it appears that all the sturdier qualities are invested in yourself. My intuitive analysis of this situation is that you would, in all probability, be inviting a very haphazard and possibly very unhappy future for yourself in marrying this boy. Persons with his case history seldom effect any very remarkable or enduring reform of character. And yet, as I have indicated, there are occasional exceptions to the general rule.

• • • •

Since you are only 19, and marriage with this man is out of the question for years to come; since he has been dedicated to his new way of life for less than a year and hence hasn't had a chance to prove to himself or to you that the reform is intrinsic and lasting; since your courtship is only 6 months old and you are not yet definitely in love with him, I suggest—indeed, emphatically advise—that you begin now to relegate him to the status of good friend rather than best beau. It is foolish to let yourself drift into love with him, or to become helplessly habituated to his companionship, before you know whether he is worthwhile, or whether he is capable of unswerving loyalty to a cause, or purpose or a person. The only way to obviate that very likely possibility of falling in love unwisely is to divide your time and emotional interests amongst a variety of men. M. H.

A Woman Excels As Steeplejack

Dizzy heights hold no terror for Ethel (Stacks) Hawkins, steeplejill, who reached the top of her profession by painting the flagpoles on the tallest buildings in New York, Chicago and St. Louis.

Leaving school to become the wife and assistant of a steeplejack, her career began when her husband fell from a high flagpole. A few days after his death she climbed the 100-foot flagpole and finished his job.

Although she has a business employing two dozen steeplejacks and helpers, Mrs. Hawkins often completes the more difficult jobs herself. She wears silk stockings and high-heeled shoes with her overalls and has never had a serious fall.

Bolero Brim for Youthfulness

WHAT with suits and boleros, ties and sashes, the trend toward youth has been growing more pronounced every day. And now the tailored hats reflect this influence. Above is one of the new Wimbleton felts featuring the new bolero brim, and a chin strap which adds a naive little girl effect. This style is finding popularity with the younger business girls who like its saucy, jaunty effect. The hat comes in navy, black and the new leather shades.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Feb. 10.

ONE OF THE greatest American sports of our age is the thrilling game of name-tossing. Born largely of the vogue for gibber-columnists and flip society chatterboxes, the bandying of nifty names has replaced baseball as the great national pastime. And it is this bailiwick, where so-called "celebrities" are a dime a bushel, that it reaches the stature of a major vice. You know what I mean — show-offs adore saying loudly, "As George Jean Nathan, my pal, said to me while I was having a cocktail with Loretta Young, Senator Borah and Charlie McCarthy—!" That sore of balderdash."

ALICE HUGHES.

One of the sport's funniest symptoms, to me, is the way clever and widely read society reporters of the fly type like to sprinkle nicknames through their cute daily pieces. In their spry minds and masterpieces, the Dowager Mrs. Vanderhoosen de Pooster-Smythe, is either "Toots" or "Butch." It's more clubby-like, and proves that they are inside the door, and palsy with The Great. And this—is no idle joshing. Here are a few tossed nicknames from the local sheet:

John Hay Whitney, of couse, is "Jock," and his long-legged wife, a real Altemus of Philly, is "Liz." His cousin Cornelius is "Sonny" in the papers. Eleanor Young, last year's Glamour Ace of the Debs, is "Cookie," and the 1937-38 prize babe, Gloria Baker, is "Mimi." Dignified Clarence Mackay, husband of regal Anna Diva Case, is "Clarry" to the irreverent. There are "Livvy" and "Cordy" Biddles, of THE Biddles. Mrs. Robert Ogden Bacon jr., is "Bunty." Another "Liz" is Mrs. Leonard Govett, who was a duPont. There is one local lady who is dubbed "Muggy" right in print. I'm a peaceful girl, but I'd sue for that.

Of course, there are limits to this gay nicknaming of the swells. Some notables are sacrosant and untouchable. The day I see the great and dignified Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt referred to as "Mrs. 'Coony'"—then I'll believe the village bright boys really have the courage of their whims!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The recent marriage of Actress Marta Abba (of "Tovarich" fame) to Mr. Severance Millikin in Cleveland, interested us quite a mite, Marta, a brilliant trouper of the Pirandello School, pleased the city in that play about Tzarist Russians, but never caused the Hudson to overflow. But she fascinated her new bridegroom, a member of the very top-flight Severance clan of the Ohio metrop, and now she will live on the shores of Lake Erie. Luck played a part in this meeting, too. For if Mme. Leontovich hadn't squabbled over terms with Producer Gilbert Miller, Marta would never have played the part in America at all. So the happy Mr. Millikin, it seems to me, owes Leontovich a very nice present indeed for his current felicity.

• • • •

Another dear friend of mine, Mae Allison, once a screen star, is married to a Clevelander, too, and is living there happily. Why, even I married a former Forest Citizen, but he was neither rich nor social—just charming, in his nobler moments . . . Hey, what is this, a Cleveland edition? How's about Gotham?

The terrific Sheila Barrett, mimic with stiletto in her brain, has shifted her base from Mr. Rockefeller's Rainbow Room Saloon to the very uppity Sert Room at the Waldorf. But I am happy to say that the snootiest surroundings don't sissify our Sheila—she lashes out just as viciously on Park avenue!

• • • •

The biggest winter-sports and indoor-frolic event for youngsters in these parts is the Dartmouth winter carnival, which starts fizzing today up at Hanover, N. H. Dozens of our girls have gone up for the fun, after consulting our greatest expert on that fete, Dorothy Lathrop, of a big avenue store. Dorothy's husband is a Dartmouth faculty member, and as a veteran of the affairs she knows precisely what to wear, how to act and what to tell the importunate boy! Specially good on ski problems!

• • • •

It positively can't be long, now, for I have just sat through the first of the early Easter clothes previews. All the toggery was very nice—I'll tell more of that later—but what caught my jaded eye was the presence of no less than 16—count 'em—feminine Vanderbilts at the show! Imagine, 16 living Vanderbilts! They stopped every mannequin, made her turn round, asked the prices, and nearly gummed up the backstage routine. But after all, my dear—Vanderbilts!

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Drop in Births Marked.

The people of the United States are becoming older. When the machine age came in with the creation of more goods, and better distribution of the food supply, there was an enormous increase in population growth. The development of our knowledge of the infectious diseases and the public health movement, especially the improvement of the milk supply, cut down the death rate in infancy so that more people survive to the age of 20. Especially female children who reached the child-bearing age, and all over the world they added to the population. Because the United States offered such opportunities for expansion, young immigrants from abroad were attracted to our shores, and resulted in a great population.

But since 1920, other factors have entered into the picture. The machine age has created its own problems of the struggle for existence. The expansion of the United States had been pretty well limited. The increased population had itself raised competition to the place where prudent couples could not afford to bring large families into the world.

Whatever the reasons, the facts are after 1920 the age group below five years no longer was being fully replaced. In 1850, those under 20 years constituted nearly 60 per cent of the population. In 1930, they constituted about 40 per cent. At the same time, there were twice as many people in the United States over the age of 50.

It is estimated (by Hocker, Modley and Taylor in their new "Graphic History of the United States") that by 1950, 30 per cent of our population will be 45 years of age or over.

If this does occur, it will mean a complete overhauling of our educational and industrial programs. Middle-aged people will have to be retrained for productive living.

Although more people are reaching the age of 50, there is no evidence that the extreme limits of human life span have been extended.

"I understand perfectly, Modom. But you have away too much hair——"

"Me! Why I haven't ANY hair!"

"Ha! Ha! Ha! Pardon me, Modom, but that is too 'unny!"

"But really you don't know how thin my hair is——"

"Ha! Ha! Ha! That is good! Andre! Come here. Say, she says she has no hair. Ha! Ha! Ha! Look at that!"

"Oh, but Modom, you have such a beautifully shaped head! It is a shame to hide it. I shall just take a little here . . . to show the line . . . and a little more here . . . and then some here . . . "

"Wait! Please! Not there! Why, I've simply spent YEARS growing that piece. Please——"

"But, Modom, I am not really cutting your hair . . . just shaping it up a little."

"Oh, I know, but you barbers——"

"Oh, Modom! Not barbers! We are not BARBERS! We are more—well, sculptors."

"Well, please don't sculpt right in there . . . it's so thin."

"Thin! Ha! Ha! Ha! Your hair is far too thick, Modom. It is more chic to show the cranium——"

"Please—I simply can't stand it! To see all my hair go this way!"

"Don't you think you've cut enough in there?"

"No, Modom; I must thin it in here . . . like this . . . to show the headline. You have really a beautifully shaped head——"

"I know. I know. But how can I face my friends with ALL my hair gone?"

"Your friends will say you look ten years younger, Modom. Hair is so aging. You have still away too much."

"But to see all my hair go this way——"

"You are only being sentimental, Modom. Besides, I am almost through. Now just this little tuft at the back . . . and a little more on the side. There! No, wait; I must get a little more in here . . . and here. Now then! Is not that lovely? Wait; I will get you a mirror. See that line! It is lovely, Modom! It is LOVELY!"

"O-o-h! but——"

"Now wait, Modom; you are not yet used to it. Just look at that line!"

"Why—why, I haven't a hair left!"

"Ha! Ha! Ha! You have loads of hair, Modom. I have really not CUT your hair. I have only given you a very conservative trim. As soon as you get used to it you will LOVE it. You will ADORE it. Then you must come back, Modom, and I will really sculpt you."

Colors Feature Paris Showings

Tweeds, lightweight woolen checks and high-shade pastel woolens were prominent among the variety of fabrics in the collections of Marcel Rochat and Robert Piguet.

Mustard, mauve, magenta, wine, emerald, jade and black, combined in vivid shades, were shown by both houses.

Piguet showed many tailored suits with fitted jackets two inches less than wrist length. One and two piece dresses with contrasting high-shade jackets or redingotes were prominent in the showing.

Rochat featured jacket suits, frequently with contrasting skirts and blouses, while colored incrustation was used repeatedly in jackets, dresses and redingotes.

Baby Clinic to Open In Store Next Week

Exhibit to Cover Research Work for Children.

What science and research have done to aid mothers in educating babies in proper habits will be demonstrated here next week at the Baby Development Clinic, to be held at the S. Kann Sons Department Store in connection with National Children's Week.

The clinic, a division of the Household Science Institute, was founded by Mrs. Herman Nusbaum, its present director, who devoted many years to research into baby needs. Miss Dorothy Voss, a graduate nurse, will be in charge of the clinic here. Among the demonstration topics will be eating, walking, talking and toilet training. Miss Voss will give private consultations to mothers having special problems.

The lectures and demonstrations will be nontechnical and nonmedical and will be presented from the viewpoint of the average mother in the home. They will be free to the public.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

If you should commission Mrs. Raymond Ives, fashion editor of a woman's magazine, to do your shopping for you, her first consideration would be your figure. She would want to know whether you are tall and thin, short and just a bit plump, or large or tiny.

Her suggestions on fashions for different types of figures are so helpful that I am passing them along to you. When you shop keep these suggestions in mind and you will be better pleased with your purchases.

For the tall, thin girl Mrs. Ives would buy most of the things that she would not buy for the short, stout girl. The tall girl wears with dash choker beads, collars, scarves and furs that make the short girl appear shorter and stouter. Also, she looks especially well in the splashy prints and droopy brimmed hats that are fashion risks for all the other types.

Padding Sometimes Used.

However, the tall, thin girl has her troubles. She is likely to be narrow through the shoulders, which calls for padding in the shoulders of the dress. "If her shoulders slope," Mrs. Ives advises, "the dress should be padded to bring the shoulders up and out, and even her evening dresses should have covered shoulders or sleeves to give this additional breadth." Unless her figure is well proportioned, the tall girl must choose dresses that make the waist appear smaller and perhaps higher than it actually is.

The short, stout figure looks best in clothes that accentuate the line from waist to hem, and which have no collars or necklines that make the neck look shorter. This fashion editor recommends hats with upturned brims and trimmings and slim, unobtrusive belts.

Some of the style hints for the short girl also apply to the petite figure. If you are tiny be glad of it! For Mrs. Ives thinks this type can appear young almost indefinitely "if she keeps her figure—but it should be a fresh youthfulness; not the baby-doll kind." Instead of leaning to the Southern belle type of dress, you should buy tailored suits and frocks with simple lines. There should never be any ruffles or bands to cut the length of the skirt. Boleros are all right for the small girl, Mrs. Ives thinks, because they accentuate that line from the waist to hem, giving the illusion of height.

At this time of the year prints are a controversial subject, especially if they are for the large woman. Some fashion authorities favor only the very small, inconspicuous design for her, but Mrs. Ives sees no objection to either the small or medium design, since neatness of the print is the main thing for this figure. The redingote is flattering to this type figure and is always smart with print dresses. For beach wear the dressmaker type bathing suit and slacks with a hip length coat are most becoming. Shorts were never designed for the large woman.

The right clothes may, as the saying goes, make the woman—but they can't make her figure over, nor can they completely disguise measurements that are very much out of proportion. You must exercise for a tiny waistline, or for the slim hips that make your figure look tall rather than wide.

Barbecued Beef Wins Post Prize

By Jean Green.

WHAT are the secrets that insure the perfect cookery of meat? The Washington Post readers this week contributed generously in answer to that question, and if the scores of recipes received are typical there will be no failures and the dishes served will be new and different. All readers agreed they prefer searing their meat before roasting, and demanded not only a moist roast, but also one that is full of flavor.

Miss Blanche Pernette Luck, 772 Ridge street, Charlottesville, Va., who is an expert on this subject, writes that she does not salt the roast before placing in the oven, and that she always roasts without a top on her roaster. Mrs. Blanche Myers, Hagerstown, Md., never adds water to the roast until a few minutes before taking out of the oven. She always serves roast beef with Yorkshire pudding.

The recipe winning the first prize was submitted by Mrs. J. L. Bell, 1402 N. Glebe road, Arlington, Va. Her recipe is an excellent dish which has been brought from Oklahoma City. The barbecue sauce adds flavor to the meat and aids in tenderizing it during cookery.

Barbecued Roast of Beef.

¼ cup of vinegar
½ cup of water
3 tablespoons of sugar
½ teaspoon of salt
⅛ teaspoon of pepper
Good dash of cayenne
1 teaspoon of chile powder
2 thin slices of onion
1 small can of tomato juice

Stir ingredients together and cook slowly until as thick as catsup. Wipe a 3-pound rump roast and force small cloves of garlic into the center. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover with this sauce which is really thick.

Place in a roaster and sear in a very hot oven until browned. Reduce the heat to 325 degrees and add enough stock or water to cover the bottom of the roaster. Cover with tight lid and cook from 1½ to 2 hours.

Serve on an attractive chop plate with little yellow neck squash, steamed, and dipped into melted butter, and buttered broculli.

The recipe winning the second prize was submitted by Mrs. Betty Garofalo, 1900 F street northwest. The dish has a piquant flavor due to the blend of beef and spiced pork. The technique is simple and there can be no failures if these clear directions are followed:

PIGS IN BLANKETS.

2 pounds of round steak
1 pound of green link sausage
3 onions sliced
1 small piece of suet

Have the butcher slice the steak very thin and into strips the width of the sausages.

Salt and pepper each strip and roll a sausage in each. Fasten together with toothpicks and salt and pepper the exterior of each roll. Cut the suet into small pieces and melt in a good-sized vessel that has a lid. Saute onions and sear meat until brown on all sides. Add enough water to cover meat, cover and simmer until tender (about 1½ hours). Remove pigs in blankets and thicken gravy with a little flour. Serve with mashed potatoes.

A pot roast flavored with orange is a new taste sensation. The recipe is sent in Mrs. Althea VanBoskirk, 4101 Twenty-fifth street, North Arlington, Va.

ROAST OF BEEF MINNESOTA STYLE.

Purchase 6 pounds of shoulder clod (ask for a piece with a small bone and little fat). Wash the meat, dry, and sear in a preheated top of the stove in a heavy roaster using about 2 tablespoons of cooking butter.

Use a high flame but not the highest. Turn the roast as it browns. The searing process may take 15 to 20 minutes. Reduce the flame to the lowest possible and put two or three rinds of orange on top of the roast. Lemon or lime rinds (two or three to a 6-pound roast) are equally useful. Sprinkle with 1 teaspoon of salt and ¼ teaspoon of pepper.

Cover with a heavy cover that retains the steam and cook over the lowest possible flame for 3 to 4 hours. One will not be able to have a "rare roast" because the shoulder clod is a tough cut and 4 hours of cooking makes the roast easy to carve. The meat can be cut with a fork.

Do not add water and do not lift the cover to look at the roast unless necessary. Try to retain as much steam as possible by letting the juices collected on the cover drip back into the roast.

A Spanish steak sent in by Miss Helen Piggott, Purcellville, Va., wins the fourth prize in the contest. The thick steak is simmered in a flavorful sauce until tender.

SPANISH STEAK.

1½ to 2 pounds of round steak cut thick
4 tablespoons of flour
2 cups of canned tomatoes
1 small onion
1 green pepper
1 teaspoon of salt
2 teaspoons of sugar
Few cloves and peppercorns
Small piece of bay leaf.

Pound the flour into the steak, heat some butter in a deep dish and brown the meat in it. Add the tomatoes, chopped onion, and green pepper and seasonings. Have the cloves, peppercorns and bay leaf tied in a small piece of cheesecloth. Cover and cook slowly until the meat is tender (about 2 hours). Remove the cheesecloth bag before serving.

Texas hash is the concoction that wins the fifth prize. It is an economical dish glorifying the hamburger and was sent in by Mrs. Ira Lee Law, 921 Hamlin street northeast.

TEXAS HASH.

2 large onions
2 green peppers, cut fine
3 tablespoons of shortening or lard
1 pound of hamburg
2 cups of canned tomatoes
⅓ cup of uncooked rice
1 teaspoon of chili powder
1 teaspoon of salt
¼ teaspoon of pepper.

Cook the onions and green peppers slowly in the lard until the onions are yellow. Add the hamburg and saute until the mixture falls apart. Add the tomatoes, rice, and seasonings. Arrange in a large casserole, cover, and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for 45 minutes or until done. This serves eight persons.

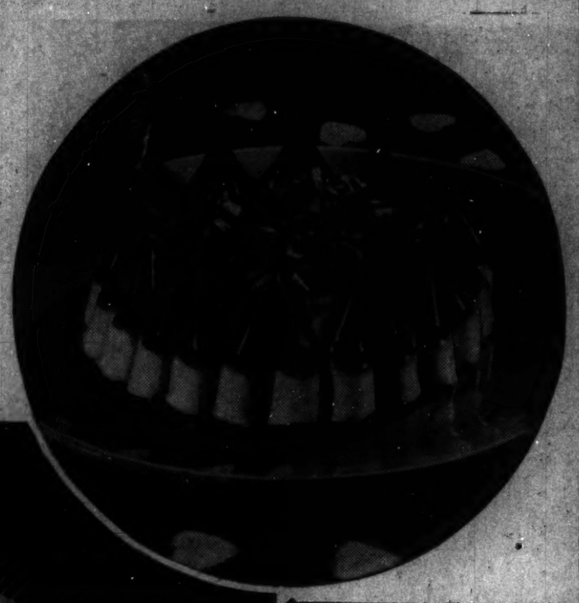
To Honor St. Valentine at Tea or Luncheon

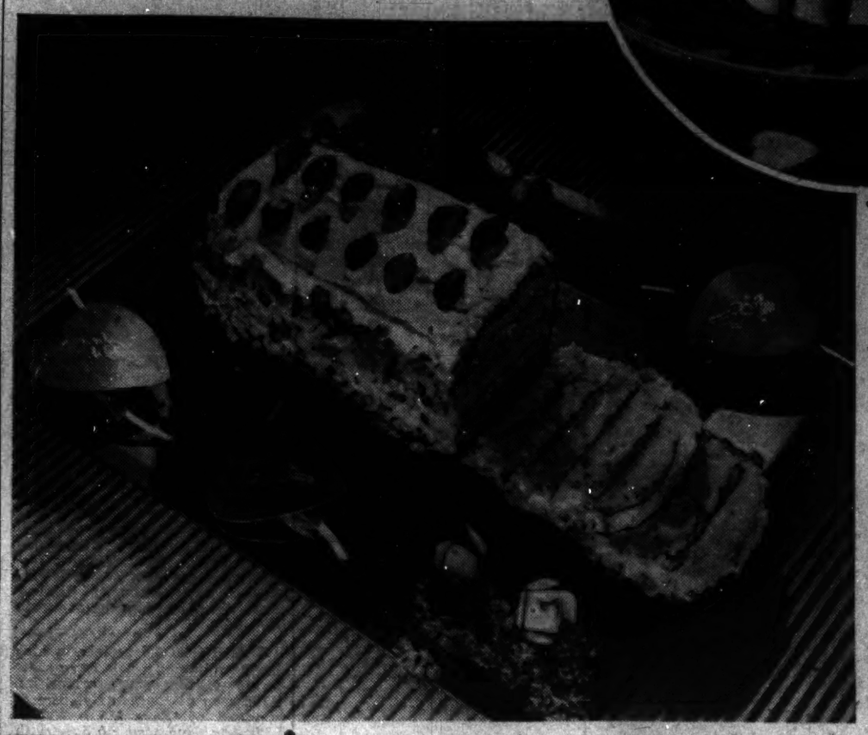
ST. VALENTINE'S day officially opens the mid-winter entertaining season with a flurry of hearts, bows, and arrows, and refreshments in keeping with the sentiments of the day.

Cinnamon hearts imbedded in fluffy white cocoanut frosting, red and white mints, candied fruits, and delicate meringues add part ytouches to usual desserts.

Two dishes pictured add glamour to the menu. The sandwich loaf, below, is an ideal buffet refreshment. The molded red and white gelatin dessert, right, is perfect for the noon luncheon or as a special bridge party refreshment.

The sandwich loaf is made in five layers with chopped nuts and mustard used for one layer, minced water cress on another, and minced pimiento and olives in the last. The loaf is iced with cream cheese and garnished with nuts.





CAPITAL DISHES

A menu designed to recapture old Virginia atmosphere was served by Mrs. Joseph P. Crockett, 819 Prince street, Alexandria, Va., before the Southern Cotillion Saturday at the George Mason Hotel. The party was given in honor of Mrs. Frederick D. Richardson, Fairfax, Va., who was instrumental in organizing the cotillion four years ago.

Supper Party.
Rum cocktails
Crackling canapes
Old Virginia ham
Hot biscuits
Compotes filled with potato chips
Creamed oysters in toast boxes served from an old-fashioned tureen
Ambrosia with fresh coconut
Coffee

The menu was served buffet style. The crackling canapes were made by spreading crackers with peanut butter, then sprinkling generously with cracklings that had been first roasted. Before serving the crackers are placed under the broiler for a few minutes and served crisp.

CODFISH SOUFFLE

1 cup salt codfish
2 cups raw potato cubes
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons tomato catsup
2 eggs

Shred and wash the salt codfish in water. Combine with the raw potato cubes and simmer until the potatoes are tender. Drain and mash. Add butter and beat until fluffy. Add the catsup and beaten egg yolks. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a casserole and bake for 20 minutes in an oven set at 350 degrees.

Leftover Potatoes Good Base for Salad

Leftover potatoes can be saved for hot German potato salad. If dsired bits of left over ham or hard-cooked egg can be added for additional flavor.

For six persons six potatoes are needed. Pan broil four slices of bacon. Chop one onion and saute in the hot bacon fat. Heat one-quarter cup of water, one-half cup of vinegar, one teaspoon of sugar, one-half teaspoon of salt and one-quarter teaspoon of pepper. Add to the onion mixture. Add the minced bacon and combine with the potatoes. Heat and serve hot.

Heart's Delight Salad Marks Perfect Valentine Day Table

Molded Cherry and Lemon Gelatine With Watercress in Middle Should Be Served in Setting of Early Spring Flowers.

WEARING YOUR heart, or any number of hearts, on your best party table is quite the correct order of things on February 14, February's gay calendar of party occasion is endeared to the hearts of all true hostesses—and none of these days is more inspiring than that of St. Valentine.

A molded heart salad, quivering in its own red and white beauty, is the perfect answer to the Valentine's party refreshment problem. Heart's Delight, it is called, with proper sentimental sweetness, and here is at least one item in a none-too-flexible world that we can mold nearer to the heart's desire.

JEAN GREEN.

Any sort of heart-shaped mold will do for this quivering expression of the spirit of the day. One of the most festive of these has a crown of small hearts surrounding the edge. A combination of pale lemon gelatin to which "Philadelphia" cream cheese has been added, and cherry gelatin for the heart crown itself make a heart's delight as beautiful as it is wavering. And that is all one can ask of a heart on St. Valentine's Day. The center of this master stroke of Dan Cupid is filled with crisp watercress, just to lend a note of additional spring color and flavor.

Such a festive party dish as this deserves a background of simple spring-time beauty. For example, the table may be set with small, old-fashioned baskets heaped with early spring flowers, with deep purple violets, jonquils, and narcissus. Small red paper hearts may be sprinkled over the table cloth, completing a perfect picture of gay and charming sentiment, in the very best tradition of an old-fashioned Valentine.

Heart's Delight Salad.

1 package cherry gelatin
2 cups boiling water
1 package lemon gelatin
1½ cups boiling water
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
1 package "Philadelphia" cream cheese
Watercress
Salad dressing

Dissolve the cherry gelatin in 2 cups boiling water; cool and pour into the bottom of a fancy ring mold. Chill until firm.

Dissolve the lemon gelatin in 1½ cup boiling water; cool. Blend the whipped cream and the cream cheese, then blend this into the lemon gelatin. Pour on top of the chilled cherry gelatin. Chill until firm; unmold and fill the center with crisp watercress. Serve with salad dressing.

Carlton Chef Finds Capital Easy to Please

U. S. Fails to Appreciate Its Native Foods, Says Fisson.

By Nancy Ellis.

IF YOU would be successful in menu planning, keep a mind open for new suggestions and ideas, advises Chef Armand Fisson, of the Carlton.

CHEF FISSON.

"Many Americans do not appreciate their native foods," he said. "I feel that French cooking has set the standard in the culinary world, but I am constantly "discovering" some new American dish. For example, I think eggplant with tomato is good, but last year on a vacation in North Carolina for the first time I tasted fried okra. That is the dish! You see, after 30 years in the kitchen I had found a new recipe."

On the whole, Chef Fisson finds that the palate of Washingtonians is easy to satisfy.

"In planning menus the best dishes from the continent are included along with certain American dishes," he said. "I like to start the meal with fruit then have some type of French soup. I find Americans like sauce and gravy and the chicken potpie and baby lamb en curry is very popular. Another popular dish is Virginia ham with sauce. It is the perfect seasoning that makes them successful."

Chef Fisson was born in Paris and started at the age of 10 years as an apprentice pastry chef. After three years of apprenticeship he got a job in one of the hotels. Later he became interested in all phases of cooking and was chef in Paris, London and Vienna before coming to the New York Ritz Carlton three years ago.

"Many of the very simple dishes are avoided by the average housewife because they fail to develop a cooking technique. Some of these are dishes that we have made famous in our hotel. A mushroom souffle or a meringue are examples."

Meringue Glace Praline.

Meringue shells are made by beating 3 egg whites until stiff and adding 5 ounces of sugar, then cooking in a slow oven until firm. The sugar must be added slowly.

Praline.

1 cup of sugar
½ cup of chopped almonds
½ cup of hazelnuts

Cook sugar in a pan until brown. Add the almonds, mix well. Put the praline on a marble slab until cold. Then pulverize your praline and mix with vanilla ice cream. Use this cream as a filling for the meringue shells and serve with a garnish of whipped cream and a maraschino cherry.

Lenten Main Dish Recipes Feature New Post Contest

What is your favorite Lenten recipe? Do you have an unusual method of preparing cheese souffle? Or a recipe for cheese and hominy loaf? Or a fluffy omelet that is epicurean in taste and texture. Or a recipe for an appetizing bean loaf that can take its place as a satisfying main dish? Or a new sauce for baked fish?

These are only a few ideas for the Lenten main dish. The contest this week offers five prizes for the most practical and unusual recipe. The first prize is $3, the second $2, and there are three prizes of $1 each.

Other recipes that are not prize winners will be reserved and used with the name of the sender in the daily menu used on the women's page.

Apple Ginger Cake.

Two large, sour apples, pared and grated, plus the juice and rind of one lemon and one cup of sugar, cooked for five minutes, with constant stirring, make a delicious filling for two layers of spice or ginger cake. Cool filling before spreading; dust top of cake with powdered sugar instead of frosting. Serve cake soon after filling is placed between layers.

"At Homes" were the order of the afternoon again yesterday when Mrs. Charles L. McNary, wife of Senator McNary, of Oregon, received in her apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue and Mrs. Millard Tydings greeted guests at the home of her mother, Mrs. Knight Davies, at 2914 Massachusetts avenue.

Dropping by Mrs. McNary's first, I found several others had the same idea I did—to get there early for a chat with the hostess before the crowd arrived. The handsomely furnished drawing room and cozy dining room were almost filled by the time I arrived. Vases of jonquils and iris lent a springlike air to the apartment and were used effectively in the centerpiece for the tea table.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Mrs. McNary wore a black velvet frock with a long string of pearls, ear-rings to match and a corsage of violets. Assisting her at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. John W. Jenkins, in a black ensemble; Mrs. Hamilton Fish, whose wide-brimmed woods' green hat was worn with a trim black frock, and Mrs. Fred W. Sladen.

A number of guests were involved in the case of mistaken identity at the reception. Mrs. Louis Owsley, very handsome in a black ensemble with white accents, came into the dining room and found herself being greeted effusively by two or three women she did not know. A few minutes later, Mrs. Bruce Barton arrived, and the mystery was solved. She and Mrs. Owsley look enough alike to be mistaken for each other any time.

Miss Hilda Yen With Miss Wang

Miss Yoeh E. Wang, daughter of the Chinese Ambassador, arrived with Miss Hilda Yen, niece of Dr. W. W. Yen, one-time Chinese envoy to Washington. This pretty Chinese aviatrix, who arrived in Washington last month, is a center of interest wherever she appears. At present she is studying the work in some of the Government bureaus, and has recently been devoting her time to the Labor Department. "I started studying the Children's Bureau, went from there to the Women's Bureau and have found both so interesting I'd like to have months to spend learning more about them," she said. Before long, however, she will return to her homeland to join the women's air forces, and to help in the women's work generally.

Mme. Alexander Troyanovsky, wife of the Soviet Ambassador, joined the group with which Miss Yen was talking. After the two were introduced, Mme. Troyanovsky mentioned that her husband met Miss Yen a few years ago in Moscow.

Among other guests calling on Mrs. McNary were Mrs. Ralph Church, Mrs. Sol Bloom, who arrived with her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom; Mrs. William Lawrence Breeze, in a brown ensemble, who came with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Fish. Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Miss Mabel Boardman, Miss Mary Patten and Mrs. Francis Savage were others who came in while I was there. Scores of guests must have gone in later, for as I left a long line of automobiles was rolling into the driveway of the apartment house.

Mrs. Davies Receives With Mrs. Tydings

Alternating at the tea table were Mme. Alexander Troyanovsky, Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, Mrs. John H. Overton, Mrs. Edward Burke, Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahoney. A centerpiece of roses and carnations flanked by four tall white candles were used as decoration for the tea table. Over in a corner punch was served.

Among the scores of guests—to mention but a few at random—were Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, in a handsome gray ensemble; Mrs. Sumner Welles, Mrs. Blair Bannister, Mme. Marc Peter, who seems to know everybody at every party; Mme. Vladimir Hurban, Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney.

Also Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts, Lady Lister Kaye, Mrs. Charles Warren, Mrs. Louis Caldwell, who has just returned from a week's visit to New York; Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. Claude Pepper, in a handsome brown suit—very snappy and springlike; Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mme. de Bianchi, in a stunning black ensemble, and many others.

Count Potocki Honors Biddles

The Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, entertained at a dinner last evening in honor of the United States Ambassador to Poland and Mrs. Anthony Drexel Biddle. The function was held at the Polish Embassy on Sixteenth street.

Guests were headed by the Postmaster General, James A. Farley; Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley, Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, and Senator Joseph Guffey of Pennsylvania.

Mrs. George Earle, wife of the Governor of Pennsylvania, came here especially for the occasion, as did Mrs. Donald Ogden Stewart of New York and Mrs. Forbes Morgan with her father, Robert Jackson, former Secretary of the Democratic National Committee, Mrs. Morgan and Mr. Jackson are now living in Brookville, L. I.

Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt; the Misses Ida and Pauletta Guffey; Father O'Leary, president of Georgetown University; Walter Lippmann; M. S. Szymczak of the Federal Reserve Board; Mme. Orlicz Dresser; Col. Victor C. Mather, aide to Gov. Earle; Col. and Mrs. John Coulter; Arthur Krock; Mrs. Marion Warburg; Robert Coe; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fleming; Mrs. Granger Blair; Harry Worcester Smith; Mr. and Mrs. Francis Garvan—Mrs. Garvan is Mrs. Forbes Morgan's sister; and Jan de Rosen, Polish artist who is staying at the embassy.

Friends to Assist Dr. and Miss Wang At Affair Today

When the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. C. T. Wang, and his daughter, Miss Yoeh E. Wang, entertain at tea this afternoon at the embassy, they will be assisted by a number of friends.

Pouring tea will be Mme. Troyanovsky, Senora de los Rios, Mrs. Ralph William Close, Mrs. Sol Bloom, Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Daniel B. Devore, Mrs. Charles M. Lea and Mrs. William Culbertson.

Also assisting will be Mrs. Mason Gulick and Miss Vera Bloom, and the punch table will be in charge of Mrs. Jen Chao Shieh, Miss Mariana Yung Kwai, and Miss Lois Ing.

Bishop Paul Yu-Pin, who attended the last tea at the embassy, will arrive from a trip to the West Coast in time to attend the function. He is speaking at the Rialto Theater this evening for the benefit of Chinese war refugees.

Senators to Visit Ft. Myer Today

The Senate Military Affairs Committee will be guests of honor at the Exhibition Drill in Fort Myer Riding Hall this afternoon at 2 o'clock. The committee, headed by the chairman, Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, will be met at Fort Myer gate by the Post Commander, Col. J. M. Wainwright and a specially designated honor escort from the Machine Gun Troop, 10th Cavalry.

After firing the customary 17 gun salute for a committee of Congress, the party will be escorted to quarters of Col. and Mrs. Wainwright where the following guests will have luncheon: Senator and Mrs. Sheppard, Senator and Mrs. Elmer Thomas, Senator and Mrs. Harry H. Schwartz, Senator and Mrs. Edward C. Johnson, Senator and Mrs. John E. Miller, Senator and Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, Senator and Mrs. George L. Beery, Senator Robert Reynolds, Mrs. Sherman Minton and Mrs. Lister Hill.

Following the luncheon the committee will again be escorted to the Riding Hall, to receive honors which will be presented by the second squadron, Third Cavalry, commanded by Major A. W. Roffe. After this, they will witness the exhibition drill.

Mr. Crowder Weds Laura Lankford

Miss Laura Lankford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph K. Lankford, of Kilmarnock, Va., became the bride yesterday of Robert Crowder, of this city. The ceremony, which was attended only by close friends, took place at noon at the Frances Asbury Methodist Church, the Rev. Albert P. Shirkey officiating.

The bride wore a powder blue crepe frock, street length, with black accessories and a corsage of roses and lilies of the valley. Her only attendant was Miss Elizabeth Rice, who wore rose crepe with brown accessories. Joseph Crowder served as his brother's best man.

After a wedding trip of two weeks to Florida, Mr. and Mrs. Crowder will reside at 3101 Pennsylvania avenue.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

IF THE CRITERION established in many a newspaper survey holds good, the next exhibition at the Washington Gallery of the Museum of Modern Art should be more successful than any others held there since it opened last fall. Publishers' agents who try to discover what the public likes to look at have said that pictures of youngsters attract the greatest attention, and the forthcoming show at the gallery will be entirely made up of portraits of children.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Sunday, February 20, is the date set for the grand pre-view, and Mr. and Mrs. F. Lamont Belin are entertaining at a luncheon beforehand. Mr. Belin and David Finley are responsible for most of the work done in organizing the show, which begins with examples from the fifteenth century and works up to the present. Several nationalities are included.

Mrs. Dwight David will return the middle of next week to give everything the final once-over. She is chairman of the Gallery, of which Mrs. George Garrett is co-chairman, and is at present at her plantation in Tallahassee, Fla.

WASHINGTON society, which has been having a field day of late feting visiting stage celebrities, have seen discouragingly little of the cast of "Save Me a Waltz." Members have been too busy with rehearsals to flit about at any tea parties or dinners.

The appearance of Jane Wyatt in the play brings to mind how times have changed. Less than 20 years the easiest way to be dropped from the Social Register and the invitation lists was to go on the stage, but now people are less stuffy. As a matter of fact, for a debutante or post-deb to take up theatricals in some instances gives her social life a big boost. Miss Wyatt is the daughter of Mrs. Christopher Wyatt, of New York, attended Miss Chapin's School there, and made her debut in 1928.

Mrs. Alexander C. Forbes and Miss Eve Symington are others who have discovered that a theatrical career only embellished their lives. Mrs. Forbes is the daughter of Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, of this city, and Miss Symington's parents are Representative and Mrs. James Wadsworth.

THE FOLLOWING PARAGRAPH is not recommended to people who have to eat in drug stores:

Clarence Hewes is the Washington host par excellence whose diners, where gourmets are concerned, seem just as wonderful in their way as a painting or a poem. From the first course to the last, each dish is cooked, not just well, but inspiringly, and Mr. Hewes chooses the wines so cleverly and carefully that guests can indulge fully without feeling either torpid or giddy.

The dinner which Mr. Hewes gave recently for the Earl and Countess of Rosse began with a clear, hot soup served in small covered dishes with bits of avocado pear cut up therein. Followed big bowls of the most delicious terrapin, from which the bones had been removed, and which was accompanied by a superb sauce. The next course looked too pretty to eat: a silver platter of tender lamb, surrounded with tiny new potatoes and fresh green peas which were so tender they must have been steamed instead of boiled in lots of water.

Breast of guinea hen then appeared, with crisp cold lettuce and browned melba toast which looked as though a breath would blow it away. The final course was a delicious watered ice, piled high with whipped cream and fresh strawberries. Since it happened to be Lady Rosse's birthday, the thoughtful host had also provided as a surprise a fresh, flaky cake covered with pink and white icing and white candles.

We thought of course that such a chef must be a Frenchman, but discovered that he is an American, and got his training cooking at the White House during the Coolidge Administration.

Mari Sandoz Calls Writers 'Escapists'

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Writers today are nostalgic; they are escapists, delving into the past without being prophetic, and refusing to face the present, Mari Sandoz, Nebraska's outspoken author, told members of the book review section of the American Association of University Women at their luncheon yesterday. "The poets have gone back on us and only the artists are contemporary," she said.

Miss Sandoz is here on her first visit for the purpose of gathering material from the Military Archives. Her trip East, however, has been only partly devoted to work. She came, as is her custom every so often," to see what the artists are doing." Her chief interest outside of her writing is art—as a consumer rather than a producer, she explained. She comes East regularly to visit the art galleries, usually 25 of them before she is through, and, like Diogenes looking for an honest man, seeks through them all for the pictures which interpret modern life.

The musicians, she says, are not contemporary, with the exception of them know they will need to music. Despite the fact the settings of her books is the pioneer era of the Middle West, she has a passionate interest in the interpretation of the present.

She believes commercialism has been responsible for the failure of writers to be prophetic. "They all aim for the Saturday Evening Post" she said. "Painters don't expect to sell much. Most of them known they will need to earn their livelihood some other way, so they paint what they see and feel."

"There are no great artists in Nebraska and no famous musicians. The State runs creative people out by trying to dictate what they shall produce," she said.

"How about yourself?" someone asked.

"I don't mind what they say. I just laugh and go on," she answered.

Miss Sandoz, a small, intense person with a crisp, direct way of speaking, explained that she never made speeches, but had consented to talk informally and answer questions as to her approach to her work. She had spent the morning at the Military Archives—"just like the archives of any State capital: dusty and uncared-for, as archives always will be because there are not sufficient appropriations to keep them up," she observed.

She is writing a book, to be completed in 1940, on an uprising of the Cheyennes, covering a three-month period December, 1878, through the first two months of 1879, which she believes epitomizes our Indian policy. She is using the two chiefs, Dull Knife, the older brother whose attitude was dominated by the traditions of his race and religion, and Little Wolf, who had learned from the white man and decided to retaliate with the white man's methods.

"We shot the Indians down just as Mussolini's troops shot the Ethiopians," said Miss Sandoz, "without particular regard as to whether they were men, women or children."

She knows the Indians' side of the story and now is here looking up the white man's version as recorded in Army orders, letters and telegrams.

The Indians talk freely to her and refer to her by an Indian name meaning "little boy," for she used to wear her hair cut short and don slacks and an old jacket when she went out to gather information from them.

She has been in the East five weeks longer than she has ever been away from her home at one time before, and is flying back the first of next week.

Yesterday she wore a brown and tan skirt of rough tweed, a short brown jacket with a small round hat of the same material, and a green wool blouse with round brown buttons down the front.

She was intrdouced by Mrs. J. Frederick Rogers, chairman of the book review section. Preceding the luncheon, Miss Elizabeth Duvall, readers' adviser at the Mount Pleasant Branch of the Public Library, addressed the section at its regular meeting.

Among others at the head table during the luncheon were Mrs. Horace Torbert, chairman of program for the club; Mrs. Gilbert Bell, Miss Lilla Davis, Mrs. Edith Lathrop and Percival Rogers, son of the section chairman.

Miss Frances Nash to Play At Mt. Vernon Seminary

Miss Frances Nash, who in private life is the wife of Col. Edwin M. Watson, will be heard in a piano recital at Mount Vernon Seminary on Friday afternoon, February 18, at 4 o'clock.

Mrs. Roosevelt on one occasion changed the date of the White House dinner for the Vice President so she might be able to hear Miss Nash play that evening with the National Symphony Orchestra.

Mrs. Woodward Addresses 20th Century Club

Assistant Administrator of WPA Cites Unit's Many Achievements.

Constructive employment of able-bodied men and women constitutes one of the foremost problems created by changes in our social, industrial and economic life," Ellen S. Woodward, assistant administrator of the Works Progress Administration, told members of the civic section of the Twentieth Century Club at a luncheon meeting at the Y. W. C. A. yesterday.

New social conditions, she said, call for new methods. "The crisis which faced the country in 1933," she asserted, "made it mandatory for our Federal Government to assume responsibilities that State, county and city governments and private agencies could no longer shoulder."

The Government had only one of two roads to follow, she pointed out. One led to the dole and the other to work relief. Quoting Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, Mrs. Woodward said, "Give a man a dole and you save his body and destroy his spirit. Give him a job, pay him an assured wage, and you save both his body and his spirit." The work program, she declared, grew out of the American tradition of work.

The WPA today employs approximately a million and a half needy men and women, in practically all types of work, Mrs. Woodward said.

Citing a few accomplishments, she pointed to 16,000 public buildings built or repaired by WPA labor; 25,000 miles of highways and streets constructed; more than 117,000 miles of roads and streets repaired.

"Total wealth created for the Nation, through the construction of material things alone, runs into millions of dollars," she said. "But the intangible services, which cannot be measured by the yardstick or appraised in dollars and cents, are, in my opinion, of even more lasting value."

The Division of Women's and Professional Projects, for which Mrs. Woodward has administrative responsibility, employs about 425,000 needy men and women on a widely diversified program. Under this program come such projects as library extension, nursing and public health, housekeeping aid, book repair for public schools and libraries, Braille, museum and research, sewing, household service demonstration, school lunch for needy children, archeological and other scientific surveys, public administration projects such as real property appraisals, tax delinquency surveys, engineering surveys and codification of laws; art, theater, music, writing and many others.

The Historic American Buildings Survey, Mrs. Woodward said, has been measuring and recording all important examples of builders' art in America erected before the last quarter of the nineteenth century. In each locality buildings most in danger of destruction have been measured first.

One of the houses recorded in the District of Columbia is that built by Stephen Decatur in 1819 and designed by Benjamin Latrobe, the well known architect of the period.

Mrs. Samuel Herrick, chairman of the civic section, presided at the luncheon, and Mrs. Frank Ballou, chairman of the education section, also was at the head table.

Swetmans Open Arch Hall Today For Hospital Tea

Arch Hall, described as one of the four oldest houses in Alexandria, and now the home of Dr. and Mrs. Ford Swetnam, will be open this afternoon for a silver tea being sponsored by the auxiliary board of Alexandria Hospital. The house, built in 1748, has been completely restored by Dr. and Mrs. Swetnam and is considered a perfect example of early American architecture.

It is believed to have been built by Fielding Lewis at the time of his marriage to an aunt of George Washington and, if that fact is established, it will mean that Arch Hall antedates historic Kenmore at Fredericksburg, Va.

Receiving with Mrs. Swetnam this afternoon will be Mrs. Joseph Chauncey, president of the auxiliary board; Mrs. Irvin Hufford, vice president, and Mrs. Dulaney Hammond, past president.

Mrs. William B. Wilkins is chairman of the affair, assisted by Mrs. O. Ashby Reardon, Mrs. William S. Snow, Mrs. Douglas A. Lindsey, Mrs. James A. Gooch, Mrs. L. F. Hobbs, Mrs. Owen M. Jones, Mrs. Horace Cook and Mrs. Francis H. Fannon.

At the tea table will be Mrs. Charles Henry Smith, Mrs. Gardner L. Boothe, sr., Mrs. Oscar A. Ryder, and Mrs. Clarence C. Leadbeater.

Senator Pepper Explains Humanitarian Party Policies

Addresses Women's National Democratic Club at Dinner Meeting, Outlining Health and Educational Measures.

The humanitarianism of the Democratic Party makes it appeal essentially to women, Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, told members of the Women's National Democratic Club last night, addressing their dinner meeting. The Senator, who was introduced by Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard, president of the club, enumerated Administration measures, designed to secure to citizens of the country relief, shelter, health and education.

"If the Democratic Party had done nothing else during this Administration than pass the Social Security act, history would vindicate the gloriousness of its tenure," he declared. Emphasizing the protection of the family and home, the party has a philosophy and faith which accords with the aspirations of women, he said.

During a question period following his talk, Senator Pepper was asked by Mrs. Hubbard whether the spending program of the Government in its humanitarian enterprises would be accomplished without dissipating its resources.

"My answer is a long and resounding 'yes,' " he responded, pointing out as an example, that its educational projects would eventually educate people so their earning power would be increased, and that its health program would save life. He did not, however, deal in statistics, nor go into detail as to sources of revenue in relation to expenditures.

With the club president and Senator and Mrs. Pepper at the head table were Mrs. Blair Banister, Mrs. Gordon Woodberry, widow of a former Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. H. E. C. Bryant, and Mrs. Finis Garrett.

Mrs. Ida McCabe Kayser, national committee woman from Minnesota, who is here for a few days as are several other of the committee women from over the country, was among the guests at the dinner. Mrs. Merrill Hudson, chairman of the Democratic committee in Shelby County, Tenn., and also director of the Housing Administration there; Mrs. J. W. Canada, of Memphis, and Mrs. Grace Dearing, of Deland, Fla., secretary of the Deland Chapter of the Red Cross, were also present.

A number of members had guests at the dinner including Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Mrs. Florence S. Coyle, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hunter, and Mrs. Onan A. Hydrick.

Others attending the dinner included Mrs. R. H. Brasel, Mrs. George M. Eckles, Mrs. T. J. O'Herron, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Beale, Miss Bell Snyder, Miss Gertrude Snyder, Mrs. A. F. Kempton, Judge and Mrs. Paul Myron Linebarger, Admiral and Mrs. Edward Stitt, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Daniel, Mrs. Willoughby Reade, Mrs. T. E. Sebrell, Mrs. Eugene J. Tighe, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. C. Bryant, Mrs. Garland Ferguson, Mrs. T. H. Seay, and Mrs. Annette Adams.

Women's Clubs Plan Honor for Susan Anthony

Tuesday morning at 10:30 Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, will place a wreath at the foot of the Susan B. Anthony memorial statue in the Capitol. The ceremony will be held under auspices of the D. C. Federation in commemoration of the birth of the great suffrage leader, who was born February 15, 1820, at Adams, Mass.

After having been a school teacher for 15 years she organized in 1852 the first woman's State temperance society in America, and in 1856 became the agent for New York State of the American Anti-Slavery Society. After 1854 she devoted herself almost exclusively to the agitation for woman's rights. She was the proprietor of a weekly paper, the Revolution, having for its motto, "The true republic—men, their rights and nothing more—women, their rights and nothing less." She was associated with the National Woman Suffrage Association from the date of its organization in 1869 until she died at Rochester, N. Y., March 13, 1906.

The regular monthly meeting of the District Federation of Women's Clubs will be held on February 28, at 10:30 a. m. at 2400 Sixteenth street, instead of at the Roosevelt Hotel, the usual meeting place. Luncheon will be served at 1 o'clock.

The annual card party, the only money-making function sponsored by the federation, will be held in the afternoon at 2 in the ballroom of 2400 Sixteenth street.

Mrs. Ernest H. Daniels, first vice president, is chairman of the card party. Mrs. Lloyd A. Morrison, chairman of the department of fine arts and also hospitality chairman of the Political Study Club, will act as vice chairman in charge of reservations assisted by Mrs. La Verne Beales, director of the Petworth Woman's Club. Mrs. John D. Kiley will have charge of prizes.

1 Here's a style tip for men direct from the land of the Pharoahs that is so good it has not been changed in 5,000 years. A dragoman shows how to construct a stylish turban in four lessons. The initial step is to grasp a 6-foot square of silk and extend it as above.

2 Then wrap one end around your head like this, leaving a foot or so loose at the other end. This gives the swagger appearance so much desired. A bed sheet is suggested for novices if a huge silk scarf is not available.

3 Then the silk goes 'round and 'round the head until about half of the 6-foot turban is left. Then, holding the corner over the left ear, take the remaining length and with a rapid twirl wrap it once more about the head, tightly tucking the one loose end into the turban, leaving the other free to flap.

Clark Griffith
50 Years in Baseball
By Shirley Povich

Chapter Twenty-Seven.

STATELY WASHINGTON, INURED TO THE EXCITEMENT of Presidential inaugurations, calloused to the periodical furores over princes and potentates, calm in the midst of history-making legislation, took down its hair on October 1, 1924 . . . and exploded . . . emotionally.

Clark Griffith's triumphant Washington Ball Club had returned from Boston, bearing the first major league pennant in the Capital's 38 years of baseball history.

Washington was giddy. Total strangers were gleefully pounding each other on the back with the license born of holiday spirit. Storekeepers vied in dressing their show windows in the baseball motif. Songs of Manager Bucky Harris and the Nats mushroomed in the night clubs. The city was at the feet of the ball team and it was through a mass of countless thousands who lined Pennsylvania avenue that the Nats paraded in triumph after detraining.

A worshipful automobile dealer had provided a fleet of cars, resplendent in their shiny newness—and with genuine four-wheel brakes—for the parade of the team. A police escort was helpless before the rush of urchins and solid citizens alike, who clambered into the cars with the players. With difficulty, the parade made its way to its destination.

It's destination?

The White House!

President Calvin Coolidge, no less, had joined in the spirit of the times. A pennant-winning team, for the first time in history, was being received by the White House. Amid the grinding of newsreel cameras and a constant clicking of shutters by the "still" men, the Nats received the felicitations of the President. Most certainly, said the President, he would attend the opening game of the World Series.

The World Series—that was something for Washington fans to contemplate. A Washington team in the World Series, after all these years . . . and, against the New York Giants of John McGraw, Bucky Harris, the wonder boy manager, matching wits with the great McGraw. And Walter Johnson pitching in a World Series—at last. Washington was in a frenzy.

The Nation's Capital Takes a Ball Team to Its Heart.

MISTY-EYED, CONFESSEDLY DAZED by the success of his ball team, was Clark Griffith. Back there in Boston, two days before, when Sam Rice caught a fly ball for the out that assured Washington the pennant, Griffith went limp. Until then, Griffith had exhorted his players with all the oratory, all the talents at his command, not to let slip the championship that was in their grasp. From a field box by the Nats' dugout, he had yelled encouragement from the outset. Through it all he had been a wild-eyed rooter.

And then, with Washington's triumph sealed, Griffith sought surcease for his pounding heart. While his ball players celebrated in their dressing room and broke training briefly in one uproarious carnival night, the 58-year-old owner of the team slowly made his way from the park and walked in welcome solitude the 2 miles to the team's hotel.

He needed to pinch himself in order to realize that his Washington team had won the pennant . . . although he had been confident, during those last two months of the season, that his team would win. But the reality of it all was jarring.

Clark Griffith was getting a many-sided thrill out of that first week in October. The pennant had been the fruit of his own patient building with money and men. "Boy Manager" Bucky Harris had justified his every hope. Into the teeth of his critics, Griffith could now fling the wisdom of his judgment in choosing Harris.

But, more important, was the fact that Washington had taken his ball team to its heart. The home-coming celebration . . . the reception at the White House . . . made Griffith's a wonder world. And the sight of fans bivouacked outside Griffith Stadium by night, awaiting the start of the World Series, was a supreme joy. Thirteen years before, the American League "wise men" had cautioned Clark Griffith not to invest his money in hopeless Washington, "the graveyard of major league baseball."

Home Runs by Goslin, Harris, Win Second Game.

ONLY WASHINGTON COULD PROVIDE as brilliant a setting for a world series as Griffith Stadium presented on that opening day, October 4. In the stands were 35,760 fans, blotting out every seat in the park. For the first time in World Series history, a President of the United States . . . and his First Lady . . . were attending an opening game. The U. S. Army Band played and a military guard saluted the colors. Secretary of State Hughes, Secretary of War Weeks, Speaker Gillette of the House and Mrs. Gillette were in the Presidential party. The gold braid, if laid end to end, would have stretched to center field. Army and Navy bigwigs, legislators, foreign diplomats, were out in force. Walter Johnson and Roger Peckinpaugh were presented with sleek new motor cars by admirers, at pre-game ceremonies.

And then Walter Johnson took the mound against the Giants—Walter Johnson, denied a World Series place until the sunset of his pitching career. And a Nation was waiting to applaud his first World Series triumph.

But disappointment came that day. To Art Nehf, canny Giant lefthander, Johnson lost a stirring pitching battle—in 12 innings. Valiantly, Roger Peckinpaugh doubled, in the ninth inning, to bring Ossie Bluege home and tie the score at 2-2. Three innings later, came the denouement for Johnson. A base on balls to Gowdy, a Texas League fly by Nehf, a wild throw by Earl McNeely, singles by Ross Young and Bill Terry . . . and the Giants had two more runs and the ball game. Johnson had lost.

But there was joy in Natville, the next day, Tom Zachary pitched against Jack Bentley, Giant star, who had been brought into the big leagues by Griffith. Bucky Harris and Goose Goslin hit home runs, Peckinpaugh delivered a vital single and Washington was ahead, 3 to 1 at the start of the ninth. The strain, though, was telling on Zachary. George Kelly and Hack Wilson reached him for telling hits, drove over the tying runs. Big Fred Marberry relieved Zachary, struck out Jackson to end the inning, and Washington won the ball game, 4 to 3, on a single by Judge, a bunt by Bluege, and Peckinpaugh's crisp drive into left field.

Peckinpaugh, Harris, Johnson Pool Talents to Even Series.

BIG MARBERRY WAS HARRIS' third-game pitching choice, as the series moved to New York. The Giants reached him for a 3 to 1 lead in the first three innings. Pitcher Jack Ryan settled the issue by hitting a home run off Allan Russell in the fourth inning . . . and the Giants coasted to a 6 to 4 victory.

Then, "Goose" Goslin put Washington solidly back into the series in the fourth game. He hit a home run against Hughie McQuillan, with Harris on base in the third inning, and, in the fifth, he scored Harris and Earl McNeely with a single. He made four hits in four times at bat, drove in five runs, slugged the Nats to a 7-4 victory and was Presidential timber among Washington fans.

Back into the series went Walter Johnson for the fifth game. His defeat in the opener had served only to intensify the fans' desire to see the veteran Johnson hang up a World Series triumph before his pitching career came to an end. He took the mound against Jack Bentley, of the Giants.

For two innings there was no score. Then Freddie Lindstrom beat out an infield hit and the Giants took a 1-to-0 lead. Washington tied the score at 1 to 1 in the fourth, when Rookie Hack Miller delivered a single. But the Giants subjected Johnson to a 13-hit barrage, including a home run by Bentley with Gowdy on base, and the Giants won a 6-to-2 game to lead the series, 3 to 2.

Roger Peckinpaugh . . . out of the fifth game with a severe "charley horse," returned to the Nats' line-up the following day . . . heavily bandaged and strapped. Against the advice of the club physician, he was playing. Manager Harris entrusted that crucial game to the pitching of Tom Zachary, and it was a wise choice. In a duel with Nehf and Ryan, he triumphed, 2 to 1, with the Nats making only four hits. Manager Harris personally lifted the Nats to victory with a two-bagger in the fifth inning that drove in both runs.

But, if Harris won the game, Peckinpaugh saved it. With a runner on base in the ninth, Peck dashed behind second base, made a one-hand stop of a batted ball, flipped it backhanded to Harris for a put-out and then sank to the ground, as his injured leg gave way under him. They carried Peckinpaugh from the field.

Next day, the dramatic seventh and final game of that World Series.

TOMORROW: With the score tied at 3-3 in the final game of the World Series, Walter Johnson goes in to take his place in Baseball's Hall of Fame.

Terp Cagers Beat W. & M. In Late Dash

By Bob Garrison.

Maryland University's shakey basketball team shook itself one step nearer an invitation to the Southern Conference tournament when it scalped the William and Mary Indians last night with a bit of late hatchet swinging, 45-38.

Eight-hundred persons sat in Ritchie Colliseum at College Park to see the home team register its fifth conference victory against four defeats. And they probably are convinced that there must be easier ways of getting to Raleigh, N. C. for the tournament.

For although William and Mary has won but one game in more than two years of competition, the Indians came close to eliminating the Terps by jumping off to an early lead and using it to prolong their eventual dust-biting down to the bitter end.

Knepley Hero Again.

Again it was George "Dutch" Knepley who saved the slow starting Terrapins with his second-half performance and led the home team to overcome a surprising 26-20 half-time lead. Just as he led the rally that resulted in the 36-32 upset of Washington-Lee in the last conference game, Saturday, so did he last night.

His 12 points and field generalship proved too much for the harassed Indians, who slowed up in the final period just enough to let the desperate Old Line team pass them in the stretch, just as the proverbial terrapin passed the hare.

Waverly Wheeler and Knepley combined their shooting and Knepley's controlled passing to overcome the 6-point deficit inside of three minutes and in another two minutes they had built Maryland a 28-28 lead of its own. They continued their merry pace throughout the remainder of the half and probably would have scored many more goals had not the Terps chosen to "freeze" the ball with four minutes remaining in the game.

Yeager Paces Invaders.

His consistent one-hand shots, made from the foul circle, were instrumental in the 10-2 lead the Indians held over Maryland before the game was 10 minutes old. He was high scorer of the game with 18 points, while Wheeler's five goals made from under the basket gave him second place with 15.

With one game remaining on the Terps' Southern Conference schedule, that against V. M. I. tonight, Coach Burt Shipley was rumored to have made several phone calls to the Union Station regarding the time schedule of southbound trains. Provided Knepley's belated scoring system continues to function with favorable results, he can wire for hotel reservations at the finest Raleigh hostelry first thing in the morning.

Stewart, Ex-Nat, Leaves Baseball

Crossville, Tenn., Feb. 10 (AP).—Walter Stewart, slender lefthander who saw several years of pitching service with St. Louis, Cleveland and Washington in the American League, said at his home here today he was through with baseball.

The veteran southpaw was sold yesterday by the Memphis Chicks to the Knoxville baseball club. Apprised of the deal, Stewart said:

"I quit baseball and took a job with the State. I am not interested at all and absolutely will not join the Smokies or any other ball club."

Ahearn 'Chugs Around the Choo-Choos' While Gentlemen Of Press Chase Him to Get Interview With Jack Dempsey

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Herr Goldie Ahearn, the shirt, shorts and socks tycoon, who matches fighters on the side, won the first (and undoubtedly last) Terminal marathon yesterday, beating a field of sports writers and photographers to the wire by a tummy. That would be several lengths, as they gauge horse races.

It all started about 6 a. m., when Herr Golden, who is batting a fraction under .001 in the "Sportswriters' League," began getting sleepy-eyed reporters out of bed with the news that "Jeck Dempskey's coming."

"He'll be here at 5:20—a bargain any place, and you should come down and talk with him. Also, bring a photographer. He's gonna break a big story, a big one. It's gonna be big, so bring a photographer!"

At the first post, the Ninth Street Sporting Club's entry of Ahearn, Sid Fishel and George Abrams had the race well in hand. "Hurry-Up" Harter, of the Herald; "Click" McCoy, Post photographer; Andy Knight, Herald, and a porter who kept trying to take McCoy's camera-box from him, trailed in that order.

Ahearn won the first heat under wraps, but the entire field was disqualified, when a sloe-eyed porter sleepily remarked that

Ahearn regained the lead, with McCoy still running second and Harter back in the No. 3 slot, waiting to make a move. Back down the platform abutting Track No. 22 they raced, with Ahearn going to the whip. Each window failed to reveal Dempsey's presence, but porters and trainmen reassuringly said he was on the train.

"Car No. 2," they nodded. Car No. 2 was parked up in the tunnel that dives under the city and brings southern-bound trains out on the edge of the Potomac. The field was almost ready to quit when the trim figure of Bob Addie, of the Times, appeared on the scene.

"You can reach 'im by going through this car," he said, and was trampled in the rush. Ahearn by now was last, with the Ninth Street Club entry pretty badly beaten. But once in the car, Ahearn squeezed through on the side, stepped blithely on the corns of a dignified old gent, and squeezed in to see Dempsey first.

He made it because he knows all the angles.

"What do you think of Dave Adamick?"

"What about Tony Galento?"

Eagles Bow To Virginia

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 10.—Virginia's basketeers clipped the wings of the American University Eagles tonight with a 41-33 victory in a rough and tumble game. The Cavaliers took an initial lead and were never headed by the Washington team which played minus its freshmen stars.

With Leroy Strickler and Babe Feldman alternating in a fast scoring pace the Virginians ran up two dozen points during the first half while holding the stiff Cassell team to 16.

Feldman took the second-half tipoff and sank it to put the Cavaliers 10 points in front and they kept this margin through most of the period despite American's fine floor game and the accurate shooting of Emerson Bartlett and Dudley Rogers.

When a scoring spurt put Virginia 14 points ahead, Coach Gus Tebell ran in his reserves and against these American cut down the lead in the waning moments while guarding the Cavaliers closely. Fouls were frequent and Bartlett for American and Cohen for Virginia were ousted for personal fouling. Virginia used 14 players, American seven.

Browns Send Hemsley To Cleveland in Trade

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Feb. 10.—The St. Louis Browns, who have had Catcher Rollie Hemsley on the trading block for several years, sent him to the Cleveland Indians tonight for Catcher Billy Sullivan, Infielder Roy Hughes and Pitcher Ed Cole.

William O. Dewitt, vice president of the Browns, announced he had closed the deal in a long-distance telephone conversation with C. C. Slapnicka, general manager of the Indians, who is in Florida.

The Indians several years ago were reported to have offered from $50,000 to $75,000 in cash for Hemsley, but the Browns turned that down, preferring players instead.

Hemsley, frequently called "Rollicking Rollie," has at times been one of the star catchers in baseball. He caught the entire 1935 all-star game. St. Louis managers, however, found him difficult to handle and last year he saw little action.

He has been in the Major Leagues since 1928, with Pittsburg, Chicago and Cincinnati of the National League, before coming to the American League Brownies in 1933. His best year was 1934, when he hit .309. Last year he dropped down to .222.

Sullivan, son of Catcher Billy Sullivan of the world champion Chicago White Sox of 1906, has been in the majors, barring one season, since 1931. Originally an infielder, he caught a few games in 1933 and turned catcher permanently in 1936.

Hughes has played short, second and third during his three years with the Indians. His best batting mark was .295 in 1936. Cole, whose real name is Kiselauskas, was the strike-out king of the Texas league last season, fanning 295 batters with Galveston.

Mat Feature To Ali Baba

Prof. Dick Daviscourt met up with Ali Baba last night at Turner's Arena, and it was no flying carpet the truculent Turk introduced him to. In short, Mrs. Baba's boy Ali used just 21½ minutes of the two-hour time limit clamped on him to pin the professor's broad but ageing carcass.

The match topped a card that produced more blood and thunder than the Arena has housed in many moons. Chief Chewacki was disqualified after 23½ minutes of his debate with Dean Detton for using a stranglehold; Orville Brown threw Henry Kulkovitch in 8½ minutes with a headlock after a couple of irate fans took pokes at the Russian; Al Perlare threw Vanka Zelezniek with a flying scissors in 18 minutes, and Chief Thunderbird drew with Boris Demitrosa.

Built along the lines of a standard half-pint milk bottle, Baba is a technician of the modern school, but a showman of the Barnum era. He is the quintessence of courtesy, as he eloquently demonstrated by shaking Referee Benjamin Bortnick's hand and bowing stiffly, but cordially, after Bortnick accidentally hit him a fine swipe on the schnozzle.

Baba was at a distinct disadvantage in regard to weight and reach, officially, but encountered more serious trouble with his nose and flowing mustache. Daviscourt first insisted on tweeking the Turk's nose, and then pulling his mustache to Baba's painful disgust. He slapped the little fellow around considerably, but Ali got in some good licks on his own account.

Daviscourt had trouble catching the Turk, and more trouble when he did catch him, and they spent the first 20 minutes pulling ears, twisting arms and getting involved in one leg-lock. Baba then gave the professor the business, turning him over like a well done hot cake, and finally putting him down for three with a body press. About 1,400 saw the card.

Star Agrees To Sign After 'Phone Talk

Papers Expected in Mail Today; to Get $4,000 Salary, Is Report.

Clifford (Gyp) Battles, Washington Redskins' halfback, has decided to abandon his professional football career to accept an assistant coaching position at Columbia University, it was learned last night.

The contract tendered him by Lou Little, head coach at the New York school, has neither been signed nor received by Battles, but is expected in this morning's mail. He will sign and return it immediately.

Terms of the document were not disclosed, but it is believed to call for a two-year period at $4,000 a year. This represents an increase of $1,000 over the salary Battles earned in Redskin livery.

Loss Blow to Redskins.

The league's leading ground-gainer last year and a unanimous choice for the All-League team, Battles' loss will be a severe blow to the local club. It was his brilliant all-around work that made possible Sammy Baugh's brilliant passing last season, and without him behind the line the Redskins will be hard put for a deceptive running attack.

Battles last night stated his desire to retire from an active role for a coaching berth.

"I've played long enough," he said, "and I'd like to coach. I asked Lou to consider me for the Columbia position, and would like to go there. We exchanged several letters and telegrams, and discussed the matter on the telephone last night. He said he was putting a contract in the mail, special delivery, and if it suited me it would be up to Columbia's board of regents."

That he will satisfy the board's rigid qualifications is a foregone conclusion, for Battles attained the highest scholastic rank while at West Virginia Wesleyan College. He was topped by Phi Beta Kappa scholastic honorary fraternity, and was a candidate for a Rhodes scholarship. He has a winning personality, both on and off the field, and an exceptional competitive spirit.

Associated with Wash B. Williams in a soft drink enterprise, Battles will continue to make Washington his home, and also continue with the firm. It was thought that he might be obliged to sever connections with business if he accepted the Columbia position, but if present plans materialize he will be able to devote more time to business than he would if he continued with the Redskins.

Battles is married, having wed Miss Dorothy Kaufman last November, in Cleveland. They have been making the Burlington Hotal their temporary home.

Pro Football Sensation.

Battles went into pro football immediately after graduating from Wesleyan and was a sensation. He was the league's leading ground gainer in 1933 as well as last season, and also made the All-League team that year. A triple-threat halfback of first water, his presence in the backfield lent added power and deception to the team's attack.

It was Battles' brilliant work last autumn that paved the way for Sammy Baugh to attain stardom. Without the former in the game, Baugh's passes did not possess the same magic they appeared to have when Battles was at his side. Cliff passed, too, but he was better known as a punter and ball carrier.

He made league history against the New York Giants in a game that clinched the Eastern championship for Washington. He made one touchdown on a 74-yard jaunt off tackle, and then carried the ball 75 yards to the 4-yard mark, and 78 yards to the 1-foot mark. His work was acclaimed universally as one of the greatest individual performances ever witnessed in New York.

Battles, who succeeds Herb Kopf at Columbia, played six years of professional ball and starred each season. He will be 28 years old May 1, and weighs 195 pounds.

A keen analyst and strategist, he appears to have all the necessary qualifications to be a successful coach.

Woodward & Lothrop's Bowling Team Victor

The pace-setting Woodward & Lothrop bowling team held on to its lead in the Department Store League last night at Recreation Alleys by sweeping their set from Jelleffs.

The Hecht Co. led by Mike Gass' 354 moved back to the runner-up position by taking a 2-1 decision from Lansburghs, putting the Hechtmen a game and half behind the leaders.

$30 Pointer Victor Over $3,000 Bluebloods in Swanky New York Dog Show

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 10.—A story as fantastic as any in the long history of the Westminster Kennel Club was unfolded today when Windholme Sensation, an American-bred dog, was crowned best of the pointers at theopening session of the sixty-second annual show.

The 4-year-old lemon and white pointer, owned by Harry Peters, of Islip, N. Y., gave battle to 45 other pointers, including two highly regarded English importations, and finally received the nod of Judge Frederick J. Lenoir, of Greenwood, Mass., after first earning his brackets as "best of the dogs."

Windholme Senation was overlooked by the fanciers, although sired by the Great Nancolleth Markable, which won "best in show" for Mrs. Hartley Dodge's Giralda Farm, of Madison, N. J., in 1932.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

$30 DOG IS BEST POINTER AT SHOW.

It was by chance that Windholme Sensation came into Peters' possession. Two years ago, while driving along the streets of Rochester, he saw the dog on a leash. He was so attracted by the resemblance to Nancolleth Markable that he purchased the dog for a mere $30 from William M. Farrell. Until today the dog had never been shown in a major exhibition.

Opposing him today were two of England's best—Mrs. Dodge's Resident of Dallymoy and A. Biddle Duke's Pennine Paramount of Prune's Own from Tuxedo Park, N. Y. Before the show Mrs. Dodge had acclaimed her representative as the best obtainable in England while Duke had paid $3,000 for his dog less than a month ago after he had won seven field trial certificates.

Mrs. Dodge gained some consolation, however, when her fine bloodhound, C. H. Brigadier of Reynalton, was crowned best of his breed for the fourth straight year, after his kennel mates had swept the majority of the preliminary classes.

Two other 1937 breed winners retained their titles while several thousand people crowded around the rings to watch the long-drawn-out task of judging the more popular breeds such as the cocker spaniels, fox terriers, scotties, boxers and Great Danes.

Meanwhile in the Garden's basement, where the 2,093 dogs are benched, several thousand more canine lovers discussed the good and bad points of the representatives of the 99 breeds.

Rosland Layte's Burlingame Du-Barry from Short Hills, N. J., repeated as best of the little Brussels griffons, while Francis V. Crane's Ch. Estate D'Argeles of Basquaerie, from Needham, Mass., was crowned king of the Great Pyrenees for the second straight year.

Francesco, at $7.90, Wins Hialeah Feature Race Under Good Handling

Alexandrine Is Second to Fast Gelding

Winner Brings $7.90; Thompson's Saddle Job Important.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 10.—Showing winning form for the first time since last April, John Hay Whitney's Francesco today defeated four rivals in the featured Okechobee Purse of 1 mile. Cooly and capably ridden by Vere Thompson, the 4-year-old gelded son of Jacopo registered by two lengths in 1:38 1-5, paying 7.90 for $2. B. H. Jackson's Alexandrine was second, a length and a half clear of Warren Wright's Talked About, the favorite.

Francesco was in the original list of nominations for the $50,000 Widener Cup event of March 5, but his owner did not think well enough of his chances to make the additional subscription payment at the end of last month that would have kept the horse eligible.

Dewitt Page's Maedic, a recent sprint winner, failed to run back to that effort, being outrun all the way and finishing next to last under the whip. He was the lone Widener Cup hopeful in the race, but did nothing to make him appear a threat for the coming winter classic.

Francesco, whose recent form was very promising, left no doubt as to his superiority. The gelding now shows more early "lick" than he used to and was nicely placed behind Alexandrine. Talked About and Maedic from the start. Thompson bided his time in confident fashion, sent his mount through on the inside while improving Francesco's position at the last turn, and handrode to the front in the last furlong. The boy merely shook the whip alongside Francesco's head in the closing strides. Alexandrine held on admirably to save the runner-up position. Talked About tired after forcing most of the pace, but won an easy third.

Maetown Is Winner.

Maetown, a son of Jamestown, representing Dewitt Page's Maedore Farm, made his fourth start a winning one in the 3-furlong opening event for maiden juvenile platers here today. Third in his last two airings, the chestnut colt was a $6.60 favorite in the field of 13. Quick to get into stride, Maetown rushed into a long lead and easily held Spanish Bunt safe to triumph by two lengths in 0:34 4-5. Lady Hav was beaten four lengths for second money.

Showing a brand of speed that was missing in the races behind her, Spindletop drove to a half length victory in the second race. A $2 straight ticket on the filly was good for $38.90. Early Evening tired in the last sixteenth after showing the way by daylight. She saved the place by a length from Singing Slave. Carroll Bierman broke the winner on top, but was temporarily outrun while well behind the early leaders. She gained steadily upon turning for home and wore down Early Evening in the closing strides. Songstop failed to justify a heavy play.

Miss A. Doris, whose colors were borne by Sorceress in the third race, and Jockey Carroll Bierman made it two in a row when they drove home on top.

Cardinals, Hoyas Enter Mile Relay Run of Penn A.C.

Catholic University and Georgetown University mile relay teams will compete in the Invitation Penn A. C. Games at Convention Hall, in Philadelphia, tonight.

Georgetown is expected to be represented by Vincent Healy, Vinnie Braum, George Bogan and John Motsenbache, the same team that triumphed last week in the Millrose games.

The Cardinals, running in their first meet of the season, will oppose teams from Swarthmore and West Chester Teachers College, while the Hoya quartet will face Temple and Villanova.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAETOWN, $6.60, $4.10, $2.90; SPANISH BUNT, $7.30, $4.70; LADY HAV, $6.20.

MAETOWN drew clear and went fast into a good lead and was under pressure right to the finish. SPANISH BUNT, in closest pursuit of the leader, held on well at the end. LADY HAV, away well, was up forwardly most of the journey and was hard pressed by the fast-closing BALLAD in the final stages.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:30. Off 2:36. Winner, Miss A. Doris' ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPINDLE TOP, $38.90, $16.80, $7.20; EARLY EVENING, $10.90, $6.00; SINGING SLAVE, $4.00.

SPINDLE TOP, away forwardly, displayed good speed and went prominently in the early running, swung to the outside of the leader when straightened into the stretch, and closed with determination to get up in the final strides. EARLY EVENING, rushed through on the inside in the opening furlong, drew out into a big lead rounding the turn, but then faltered in the stretch run. SINGING SLAVE, on the extreme outside for the entire trip, closed steadily and outlasted NANCE.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:02. Off 3:05. Winner, Miss A. Doris' ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SORCERESS, $7.60, $3.90, $3.10; BLACK MISTRESS, $4.30, $3.40; REMINISCENT, $4.70.

SORCERESS followed the pace of BLACK MISTRESS all down the backstretch and came around on the outside in the stretch and were down the leader in the final strides. BLACK MISTRESS went to the front immediately and looked all over the winner and just failed to last. REMINISCENT had speed from the start and held all the others safe.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. Class C. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:30. Off 3:30½. Winner, Paragon Stable's b. or br. g. (5), by Man o' War—Violet Mahoney. Trained by E. B. Carpenter. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:22 4-5, 0:46 1-5, 1:11 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INDOMITABLE, $6.70, $4.20, $2.70; GENE WAGERS, $5.80, $2.90; BLACK RIVER, $2.30.

INDOMITABLE, under slight restraint until midway around the turn, began to better his position when placed under pressure and wore the leaders down in the final drive. GENE WAGERS, quickest to get away, raced MONDORF into defeat in the opening half mile, came wide entering the stretch and faltered in the final furlong. BLACK RIVER, off tardily, was rated off the pace to the stretch turn, moved up strongly when called upon, but was carried out by INDOMITABLE and lost ground, but came again at the end.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,100; allowances. The Miami Shores. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:00. Off 4:09. Winner, E. F. Whitaker's ch. c. (3), by Omar Khayyam—Rippling Crimp. Value to winner, $775; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:46 2-5, 1:11 2-5, 1:24 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CREPE, $7.40, $3.20, $2.90; PASTEURIZED, $3.50, $3.00; ONE JEST, $3.10.

CREPE, unruly at the post, broke in stride from outside the stalls, set a swift pace while being steadied in front, had something in reserve when put to a drive and held PASTEURIZED safe at the finish. PASTEURIZED broke tardily and was vigorously urged and moved into contention rapidly in the opening quarter mile and made a game effort through the stretch, but could not overtake the winner. ONE JEST broke well and went forwardly for the entire trip, while saving ground and held the others safe in the stretch run.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,200. The Okeechobee. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:32. Off 4:33. Winner, J. H. Whitney's dk. b. g. (4), by Jacopo—Heloise. Trained by J. W. Healy. Value to winner, $850; second, $300; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:48, 1:12 4-5, 1:36 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FRANCESCO, $7.90, $4.00, $2.60; ALEXANDRINE, $4.50, $2.70; TALKED ABOUT, $2.50.

FRANCESCO, on the inside in close quarters in the early running, moved up with determination when securing clear passage in the final three-sixteenths and shook off ALEXANDRINE and won handily. ALEXANDRINE, away fast, showed keen speed in the early running, came a trifle wide entering the stretch and permitted the winner to steal through and then faltered in the final drive. TALKED ABOUT followed the pace well up under slight restraint until straightened into the stretch, made a bold bid on the stretch turn, but faltered in the stretch run.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 5:01. Off 5:02. Winner, Mrs. D. Shea's ch. m. (7), by Pompey—Jesebel. Trained by B. Evans. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48, 1:13 4-5, 1:40 4-5, 1:54 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JEZREEL, $14.00, $5.10, $3.50; NARISE, $4.00, $2.90; PEACEFUL, $2.80.

JEZREEL, a prominent contender all the way, assumed command with a rush entering the stretch and held sway the remainder of the trip. NARISE, in tight quarters and under restraint in the early running, was repeatedly blocked and forced back, came to the outside entering the stretch, responded to strong pressure and outlasted PEACEFUL. The latter, saving ground the entire trip, faltered in the stretch.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:34. Off 5:37½. Winner, Mrs. E. Columbus University Boxing Team Will Meet DeSales Here Tonight

This Morning

WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

To Whom It May Concern:

Cliff Battles, who gained the most ground in the National Professional Football League last fall and Dixie Howell, who gained the least, drew equal salaries from the Redskins . . . $2,750 . . . and there was much grumbling on the part of the linemen who were getting shoved around for $1,800 while Howell's total time in the lineup didn't add up to 30 minutes for the season . . . Jack Kearns, manager of the new heavyweight threat, Johnny Adamick, will never live down his managerial boner of 1919 . . . when he demanded a $300,000 guarantee for Jack Dempsey against Georges Carpentier and refused to gamble on a 30 per cent cut . . . it was a $300,000 mistake, for 30 per cent would have returned $600,000 to Kearns and Dempsey.

POVICH.

Walter O'Hara, ousted president of Narragansett, leaves racing with the satisfaction, at least, of having promoted the largest paying race crowd in America . . . despite the highly publicized Kentucky Derby and Santa Anita Handicap crowds, the 52,662 who paid their way into the Narragansett track on a day in 1936 is still the record throng of cash customers at an American track . . . But England's Epsom Derby has, on occasion, drawn more than 400,000 fans . . . and a cornhusking contest in Iowa drew 110,000 spectators, all standees ! ! ! Catholic University's attempt to rid college boxing in Washington from commission control was not bolstered by the indorsement of the V. M. I. boxing coach . . . inasmuch as a V. M. I. boy died following a bout two years ago, investigation revealing that he was not asked to submit to a medical examination, as the District Commission requires.

Joe DiMaggio's sudden leap into the big salary class may be a prime reason for Lou Gehrig's demands for a $40,000 wage . . . Gehrig reached the big money class the hard way, after several years of moderate salaries, but DiMaggio in his third season has already been offered $25,000 . . . Howard Maple, who couldn't make the grade himself in a trial with the Nats several years ago, is the chap who recommended Bill Beard, Oregon University catcher, to the Washington club . . . any young catcher with the Nats will never be able to complain of lack of opportunity . . . the second and third-string catching jobs are as wide open as the Sylvan Theater . . . Johnny Salb, accompanist of Arthur Godfrey on his network radio program, is a former star of the Martinsburg club of the Blue Ridge League.

The largest crowd ever to see a sporting event in the United States was the 175,000 who saw the Indianapolis Speedway race in 1936 . . . the 120,000 who saw Notre Dame play Southern California at Soldiers Field is the largest football crowd . . . and the 83,000-odd who saw the Yankees play the Athletics in a Yankee Stadium double-header in 1932 constituted the record baseball crowd . . . There was great dismay in South Bend when Bill DeCorrevont, the Chicago schoolboy ace, cast his lot with Northwestern University . . . Notre Dame believed it had DeCorrevont signed, sealed and ready for delivery to Coach Elmer Layden.

Paul Runyan ascribes much of the smoothness of his famed golf swing to his tailor-made underwear . . . he is the best rhumbist among the pro golf brigade . . . Bobby Jones is currently fighting Uncle Sam in an income tax case . . . involving the moneys he received from Hollywood studios for his two series of golf shorts . . . the first series netted him $50,000 and the second $53,000 . . . The better-grade golf balls are actually "needled" and "hopped up" . . . needles with infinitesmal points puncture the balls after they are manufactured and through them is pumped a fluid that fills the vacuum which manufacturers have never been able to avoid.

Clark Griffith's recent praise for Al Simmons, whom he declared had more hustle than any other Washington player last season, indicates that the pair are not far apart on 1938 contract terms . . . but Wes Ferrell's continued silence presages a drawn-out salary battle with Griffith . . . Outfielder Mel Almada, who broke into organized baseball at the age of 18, went to the Los Angeles training camp as a pitcher, was converted into a second baseman and ended up by winning an outfield job, all within the period of a month . . . Those who contend that Babe Ruth was a greater ball player than Ty Cobb couldn't have looked at the records . . . only in home runs did Ruth excel Cobb . . . Cobb actually averaged more extra-base hits per season than Ruth.

There are runners on first and second, with two out . . . the batter hits a single, scoring the runner on second and sending the man on first to third . . . the man who ran from first to third did not touch second and is tagged out while standing on third base . . . did the run that scored count? . . . and the answer is "yes" in the American League, "no" in the National League . . . because the American League does not regard a runner who failed to touch a base as out until he has been tagged out . . . but the National regards him as out when he fails to touch a base and heads for another.

Explorers To Launch Ring Season

Bouts Are Scheduled at 8:15 P. M. at Turner's; Will Offer Stars.

Columbus University's boxing team inaugurates its 1938 season tonight against powerful DeSales College, of Toledo, Ohio, at Turner's arena. The action starts at 8:15 o'clock.

Boasting a lineup featuring new and interesting faces and defending a four-year undefeated record, the Explorers tonight are expected to show before the largest crowd ever to grace an opening night match involving that school.

Almost as intriguing as the bouts themselves will be a colorful tuxedoed background provided by an enthusiastic student body, and ushers in full dress. Enlivening the pre-battle and intermission periods will be a special program of entertainment provided by Dean John S. Fitzpatrick, of Columbia.

Explorers Face Test.

Columbus University's four-year undefeated record will be tested tonight. Whereas the Explorers have lost many regulars from last year and are starting no fewer than five newcomers, DeSales will be represented by an eight-man pick from a squad of 22 available, several Toledo Golden Gloves aces being included in tonight's starting order.

The invaders are featuring in Cuck Coehrs, 115-pound acc, a recently crowned Toledo Golden Glove champion, and in Jack Yates, 135 pounds; Dick Rosenfelder, 145 pounds, and Bud Brazzil, 205 pound heavyweight, sensational runners-up.

Willis Meets Yates.

In the 135-pound class Jim Willis, a knockout sensation at 126 pounds a year ago, brings his terrific right-hand punch into play against Jack Yates, 135-pound DeSales star. Yates was voted outstanding in the recent DeSales tournament despite the fact that he was forced to default in the championship final, due to injury.

The pairings:

126 pounds—Ray Morse (Columbus) vs. Walter Conklin (De Sales).
155 pounds—Bill Crum (Columbus) vs. George Graff (De Sales).

Three Basketball Games Set for Cup League

Regal Clothiers, with five victories to their credit, will attempt to cling to their lead in the Heurich Cup League tonight, meeting Little Tavern at 7:30 at the Heurich gym.

Bureau of Investigation, entrenched in second place, meets Senate at 8:30 and Delaware and Hudson takes on Fort Myer at 9:30.

Chambers Organizes.

Terp Boxers Meet W. Maryland With Most of Stars on Bench

By Bob Garrison.

Maryland University's boxing team added injury to its list of plights as it prepared to face Western Maryland's mittmen tonight with a team composed of four substitutes who never have weathered a varsity bout.

Rated at full strength no more than an even choice of defeating the Green Terror team in the feature of All-University Night which also includes a basketball game between the Terp five and William and Mary, the boxing team's roster was rearranged at an eleventh hour last night by Coach Heine Miller, following several hours of workouts.

Miller was aware at the conclusion of last week's bouts with Virginia that he would not be able to use George (Red) Dorr, his 115-pounder, or Bob Bradley, his 125-pound entry, both of whom were injured in their bouts. But it was not until Wednesday that he learned that he would also have to substitute for Nathan Askin in the 135-pound class and Dick Johnson, in the 155-pound division.

Marty Rocklin, Dick Lee, Jose Peralta and George Acree are Miller's choices to fill the vacancies, although all four will be seeing action in an interschool match for the first time.

Rocklin, who will sub for Dorr, is the mite that Miller found serving sodas in the campus drug store and is a junior. He is game, aggressive and a good puncher. Dick Lee, tall featherweight, will fight in Bradley's place, while Askin's shoes will be filled by Jose Peralta, the blond Cuban, and Johnson's by George Acree, a newcomer to the squad. Askin and Johnson suffer from colds.

The Terp basketball team will be seeking to register its fourth straight Southern Conference battle at the expense of V. P. I., which already has dropped one decision to the College Parkers this year. A victory tonight, following last night's triumph over William and Mary, will virtually clinch an invitation to the eight-team tourney at Raleigh next month.

This will mark the next to last twin-bill on the Old Liners' schedule. A show is listed in between the basketball and boxing clashes. Basketball is set for 7:30 p. m.

155-pound—George Acree or Dick Johnson (Maryland) vs. Elwood Andrews.

Georgetown Cagers Meet Tartan Quintet.

Georgetown University's Hoya basketball team looks to its battle with Carnegie Tech at Pittsburgh tonight as a possible means of getting a winning streak started that will carry them back into the fight for the Eastern Conference lead.

Victorious over West Virginia U. in its last loop game, Georgetown will be meeting its third straight conference foe with games scheduled with four more in the next two weeks.

Following tonight's game with the Tartans, the Hoyas will meet, in turn, West Virginia, Pittsburgh, Tech again, and Temple. The outcome of those games hold the fate of the local club insofar as the Conference race is concerned.

Ross Sought To Show Here

Frankie Blair, second-ranking welterweight, is being considered as an opponent for Monday's winner, and if one of the three shows enough box-office appeal he will get the crack at Ross' profile.

There may be a hitch in plans, of course, but Ross is scheduled to make an appearance here next summer, and it would help boost the receipts to have a man fight him whom the fans know and like. The matchmaker believes any one of the three will fill the bill, but wants to get the best.

Turiello and Lucas, incidentally, were sought for a bout in Baltimore, inasmuch as both whipped Cocoa Kid in a Monumental City ring and would draw well there. Sylvan Bass, Baltimore matchmaker, is reported to have offered Promoter Joe Turner $500 to release the pair from their contract with him so he could put them on over there Thursday.

Al Weil, acting for Madison Square Garden, tried to get Turiello and Lucas for a bout in the Garden, but the Italian couldn't squirm out of the local contract. Turiello is scheduled to arrive here tomorrow to complete training for the fight, and will have a public workout at the Arena.—ATCHISON.

Boys Club Ring Team Tops Colmar Manor, 5-3

Scoring heavily in the middleweight classes, the Washington Boys Club boxing team won a 5-3 decision over Colmar Manor Boys Club last night in the victors' ring. A capacity audience of several hundred fans witnessed the show.

60 pounds—Maske (C. M.) defeated Papafotis.
80 pounds—Fowler (C. M.) defeated Richardson.
90 pounds—Scazzs (W.) defeated Taylor.
112 pounds—Maddon (W.) defeated W. Maska.
126 pounds—DeLisi (W.) defeated Taylor.
126 pounds—Berman (W.) defeated Brown.
136 pounds—Taylor (C. M.) defeated Morningstar.
145 pounds—Hayes (W.) defeated Robinson.

Dempsey

Dempsey gave out the stock answers to stock questions, but his mind is more on business than on boxing. He is going to Florida to address a liquor salesmen's meeting. He has an interest in a brewery, in addition to his restaurant enterprises, and is up to his thick neck in work. Max Waxman and a Mr. Bernstein accompanied him.

But before the interview opened Herr Golden had squeezed through the door, pulled Abrams in after, and was busy posing with the former champion. Soon the train moved out of the tunnel and was ready to depart, so the press conference broke up rather hurriedly. But a reporter remembered that Dempsey was supposed to break a big news story.

"Hey, Jack," he yelled. "What about that big story Goldie said you had?"

"Wot story," he asked, mildly amazed.

Back in the concourse a hot and somewhat dejected little group began to disband. Herr Golden, highly pleased with himself, adjusted his tie (a bargain at 98 cents) and his hat (a bigger bargain at $2.98) and with a sigh of satisfaction murmured.

Eastern Five To Play Tech

Lincoln Park Team Eyes Interhigh Crown.

By Jack Munhall.

Eastern, its vision of a city championship blurred by an early season defeat by Bethesda and then completely clouded by an unexpected loss to St. John's Friday, tonight returns to the pursuit of its last possible local honor—the interhigh basketball title.

The Lincoln Park team meets Tech in the opening game of a doubleheader at Tech gym and, with a victory, can again seize sole possession of the lead now shared with Western. This game precedes an encounter bringing together Roosevelt and Central.

The Riders, bolstered by Jack Smith and Hymie Perlo, two newcomers of more than average ability, have displayed marked improvement of late and still cherish hopes of creating a triple tie for the crown. Despite a crying need for a better defense, the Upshur street lads foresee a playoff between Eastern, Western and themselves. This, they would accomplish by whipping Western which in turn, they figure, will upset Eastern February 23.

Eastern, with the two leading series scorers, Clint Quantrille and Lee Lusby, in its line-up, however, must be installed the favorite. This pair, aided by Russ Lombardy, Ralph Matera and "Soup" Hancock has smashed through their public school rivals without a setback. The only mar on Eastern's record was a forfeit defeat to Roosevelt for use of an ineligible player, who contributed not 1 point to a 44-19 score.

Tech, oddly confident of bowling over its favored foe, probably will start Moe Tannebaum and Charley Kendall at forwards; Vic De Leon at center, and Schulman and Eli Blank at guards.

Roosevelt's lineup is expected to be Louis West and Perlo at forwards; Smith, at center, and George Zuras and Billy Robertson, the lad who scored 15 points against Eastern, at guards. Central, in search of its first victory in seven games, will employ Ken Sokol and Milt Genderson at forwards; Dick Farr at center, and Archie Panago and Harry Martin at guards, John Faning, who has been sick, may be ready to resume his place in the lineup. If so, he will replace Henderson.

Attractive School Games on Card.

Western, co-leader in the public school series, plays host to Gonzaga; St. John's invades Anacostia; Woodward meets Friends on the latter's floor; Bethesda Chevy-Chase plays Montgomery-Blair at Bethesda and George Washington High engages Hopewell in Alexandria.

Besides the Bethesda-Montgomery game which starts at 8:30 o'clock all of the above contests are listed for 3:30.

Columbus Head Hits Randolph College Boxing Control Bill

Dr. Fitzpatrick Would Adopt 'Local Option' in Case Legislation Is Pushed Through.

First opposition to the Jennings Randolph bill which would divorce college boxing in the District from control of the local commission was voiced last night by Dr. John R. Fitzpatrick, president of Columbus University, one of the two schools in the city that would be affected by the pending measure.

Stating in a letter to Maj. Ernest Brown, chairman of the District Boxing Commission, that Columbus University will oppose the bill as it now stands, Fitzpatrick placed his school on the other side of the issue from Catholic University which has already declared as an indorser of the motion.

Hearings on the bill are due to be held the first of next week and the letter came as a result of several "feeler" letters being circulated by the commission in an attempt to sound out the city on sentiment towards the measure. Previously, Arthur "Dutch" Bergman, athletic director of Catholic University, had publically stated that the Brookland school would support the bill.

Fitzpatrick, however, made clear the point that he did not intend to fight the issue with Catholic University and even suggested an amendment to the bill that would permit commission control on an optional basis.

He said:

"Before definitely expressing my views on the subject I wish to state that I do not, for one moment, desire to place myself in the position of objecting to any program which may be sponsored or favored by any other local university. I ask, therefore, that the views which follow be accepted as reflecting my opinion only as the situation may affect the institution which I happen to represent."

On the question of financial conditions of the school in connection with commission supervision of intercollegiate bouts, he said:

"Under my supervision, Columbus University conducted boxing matches during the period when it was illegal to charge admission to boxing meets. During this period we carried the sport at a dead loss, merely because of the fact that we were interested in this particular activity. As you know, we did not have supervision by any local officials at that time. Since the passage of the legislation (in which I have the temerity to think I played at least a small part) we have continued to sponsor intercollegiate boxing under the supervision of the commission. Therefore, it will be seen that I have had personal experience of conducting matches with and without supervision.

Based entirely on the experience which I have indicated above, I say very frankly that I favor supervision such as has been exercised by the Boxing Commission of the District of Columbia. I would, indeed, regret any legislation which would deprive Columbus University of the benefits which have accrued to it by virtue of the jurisdiction of the Boxing Commission over intercollegiate boxing. More than that, I am most definitely opposed to any action which would deprive us of those benefits."

One Preliminay Set For Sunday Pro Tilt

Delaware & Hudson and Little Tavern will meet in one of the preliminary games to the professional basketball game between the Newark Pros and Heurich Brewers Sunday afternoon at the Heurich gym.

The D. & H.-Little Tavern game will start at 2 o'clock, while the Newark-Heurich game has been set for 3 o'clock. Manager Bob McDonald is arranging for a third contest at 3 o'clock. The Heurich-Newark pros are clashing in the "rubber" game of their series.

Congdon 73 Leads Field In Golf Open

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Feb. 10.—Charles Congdon clubbed a rain-soaked course for a 73 today to post a 36-hole total of 148 and lead the qualifying field in the $5,000 San Francisco Match Play Open golf tournament.

The slender young professional from Tacoma, Wash., went out in 36 and was home in 37.

Congdon needed only a putting touch to have turned in a sub-par round. He took three putts on the second, ninth, twelfth and fifteenth greens, all from within 15 feet or less from the cup.

The low 32 qualified for tomorrow morning's first round of match play. Among the "big name" boys who failed to stay in the running was Horton Smith, old-time favorite from Chicago. Smith's 75 today coupled with his first round 86 brought him a total 161.

Although Thomson failed to finish he won the long driving contest, an exhibition event, with 229 yards 1 inch. Byron Nelson, of Reading Pa., was second with a longest drive of 221 yards 8 inches. Sam Snead, of West Virginia, finished far down the list with 207 yards 1 foot 1 inch.

Harold McSpaden, of Winchester, Mass., finished third among the qualifiers with a 151, sooting a 73 today. John Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., was fourth with a 153 total.

Tied at 154 were E. J. Harrison, of Little Rock, Ark.; Craig Wood, of Rumson, N. J.; Romie Espinosa, San Francisco; John Perelli, of Tahoe, Calif., and Jimmy Demaret, of Houston, Tex.

Trust Assets Shrink 38.6% In Past Year

Rail and Motor Shares Sold, Mining and Farm Stocks Bought.

New York, Feb. 10.—Net assets of representative investment trusts at the 1937 year-end were lower than a year earlier by about the same percentage as the 90-stock price index of the Standard Statistics Co., which dropped from 136.4 to 83.7, or 38.6 per cent, during the year.

Considerable diversity was evident in the records of the individual companies, depending partly on whether they converted common stock holdings into cash early or late in the year and partly on the ratios of common stocks to bonds and cash in the portfolios at the beginning of the year.

The following table gives the 1937 decreases in net assets of various investment companies, adjusted for capital changes and common dividends paid:

	Per Cent Decrease
National Bond & Share	16.0
Insuranshares Certif	24.3
Lehman Corp	28.1
Prudential Investors	30.4
General Public Service	31.6
General American Investors	32.0
Niagara Share Corp.	33.1
Chicago Corp.	35.3
American European	37.1
Adams Express Co.	36.3
Capital Administration	39.5
American International	40.0
Blue Ridge	42.3
Carriers & General	42.5
U. S. & Foreign Securities	43.5
Selected Industries	46.0
American General	46.3
Tri-Continental Corp.	47.4
Equity Corp.	49.1

The average investment company is at present as much as ever committed to a speculative policy. Investments in bonds are generally small and in many cases negligible. Based on the proportion of funds invested at the end of 1937, the oil and metal stocks, respectively, were most popular, and the bulk of investment company funds continues to be in the so-called "inflation" stocks.

Railroad and automobile stocks were most heavily liquidated during last year, and agricultural equipment and mining shares were most generally purchased. Policies of individual companies, of course, differed widely. Most of the companies analyzed sold stocks in the final quarter of 1937 and began 1938 with the largest cash positions in several years.

Baltimore Makes Gain As Foreign Trade Port

Baltimore, next to New York, made the biggest gain in foreign trade among major ports last year, the Commerce Department said yesterday.

New York, which handles nearly eight times as much foreign trade as its nearest competitor, increased its volume about $650,000,000 to $2,713,000,000 in 1937. This was more than a third of all United States merchandise exports and imports.

Baltimore, which advanced from eleventh to ninth place, increased its share $89,000,000 to $205,000,000.

Considering both exports and imports, the ranking of ports last year was, in order: New York, New Orleans, Galveston, Philadelphia, Detroit, Boston, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Baltimore and Buffalo.

Steamboat Co. Elects Board

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Norfolk & Washington, D. C., Steamboat Co., held yesterday, the following directors were elected: Edgar N. Brawner, Whisley Brown, G. W. Forsberg, William D. Hoover, C. F. Norment, jr., J. Allen Riordan, George P. Sacks, Odell S. Smith and Corcoran Thom.

At a subsequent meeting the directors elected the following officers: C. F. Norment, jr., president; G. W. Forsberg, vice president; Odell S. Smith, secretary-treasurer, and J. Allen Riordan, general manager.

The following members of the staff were continued in office: W. H. Callahan, traffic manager; I. S. Walker, general passenger agent; J. A. Maxwell, auditor; G. E. Herring, purchasing agent; D. Sawyer, superintending engineer; C. H. Ray, general agent, Washington; P. G. Minter, general agent, Norfolk; H. N. Larcombe, agent, Alexandria; C. S. Revell, joint agent, Old Point Comfort.

National Savings Club.

The National Savings Club, a personnel unit of the National Savings & Trust Co., has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Richard L. Johnson, president; Avlynne Heim, first vice president; Douglas Smith, second vice president; Ruby Brooking, secretary; Louise Tew, assistant secretary; Gorge Pollock, treasurer, and Frances Coleman, Margaret Nau, Teddy Post and Olga Gannon, assistant treasurers.

The newly elected president has announced an interesting program for the 1938-1939 season. A forum committee has been appointed and arrangements are now being made to present a series of lectures by well known speakers. The first lecture will be given this afternoon in the lobby of the bank and the speaker will be Marvin H. Helter, of the Department of Justice.

Wheat Drops As Overseas Sales Decline

By the Associated Press.

Disappointing current export trade in United States wheat, together with predictions that Europe would buy only moderate quantities from this country the remainder of the season, did much to pull Chicago prices down. One leading authority asserted that the United States was the sole nation which possessed an important surplus of wheat not likely to disappear within the year.

A few loads of Canadian wheat and a few loads of United States hard winter were all that was purchased from North America today for shipment to Europe.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ¾ to 1 cent under yesterday's finish, May 95@95⅛, July 91@81⅛; corn unchanged to ⅛ up, May 59⅞@60, July 60⅜; oats unchanged to ⅛ off; rye showing ½ to ⅞ drop, and provisions varying from 7 cents setback to 10 cents advance.

Stocks Close Higher in Slow Trading With Rails and Metals Active; Bonds Higher.

New York, Feb. 10.—Stocks advanced in trading volume of around 650,000 shares and most sections of the bond market improved. Dollars were weak against sterling and francs. Commodities were steady. May wheat closed ⅜ of a cent lower at 95⅛ cents a bushel.

Stocks began a little better than they closed yesterday and after some further improvement the old hesitancy reappeared. By noon and thereafter for an hour or so trading dragged along with slow and narrow movements and easier tone, but prices creeped up at the close. Metal shares held rather stubbornly to their advanced positions, but the steels gave up a point or so. At their best some of the mining shares, notably Howe Sound, were 3 points higher, and farm implements were buoyant. Case rose about 4 points and Harvester rallied from 2 to 3 points.

Mail order shares hardened and the chemicals enjoyed the trading at higher prices. An especially good section of the market was the electric manufacturing issues. Rails gave a good account of their position and the equipments strengthened in sympathy. Great Northern was especially popular. Rubber stocks improved. Airplanes were buoyant. Railroad bonds joined with stocks in rising to anticipate higher freight rates expected this month.

Return of Spending.

If, as some observers have maintained, the reduction in the Government's outlay of money for relief and other purposes last year, or more particularly the change in mode of securing funds (using social security taxes in lieu of bank borrowing), was a factor in promoting the business recession last year, the return to the old wasteful ways ought to help things this year. That has been evident for some time and practical effect to the matter was given today by the message of President Roosevelt asking Congress for a deficiency appropriation of a quarter of a billion. The new funds are to take care of the 3,000,000 thrown out of work in the past three months, the President says, and it goes without saying that further and larger appropriations for relief and all round spending will be made.

Eventually the return of the Government to spending and pump priming—the classical way for an inflationist political organization to cure the evils which the very policy encourages—will have an effect upon prices and the markets. It may require some time yet for the inflationary spirit to overcome the deflationary effects of lower employment, lack of confidence in business stability, uneasiness over the Government's attitude toward business in general, and the prospect for higher taxes.

No Wage Guaranty.

On the industrial landscape the chilly covering of the steel price reductions announced yesterday and the agreement of the United States Steel Corporation with the C. I. O. still had a rather depressing influence on sections of the market. Few people were inclined to pay too much attention to the idea that independent steel companies, in taking the lead on price cuts, were endeavoring to embarrass the Steel Corporation for dealing with Mr. Lewis. Whatever Mr. Lewis may say for publication with regard to the lack of relationship between steel prices and steel wages, and whatever his subordinates may say to indicate that the agreement with United States Steel means a year's extension of the present wage scale, it is well understood here that the labor leaders entertain no such unrealistic ideas.

Worthless.

For years this column has urged the Stock Exchange to determine upon a policy for listing stocks that would preclude the admission of doubtful issues and that would remove from the list stocks which, regardless of what once they may have been worth, had fallen upon evil times. For years the authorities protested that they never could do anything like that, for suits might be brought if stocks were removed and, above all, the interests of present stockholders had to be protected, no matter what happened to the interests of prospective stockholders. In other words the old policy worked to the advantage of the holder of a bad security who wished to use the Stock Exchange facilities to unload on the supposedly innocent buyer.

Blemish.

In a few instances the old rule was breached sufficiently to remove stocks when, on information supplied by the officials of the companies concerned, the stocks had lost all value. Now, it appears, the Stock Exchange has decided to go bravely to work and clean up its list. Much credit should be given them for the decision, but formation of any new policy, it can be assumed, involves initial inconsistencies. Time will be required. For instance, the Stock Exchange has asked SEC for permission to remove from its list issues of Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic, National Railways of Mexico preferreds, and Fairbanks Co. The latter in particular has been suggested numerous times for removal. The good taste left by action on those three issues unfortunately is spoiled by the simultaneous decision to admit two new issues—Elk Horn Coal and Manati Sugar—which have a poor earnings record.

Merger.

Regardless of the merits of the controversy between Messrs. Kurn and Brown on the Frisco and Rock Island stock operations and merger negotiations, one point is brought out that needs careful study. That is the suggestion of desire of high railroad officials to hold to their jobs. That is a natural desire, but unquestionably it might act to prevent a merger of two or more roads which would result in one president in a place that had supported two or more. The prime object of a railroad merger, so far as the public interest is concerned, is co-ordination of service and elimination of duplicate jobs. A great drawback to mergers always has been considered to be the reluctance of railroad labor to agree to them, for fear that the number of employes would be reduced. Railroad presidents probably are not immune to that fear, but that should not be allowed to stand in the way of a merger that ought to be carried out for reasons of greater operating economy and better public service.

Railroad Fares.

An indication of what the increase in fares from 2 cents to 2½ cents a mile on coaches will mean for the Eastern railroads can be found in December passenger figures for the Southern roads. Coach fares were raised from 1½ cents to 2 cents a mile and 15 to 18-day round trip rates moved up from 2 to 2½ cents about November 15, on Southern roads. On one coastwise line the number of passengers decreased 14½ per cent in December, compared with 1936, yet passenger revenue for the month was only 1½ per cent below the corresponding month in 1936.

Federal Home Liens Here Are $18,654,030

By Thomas M. Cahill.

In a little more than three years' operation the Federal Housing Administration has accepted for insurance 3,019 home mortgages, totaling $18,654,030, through its District of Columbia office, which includes the District, nearby Virginia and Maryland, it is announced by Stewart McDonald, administrator.

Of these 2,595 have become premium-paying mortgages, totaling $16,209,190 and representing approximately 88 per cent of the total mortgages accepted for insurance, as of January 31, 1938. All of this is private capital, furnished by banks, building and loan associations, insurance companies and other financial institutions.

Included in the $18,654,030 in mortgages accepted for insurance under provisions of the national housing act are mortgages totaling $8,765,000 on eight rental housing projects in the District of Columbia insuring office territory, the capital for which was all furnished by insurance companies.

Credit Conference.

At the concluding session of the Columbia Regional Conference of Credit Bureau Executives meeting at the Mayflower Hotel this week, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, George R. Parsons, Fairmont, W. Va.; vice president, N. D. Bartle, Syracuse, N. Y.; secretary-treasurer, William Bush, Greensburg, Pa. The following were elected directors: John K. Althaus, Washington, D. C.; A. B. Buckeridge, New York City; Frank Cline, Salisbury, Md.; C. Guy Ferguson, Pittsburgh, Pa.; D. H. Penn, Danville, Va., and Paul Echeverria, Morristown, N. J.

The closing meeting was featured by an address by Dr. N. H. Engle of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce on the subject "Activity in Connection With Shortening of Credit Terms." The speaker at the luncheon was Frank T. Caldwell, of St. Louis, secretary and general manager of the Associated Credit Bureaus of America.

At the banquet, which was arranged in conjunction with the Associated Retail Credit Men of Washington, under whose auspices the conference was held, Mark Lansburgh and Dewey Zirkin acted as toastmasters. The speaker was Constantine Brown, foreign news commentator, who talked on "The International Situation."

A. I. B. Dinner.

Plans for the thirty-third annual banquet of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, to be held at the Willard Hotel, February 19, are progressing rapidly, according to announcement of Robert H. Lacey, general chairman. Fifteen hundred specially prepared invitations have been sent to local bankers and the responses definitely indicate a capacity attendance which will include many Government officials. It is reported that arrangements are practically concluded for bringing to Washington two prominent speakers who will represent the national organization of the institute and the American Bankers Association.

The entertainment committee, under the chairmanship of Frank M. Perley, trust investment officer, American Security & Trust Co., has selected the Meyer Davis orchestra, to provide music. This committee is also arranging for several outstanding entertainers to appear during the evening and Harry M. Taylor, Philadelphia, will again be master of ceremonies. The theme adopted for the occasion will be suggestive of a gypsy festival with the color combinations of red and yellow predominating in the decorative scheme.

Mackubin, Legg & Co.

Mackubin, Legg & Co. announced yesterday that Hornblower & Weeks will act as the firm's correspondent in New York in place of Frazier Jelke & Co., who have discontinued their wire connection with out-of-town correspondents.

Hornblower & Weeks, one of the old and prominent members of the New York Stock and other exchanges, whose main office is in Boston, maintains branch offices in Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, New York, Philadelphia, Providence and Portland, Me., and, as a result of the arrangement with the local firm, will extend their wire system to Washington and Baltimore in addition to the system now reaching correspondents in Buffalo, Hartford, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Toledo and Youngstown.

Banking Notes.

More than 125 members and guests were in attendance at the annual dinner of the Bond Club of Washington last night at the Mayflower Hotel. Forty banking institutions were represented in the guest list which included President Thomas J. Groom, and Vice President Ord Preston, of the District of Columbia Bankers Association. Strickland Gillilan, noted humorist, was the guest speaker.

Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, and former president of the American Bankers Association, will be the guest speaker representing the Business Advisory Council on the Department of Commerce program, "Stories of American Industry," which will be broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System tomorrow from 5 to 5:30 p. m. Eastern Standard time. His subject will be "Banking in America."

Excess Reserve Up 20 Million

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that bank reserves declined, but their lendable excess reserves increased in the week ended February 9.

Excess reserves went up $20,000,000, to $1,410,000,000. Total reserves dropped $44,000,000 to $7,205,000,000, largely because of increases of deposits of nonmember banks and the Treasury with the Federal Reserve. In effect, these deposits were transfers of funds from commercial banks to the Federal Reserve. A $17,000,000 decrease in money in circulation was insufficient to offset these influences.

Continuing a recent trend of switching from long to short term Government securities without changing total holdings, the 12 Federal Reserve banks last week sold $8,000,000 of Treasury bonds and $2,000,000 of Treasury notes and bought $10,000,000 of Treasury bills.

Big Board Weighs Membership Cut

New York, Feb. 10 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange announced today it would consider the feasibility of reducing the number of its memberships. Currently there are 1,375 members of the organization.

Study of the proposal will be made by a special committee of three, named by Charles R. Gay, president. They are Otto Abraham, Benjamin H. Brinton and R. Lawrence Oakley, all members. Brinton is treasurer of the exchange and Oakley a governor.

The proposal marks the first definite response by the exchange to a suggestion made recently by William O. Douglas, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, that the exchange possibly had "too many mouths to feed."

Cotton Yields To Profit-Taking

New York, Feb. 10 (AP).—Cotton turned easier today under increased liquidation and realizing. May reacted from 8.81 to 8.74 and closed at 8.79, with final prices 8 to 12 points net lower.

Eastern foreign markets accounted for opening losses of 6 to 9 points. Nervousness over action on the farm bill was attributed to reports of opposition developing in the upper house.

Bank Clearings Drop to Lowest For Four Years

Total for Week Ended Feb. 9 Is 23.1 Per Cent Below Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 10.—Dropping to the lowest for any full week in over four years, bank clearings volume for the latest period slid abruptly under the corresponding 1937 total for the thirteenth consecutive time.

The aggregate for 22 leading cities of the United States for the week ended Wednesday, February 9, as compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was only $4,322,816,000, as compared with $5,620,866,000 for the like 1937 week, or a decrease of 23.1 per cent. The similar comparison for the week preceding revealed a loss of 26.5 per cent.

New York clearings sank to $2,615,364,000 from $3,705,188,000 a year ago, a difference of 29.4 per cent. The turnover at outside cities amounted to $1,707,452,000, against $1,915,678,000 last year, or a decline of 10.9 per cent.

Clearings for the latest week fell $712,340,000 from the total for the week preceding. Between the two similar weeks of 1937 there was a loss of $1,230,069,000.

Justice Orders Commitment of McLean Studied

Incarceration in Maryland Hospital for Insane Criticized.

Justice Jennings Bailey, in the District Court, yesterday authorized an investigation into the commitment of Edward B. McLean to a Maryland institution for the insane five years ago. He designated Austin F. Canfield to conduct it.

Canfield, a member of the District bar, recently was appointed guardian ad litem for McLean after creditors of McLean had sought to intervene in hearings by the auditor of the District Court.

Reporting yesterday on the results of a preliminary investigation, Canfield told Justice Bailey McLean's commitment to the Sheppard and Enoch Pratt Hospital was "irregular and without due regard to the rights of the lunatic in his person or estate."

Canfield insisted McLean never lived in Maryland, had no property there and that consequently the Maryland courts had no jurisdiction to pronounce him of unsound mind.

Shortly after McLean had been committed, the Maryland courts appointed Admiral Mark Bristol, U. S. N., retired, as his committee. This appointment later was confirmed by the District Court.

Neil Burkinshaw, attorney for Bristol, said yesterday that he welcomed a full investigation of the facts surrounding the incarceration of McLean. He said McLean had volunteered to go to Baltimore for an examination because of the presence there of his family physicians, and that Mrs. McLean had signed the petition for his commitment. The same questions presented to Justice Bailey yesterday, Burkinshaw said, had been raised in District Court five years ago.

Canfield, in his preliminary report, said he did not question the good faith of those responsible for committing McLean, and he does not question the fact that he was in the need of medical care.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 10.—Trading was restricted in the stock market and price changes were narrow today, due to the settlement of accounts coupled with the overnight reaction in Wall street. Home rails remained quiet awaiting further dividend announcements and the industrial groups were somewhat easier, especially tobaccos and rayons. Transatlantic securities finished fractionally down and oils and base metals were reactionary.

Paris—Industrial stocks were firm in an otherwise mixed session in the bourse. Rentes closed unchanged to 20 centimes down and Bank of France issue lost 135 francs. Suez Canal reacted 60 francs from Wednesday's close and Royal Dutch remained unchanged.

Liverpool—Early steadiness in cotton futures was followed by a moderate reaction due to hedging, profit taking and Bombay realising. Prices were off 4 to 5 points at the finish. Wheat futures declined ¼d to ¾d on increased Russian offerings and larger Argentine weekly exports.

Bridges Faces Hearing Soon On Deportation

Labor Department Will Proceed Against Sailors' Fiery Leader.

By Edward T. Folliard

Harry Bridges, fiery leader of West Coast longshoremen and a vice president of the Committee for Industrial Organization, soon will face a hearing on charges that he is a dangerous alien and deportable, Gerard Reilly, solicitor of the Labor Department, said at the Capitol yesterday.

Reilly had just emerged from an executive session of the Senate Commerce and Labor committees, to which he had turned over data missing from a Bridges file submitted last week by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

This data consisted of a written recommendation, made by a Seattle immigration official last fall, that a warrant for Bridges' arrest be issued and four affidavits against Bridges sworn out by Communists and others.

Former Representative Vito Marcantonio, president of the International Labor Defense, charged that the Senate Commerce Committee was trying to conduct "a witch-hunt at sea," and called on labor not to "let him (Chairman Copeland) get away with it."

Bridges telegram from San Francisco "daring" Chairman Copeland to invite him to testify was answered yesterday as follows:

"Committee on Commerce decided this morning by unanimous vote to wait for results of Labor Department investigation on matter of your deportation before deciding to hear you."

Senator Copeland said that a hearing would be accorded Joseph Curran, head of the National Maritime Union, C. I. O., so that he could refute charges that he was a Communist. The distinction in the two cases, as explained by Copeland, is that Curran is an American.

Bridges, though in this country since 1920, has never become a citizen. Twice he allowed his first papers to lapse. Now that he is prepared to apply for final papers, he faces the possibility of being banished to his native Australia.

Senator Copeland said yesterday that the Commerce Committee hoped to renew its inquiry into other phases of the maritime situation.

"We can't keep up this investigation of communism and subversive activities," he said. "It's too big a job for us. We could stay on it all summer."

He expressed confidence that the Senate would approve his resolution for the appointment of a select five-man committee to make an investigation of subversive activities at sea. The committee would be given $50,000 to hire investigators and for other expenses.

Chevy Chase—Here is a really delightful, rambling Cape Cod house with all the quaint charm of its antecedents and the joy of carefree, modern living. It enjoys a fine view over the gently rolling surrounding country yet is close enough to neighbors to be anything but isolated. There are 3 bedrooms and 2 baths on the second floor, a library with lavatory, a beautifully decorated living room and dining room, step-saving, U-shaped kitchen and a breakfast alcove on the first floor. In addition to a sunny Southern living porch there is a covered kitchen porch. A two-car attached garage and a thoughtful layout supervised by an expert complete a most liveable house and a very full value. Call Dist. 6830; Evenings, WIs. 2501.

Bob Burns Says—

The other day I was sittin' in on what they call a story conference at one of the studios and they were putting the different jokes and gags in their technical classification.

Some were oral gags; some sight gags; some situation gags; etc. I was kinda stumped because I don't believe in bein' too technical. If a thing's funny, it's jest funny and it spoils it to try to classify it.

ARE YOU ONLY A 3/4 WIFE?

Men can never understand a three-quarter wife—a wife who is lovable for three weeks of the month—but a hell-cat the fourth.

No matter how your back aches—no matter how loudly your nerves scream—don't take it out on your husband.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure.

Make a note NOW to get a bottle of Pinkham's today WITHOUT FAIL from your druggist—more than a million women have written in letters reporting benefit.
